CITY OF CHARLEVOIX COUNCIL MINUTES

September 21, 1981
8:00 P.M.

The Common Council of the City of Charlevoix met on the above date and time with Deputy Mayor Wood presiding.

Present: Councilmembers Rolloff, Wood, Muma, Block, Porter and Timms. Absent: Mayor Supernaw.

The Minutes of the September 8, 1981 Regular Meeting and the September 14, 1981 Special Meeting were approved as presented in writing and as recorded in the Council Minutes Book.

The City Attorney addressed Council regarding the conditions under which the Board of Appeals can grant a variance as set down in the City Zoning Ordinance. The Attorney also suggested that Councilmembers give their reason for granting or denying a request for a variance as part of the motion to grant or deny.

Council adjourned to the Board of Appeals.

Following the Board of Appeals meeting, roll call of the Council was again taken with all members being present.

Moved by Councilman Porter and supported by Councilwoman Roloff to accept and file the City Planning Commission Minutes dated September 14, 1981.

Motion was adopted by the following yea and nay vote.

Yeas: Councilmembers Roloff, Wood, Muma, Block, Porter, and Timms. Nays: None. Absent: None.

Drew Young, a member of the General Public present, voiced his opposition to being billed for side walk replacement in front of his property at 107 Mason without prior notification of such replacement. He stated that he in turn had billed the City for dumping snow from the City parking lot on his property for an amount equal to the sidewalk repair and suggested that both billings be honored and the matter dropped. No action was taken until Council can determine whether an effort was made to notify Mr. Young of the sidewalk replacement.

Moved by Councilman Muma and supported by Councilman Timms to hold Public Hearings on October 19, 1981 regarding the following proposed Amendments to City Ordinances:

1. Two (2) amendments to the City Zoning Ordinance regarding off street parking requirements.
2. Amendment to the City Weed Control Ordinance.
3. Amendment to the City Zoning Ordinance regarding non-conforming lots of record.

Motion was adopted by the following yea and nay vote.

Yeas: Councilmembers Roloff, Wood, Muma, Block, Porter, and Timms. Nays: None. Absent: None.

No action was taken regarding a proposed amendment to the City Zoning Ordinance regarding reducing the minimum lot within the R-1 Zone.

A proposed amendment to the City Zoning Ordinance regarding Mobile homes in the City was referred to the Committee of the Whole meeting on September 28, 1981 for further study and evaluation.

Council directed the Acting City Manager to negotiate the U.S. Coast Guard lease for dock space for 1981-82.

Moved by Councilman Wood and supported by Councilman Block to authorize repair of the City Fire Dept.'s old tanker truck.

Motion was adopted by the following yea and nay vote.

Yeas: Councilmembers Roloff, Wood, Muma, Block and Porter. Nays: Councilman Porter. Absent: None.

Councilman Porter stated that he had voted against the above motion due to the fact that he is in favor of replacing the cab and chassis of the tanker rather than repairing the vehicle as it exists.

The City Attorney reported that Police Officer Pat Martin had been certified to return to his job in a letter directed to the City Manager from Richard D. Watkins, M.D. of Petoskey.

Council had no objection to a request for a hayride to be held downtown during the City Apple Fest.

Acting City Manager Muma presented a request for a $200 per month increase in compensation for his position as City Treasurer. He also requested that he be compensated in additional vacation time for serving as Acting City Manager. Councilwoman Roloff stated that she would be in favor of additional compensation for Mr. Muma for the time he has spent as Acting Manager, but would be reluctant to approve an increase in his Treasurer's compensation as it had been past directive to grant raises to Department Heads only once a year when all other City employees received an increase. It was generally agreed to review Mr. Muma's request for an increase in his Treasurer's compensation in April when other increases are determined and to grant additional compensation either vacation time or salary for his time spent as Acting City Manager after Council determines what compensation had been approved for the last Acting Manager.

The Council having examined bills totaling $18,340.04, find them correct and recommend the bills be allowed.

Moved by Councilman Timms and supported by Councilman Porter that the bills be allowed and orders drawn for their amount.

Motion was adopted by the following yea and nay vote.

Yeas: Councilmembers Roloff, Wood, Muma, Block, Porter and Timms. Nays: None.

Hal Evans provides his own musical interludes.

Hal Evans is an expert on sixth grade

Teacher Feature

Hal Evans tells his students, with tongue in cheek, that he should know more about the 6th grade than anybody because, "I repeated 6th grade—I had so much trouble with reading."

Perhaps this fact was the motivational force behind his desire to become a reading teacher himself. A graduate of Michigan State University with a degree in elementary education and reading, Evans taught one year in Pontiac and 2 years in Capac, Mich. before joining the Middle School staff eight years ago.

His reading class is one of the few scheduled outside of the self-contained classroom. Evans handles the reading program for the entire 6th grade and remedial reading for the other grade levels. This reading program is conducted on an individualized basis with each student reading at his or her own rate. Students refer to their work as "modules" which consist of lessons and exercises done independently then discussed and corrected with Evans personally.

"It's like the one room school, where everyone reads at their own level," Evans explains. Students must successfully complete one module before moving on to the next. There are over 150 lesson plans ranging in reading ability from 2nd grade to 9th grade 9th month. Most of the material is geared to the 6th and 7th grade level.

Aide Arla Staublin assists Evans in providing individual attention and assistance when needed.

"I like teaching the 6th grade," he says of his present position. "The kids are still entbusiastic...it's possible to see a flash of brilliance."

What students see is a very personable and comfortable person who even takes the time to sing to them out of his repetorie of folk songs as they get their materials organized for the next class. By helping them to enjoy school he is also helping them to avoid the pitfalls and obstacles he faced himself in sixth grade.

GEM WISE
JEWELRY FASHIONS FACTS FICTION

THE STARS OF THE GEM SCENE
Colleen Titsworth
Manager
Gemstones like people, have unique personalities. Some are dull and listless; others are bright and exciting. Some remain in the background, others are stars. And by stars, I mean, literally, stars!
Some gem materials have an internal structure that causes a star to appear on the surface. Star ruby and star sapphire are the best known of these. They contain numerous, needle-like inclusions which intersect at specific angles. Light reflects off these inclusions in such a way that a star seems to float over the gemstone when the light source, the stone, or the beholder moves.
In order for this phenomenon to occur, however, the stone must be cut en cabochon (in a dome shape) rather then be faceted. The laws of physics are the governing factors here.
Stars also occur in a number of other gems such as quartz and garnet. Sometimes the stars are strong, sometimes not; sometimes they hobble on a weak leg or two; sometimes there's more than one star visible in a single stone! It all depends on the unique internal characteristics of the gem and the nature and power of the light source with which it is interacting.
As American Gem Society jewelers, we at Rausch Jewelry have studied the science of gemology and try to keep up on the latest trends and developments in the industry. We hope you'll come to us for guidance when a gem purchase is in your stars.

All Savers Certificate
NOW AVAILABLE
Get up to $2,000.00 Tax-Free Interest at Family Federal Savings.
These new one year certificates will allow you to exclude the interest from your State of Michigan and federal income tax—up to $2,000.00 on a joint return and $1,000.00 on an individual return. The minimum deposit required on the All-Savers Certificate is $500.00. The interest rate will be 70% of the average investment yield for 52-week U.S. Treasury Bills. The Treasury Bill rate changes every fourth Thursday, and the All-Savers Certificate rate changes on the next Monday following the fourth Thursday. This account is insured to $100,000.00 by the FSLIC.
It's what's left after taxes that counts.
An exact comparison of the tax-free interest rate on All-Savers Certificates with the rate of return on taxable investments, of course, depends upon an individual's complete income tax situation. You may wish to consult your tax advisor for this purpose. However, in general terms it can be said that an All-Savers Certificate paying 10% could have an equivalent taxable rate of as much as 20% for a taxpayer in the 50% tax bracket.
Federal regulations require a substantial interest penalty and loss of interest exclusion in the event of early withdrawal.

Boyne Valley RR rides again

by TOM DAMMANN

The Boyne Valley Railroad, the state's shortest line, will not be sold for junk after all.

It received a new lease on life just in time to announce the operation of its popular weekend color rides along the forested Boyne River Valley beginning this past weekend. The rides had been discontinued for lack of operating funds during the past two years.

Railroad officers were negotiating with the East Jordan Iron Works for the sale of its seven miles of track when two separate offers to purchase parts of the railroad were received, according to Patrick C. Cassidy, Petoskey Attorney and President of the railroad.

"We have two offers to buy separate parts of the railroad and keep it operating as a tourist attraction," Cassidy said.

"The two individuals who made the offers will be getting together to discuss a mutually satisfactory agreement to continue railroad operation. But until they work out the details, they have asked me to withhold their names," he said.

"In the meantime, they have advanced funds sufficient to run our very popular color trips between Boyne City and Boyne Falls," he concluded.

Built in 1893 the railroad was once the western segment of the Boyne City, Gaylord and Alpena railroad which had connections with all the major north - south lines and served the lucrative lumber industry until the early twenties.

In recent years all but the Boyne City-Boyne Falls line has been torn up, and right of ways sold.

Since the 1960's various groups have tried to preserve it as a tourist attraction.

The lasest of these attempts was by the group headed now by Cassidy, which bought it when it was auctioned off by Hollis Baker, erstwhile furniture tycoon of Grand Rapids.

Despite strong local support, and a successful sale of stock, the present owners found it increasingly more expensive to operate the line.

They did not do so this summer and have made many public appeals to have somebody else with more capital take it over.

There was talk of selling the equipment, the right of way and the rails. But apparently the appeals have now been answered for in the words of one of the original investors, in the present company, who request anonymity, "it looks like a perfect deal."

In any event the color train will operate on weekends through October 17 and 18, and maybe beyond if there is still color in the Boyne River Valley.

The open air cars will be hauled by a locomotive loaned for a nominal fee by the Dundee Cement Company which earlier this year purchased the old Penn Dixie Cement Co. at an auction held in New York's Federal Bankruptcy Court.

Details and schedules of the fall color trips may be obtained by telephoning the Boyne City Chamber of Commerce.

IT'S HOMECOMING WEEK at Charlevoix High School with numerous activities planned around the annual event planned by the Student Council headed by David Buday. The traditional highlight of the weekend will be the coronation of a Homecoming Queen and, for the first time, a Homecoming King to be selected by the student body from the above candidates. Left to right in front are Bill Ranger, Sally Westenbroek and Kurt Puffpaff; behind them, left to right, are David Buday, Colleen Wilhelm, Patti Cook, Mark Beaudoin, Sandy Miller, Patricia Morgan and Scott Kelly.

The 1981 royalty will receive their crowns from the 1980 queen Jill Caldwell during halftime festivities at the Gaylord-Charlevoix game Friday night. The game will be preceded by the Homecoming Parade scheduled to begin at 6:45 p.m. Friday at the Middle School. It will proceed to Kipke Field via Mason St., State St. and Garfield Ave. Floats in the parade will be decorated in a movie title theme.

Pat Stangis will be the master of ceremonies at the coronation and the dubbing of the team captains, Buday and Mike Loper. The Homecoming dance will be held at the Elementary School with music provided by the Eclipse II group. The student body is voting during the week for Homecoming King and Queen and the results will be announced at a Thursday afternoon assembly. Faculty adviser for the Student Council is Mrs. Gayle Gennett.

Fourth Friday count confirms sharp enrollment drop in Charlevoix schools

by FRAN MARTIN

The fourth Friday count of the school population shows the Charlevoix School District has lost a total of 88 students since the same date in 1980. This news was reported to the Charlevoix Board of Education by Supt. Gordon VanWieren at the board's regular meeting Monday night.

The report showed the overall census to be 1,436 as compared to 1,524 in 1980. The enrollment in the Elementary School remained the same at 544 though the class load varied in size. The Middle School, however, showed a decrease of 46 students to 238 with enrollment in the sixth and eighth grades down 46 and 39 respectively, and the seventh grade up by 39 students. The enrollment is presently 348 compared to 394 last year.

On the high school level the enrollment dropped from 586 to 544 for a loss of 42 students including 27 in the 11th grade and 16 in the 12th grade. The fourth Friday count was eight less than on the first day of school.

In other action, budget amendments were approved. This included changes in line items to meet current needs and an adjustment in state equalized valuation and the increase in income from deposits and investments. An increase in revenue in the amount of $49,140 was absorbed by an increase in expenditures according to business manager Vincent Olarch.

A request for an overnight trip to the Beaver Island Lighthouse property by Mercedes Mathers' art class was tentatively scheduled for spring rather than this fall because there is no housing at the site at this time. The trip will be made at no cost to the school.

A request by a former student, Michael Belfy, who is presently attending school at Brownsville, Texas, to graduate from Charlevoix High School in June with his class was tabled until more information is available. High school principal Vane Smith will report at the October 19 meeting of the board.

VanWieren reported on the MASA and MASB conferences he attended recently in Detroit. He advised the board that state cuts in aid to the school was forcing schools to absorb up to 35 percent more of the cost of operation.

David J. Smith, Middle School principal, advised the board that the Middle School will be holding a walk-through between 6:30 and 9:30 p.m. Monday, October 12.

This Big Brother never forgot his special protege

by ANNE KELLY

Match-making is the name of the game when it comes to love, and even Dolly Levi (of Hello, Dolly!) would be proud to have been responsible for the Big Brothers-Big Sisters match of the year award presented to Will Wiegandt Thursday, September 24 at Leutheuser's of Charlevoix.

Wiegandt, formerly of Bellaire and presently of Shephard, Mich., graciously accepted the award which had been suggested as a form of recognition for his 10 years of successful association and friendship with a recent graduate of Boyne City High School, Jeff Froats. Jeff's mother suggested that recognition be given to Wiegandt as a tribute to the match which had been made when her son was only nine years old.

Will made the Big Brother committment to Jeff at that time, to visit and become a reliable friend and counselor. Every week, Will would travel the 25-30 miles from Bellaire to Boyne City to be with Jeff and live up to that committment. He gave unselfishly of his time, helping Jeff through the often rough, often enjoyable times associated with growing up. Always Will encouraged him to strive for good grades, a healthy self image, and good citizenship. Rather than a chore, the pledge of loyalty to Jeff became a source of enjoyment, pride, and personal fulfillment which Will still treasures today.

With the United Way drive now underway in Charlevoix, this is the first of a series of articles on agencies receiving United Way funds. Last year, Big Brothers-Big Sisters received a total of $1,600 from the Charlevoix United Way.

This summer, Jeff, who is a poised and confident young man, had the opportunity of serving as the best man in Will's wedding, standing up for the man he had come to admire and emulate over the years - the man who had stood up for him so many times.

A special Big Brothers-Big Sisters meeting following the dinner presentation was held at City Hall in Charlevoix where prospective board members had been invited to learn more about the structure and purpose of the organization.

President Jim McGarry briefly outlined the technicalities of the Big Brother-Big Sisters program while Jim Marshall, presently employed as case worker for the organization, further explained the dynamics of "match-making" - the process of finding suitable matches for kids who will benefit from a quality one-on-one relationship as a deterent to crime and general lack of motivation or affection in their lives.

Referring to the beauty of the relationship illustrated by Will Wiegandt and Jeff Froats, Marshall commented that "this is really what we're all about." It is finding matches of willing persons for needing youngsters, the qualities of the former which must include compassion, consistency, companionship and the loyalty of "being there" when needed.

Special recognition was given to local businesses and patrons who have donated of their time, dollars and facilities over the years on behalf of the Big Brothers-Big Sisters Organization. Also to Bill Miller, former volunteer case worker, who worked selflessly and diligently over the years before the present Mr. Marshall continued his position.

At the present there is a waiting list of young people desperately needing Big Brothers or Big Sisters. Mr. Marshall cited that at least 20 could be placed right now in each Boyne City, East Jordan and Charlevoix. There are about 32 viable matches in existence at this time. Volunteers are especially needed in the East Jordan area.

Bob Miles wins statewide award

by PEG OHLE

Retired Charlevoix photographer Robert C. "Bob" Miles received an Award of Merit from the Historical Society of Michigan last week.

The Society, holding its annual meeting in Battle Creek, cited Miles for "giving the rights and proceeds from his book on Charlevoix to the Charlevoix Historical Society, resulting in a contribution of nearly $40,000 to develop the Society's museum."

The book, "Bob Miles' Charlevoix – a Century in Pictures" – was published in 1976 by the Charlevoix Historical Society. Two thousand copies were printed, of which approximately 300 remain to be sold. Many of the books were sold at the pre-publication price of $20, but most were sold at the regular price of $25. In addition, several thousands of dollars in life memberships have come to the Historical Society as part of the book promotion.

The 385 pictures in "Bob Miles' Charlevoix" depict the history of the city from the 1870s. They cover just about every aspect of past life in Charlevoix – schooners and ships, buildings, streets, resorts, and old settlers. Miles says he was a photography buff even as a child, taking pictures "just for the fun of it". He went to the New York Institute of Photography in 1930 and took his first commercial pictures a few years later when the old Fesenden Drug Store in Charlevoix burned down.

Miles' collection of pictures of old Charlevoix received a boost in 1957, Charlevoix' cewntennial year, when he let it be known he would copy and display in his shop window any old pictures brought to him. "The project snow-balled," he recalls. "So many contributed that I can't begin to remember who they were. Some people just tucked them in my door without leaving their names. Also, Bob and Pete Burns gave me a box of 40 or 50 glass plates they found in the old Ernest Peaslee farm on the Boyne City Road. Peaslee was one of the early photographers in the area.

In order to preserve the old pictures and not put them back into oblivion, Miles began putting them in albums and supplying explanatory captions. This is the format used in his book, the labor of love donated to the Charlevoix Historical Society.

Bob Miles has lived most of his life in Charlevoix. He was born in Lupton, a small town near Rose City, where his father owned a theater. After the theater had burned down twice, the elder Miles gave up and moved to East Jordan, where he worked in a mill and later built the Temple Theater.

Eventually the family, including nine-year-old Bob and three sisters and five brothers, moved to Charlevoix. Bob Attended school in Charlevoix until his sophomore year in high school, when he went to Muskegon and worked in the Brunswick Rubber Plant. After a while he returned to Charlevoix to operate the theater for his father and finish high school. He graduated from Charlevoix High School with the class of 1923.

Miles was a professional photographer in Charlevoix for 42 years. Long-time residents will recall that his shop was located at 409 Bridge Street, where the Harbor Barber Shop now does business. He lives in the family home on Park Avenue with his wife, Esther, and son, David. Another son, Bobby, is an accountant and lives in the Greensky Hill area.

Thanks to Bob Miles and his "long-standing love affair with the City of Charlevoix" (as expressed in the preface to his book), the Harsha House at 103 State Street is now an historical museum and work continues on further interior projects as money from book sales becomes available.

Copies of "Bob Miles' Charlevoix" are available from the Charlevoix Historical Society, Box 525, Charlevoix, Literary Newstand, Shop of the Gulls, and Central Drugs.

School choirs embark on fund raising project

The Charlevoix High School and Middle School choirs will be sponsoring a fund-raising project in the community during the coming weeks Steven Stargardt, director of the vocal groups, has announced.

Proceeds from the project will be used for the purchase of stereo and music filing equipment for use by the choirs he said.

The groups will be offering for sale cheese and sausages, crocks and crock refills. "These are the same fine products which received such excellent acceptance in the community during our 1980 sale," he continued.

Boy Scouts take fall outing

Charlevoix Boy Scout Troop 11, accompanied by Scout Master Louis Edwards and Assistant Scout Master John Houting, enjoyed a fall camp-out last weekend.

Highlight of the trip was the river boat and trolley trip to Tahquamanon Falls in Michigan's Upper Peninsula.

The group left here after school on Friday, set up camp at a small State Park near Garnet adjacent to Soo Junction. The 21 mile trip to the Falls and return was taken on Saturday. After spending a second night at the camp site, they returned home Sunday.

Parent Advisory Council starts year

by ERIC LARSON

The Charlevoix Elementary School Parent Advisory Council opened the 1981-82 school year with a reorganizational meeting on September 24.

The Council membership elected new officers for a one year term; they are: Pat Leadabrand, President; Linda Porath and Candy Smith, Assistants; Debbie Sutherland, Secretary; and Linnie Arnold, Treasurer.

October events planned include: "Parents' Night" on Tuesday, October 6, at 6:30 p.m. Teachers of each elementary grade will discuss the various classroom programs at the elementary level.

"Grandparents' Day" on Tuesday, October 13, from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. All Grandparents are encouraged to spend the day for activities and lunch with their special youngsters.

Regular P.A.C. meeting on October 15. Mrs. Mowbray will present a program on "Television Awareness" – the impact of television viewing on the young child.

A Halloween Party on Saturday, October 31, from 4 to 6 p.m. Dinner is included.

Notices for each of the above events will be sent home with elementary children within the week previous to the scheduled event.

The Parent Advisory Council boasts a variety of accomplishments since its inception. P.A.C. purchased gym bleachers with funds from the annual Spring Carnival; and most recently, the Council furnished new swing-set equipment for the lower elementary playground.

In addition, P.A.C. has implemented numerous programs and periodicals for the elementary school; the RIF reading program, cross-country ski program, parent handbook, community resource guide, room parent program, volunteer library aide program, and the Elementary Spring Carnival.

The Parent Advisory Council encourages all parents and friends of elementary education to attend the P.A.C. sponsored activities. For more information, contact Pat Leadabrand at 547-6979 or Linda Porath at 547-5579.

TWO BIKES FOR TWO SISTERS... The two Sisters are Agnes Mary and Ellen Mary of St. Mary's School. They were given the three-speed bikes by the St. Mary's Parish Club and students of the school in appreciation for "the many hours of dedicated services they have contributed to this community." Since both Sisters are from large families, neither had bicycles of their own when they were children so they are experiencing the real excitement that comes with owning their own bikes for the first time, according to one observer. The bicycles were purchased with proceeds from a bake sale.

'The Bard' to perform here

The Bard, dashingly handsome, dressed in black, has been mesmorizing audiences across the country for the past three years, in keeping with the tradition of ancient Greece. He will make a two-night stand in Charlevoix Friday October 9, and Saturday, October 10.

The Bard strides on stage roaring Homer's "Sing, O goddess, the anger of Achilles, son of Pelus, that brought countless ills upon the Achaeans." With broad gestures, the dramatic actor conveys the haughtiness of Zeus, the conniving of Athena, the nobility of Achilles.

Friday and Saturday he will bring his highlights of Homer and his rendition of the terrifying tale of Coleridge's "The Rime of the Ancient Mariner" to the Weathervane Inn.

The Bard, Frank Fowle III, who has been described by the likes of Joseph Pulitzer Jr., Editor and Publisher of the St. Louis Post Dispatch, as bringing "The ancient world to life with compelling clarity and conviction – a superb, dramatic performance," is a 35 year old lawyer convinced that modern audiences can be thrilled by ancient tales well told.

Fowle, travelling out from St. Louis, forsook judge and jury for the life of a bard three years ago. He began with performances of "The Rime of the Ancient Mariner" which he had memorized in a drama class taken while in law school.

Since then, he has literally stolen the spotlight from rock bands in bars, brought Eastern college audiences to their feet, and transfixed audiences of all ages in pubs, coffeehouses, nightclubs and schools around the country.

A dedicated student of ancient Greece, Fowle believes his performance of Homer's gory battle scenes from "The Iliad", are as exciting theatre as anything contemporary.

He styles himself in the manner of ancient Greek "rhapsodes" – men who performed before large audiences. Indeed his dream is to perform at Epidauros, the still functioning 20,000 seat ancient Greek ampitheatre.

The Bard, the stage name he chose for himself, meanwhile contents himself with amassing a growing following, performing in the tradition of the ancient rhapsodes and more contemporary Henry Fondas and Hal Holbrooks.

Fowle, a native of Winnetka, Ill., has spent many summers in Charlevoix at his family's summer home on the Boyne City Road. A group of Chicago fans have already reserved tables for Friday night's performance.

Billed as a "dinner performance" the evenings will begin at 7:00 with cocktails followed by dinner at 7:30. The Bard will perform the "Ancient Mariner" during desert and excerpts from "The Illiad" after dinner. For the performances, held in the Weathervane's Grist Mill Room, there will be a charge of $18 per person, which includes the three course dinner with a whitefish, prime rib or shrimp entre.

Bloodmobile falls just short of goal

The recent visit of the Bloodmobile to this community fell short of its goal of 125 units by 21 pints Mrs. David Fowler, spokesman for the committee, reports.

She said 119 area residents responded to the call for donors. Fifteen of this number were deferred for various medical reasons resulting in 104 pints of blood.

Mrs. Fowler said that colds and other medical reasons plus the absence of the U.S.C.G.C. Mesquite from port at this time accounted, in part, for the failure to meet the goal.

She said the next visit of the Bloodmobile to Charlevoix is scheduled for March 4.

Mrs. Fowler expressed the appreciation of the committee to all those who assisted with the clinic including the donors, the volunteers who worked, members of Beta Sigma Phi chapters who staffed the canteen, the Lions Club who assisted with setting up and dismanteling the equipment and the American Legion for the use of the post home. "Without this community support, we could not have the Bloodmobile in our community," she added.

Gospel puppets coming

The Sonshine Ministries will present a program of music, puppets, and preaching this Sunday, October 11, at the Community Church of God in Charlevoix, according to the Reverend Walter G. Hastings.

Sonshine Ministries is composed of the Reverend Scott Scheer, his wife, Cheri, and their three children, Shelley, Kimmie, and Jamie. They will appear at both the 9:45 a.m. Sunday School hour and the 11:00 a.m. worship service.

Their musical program will include many contemporary Gospel songs, as well as favorite old hymns.

Their puppet program is entitled "Nummy 'N Nanny Presents" and especially appeals to children.

The Scheer family has travelled extensively throughout the United States giving concerts, revival services, leading family retreats and seminars, and representing World Vision. The Scheer children are known as "Little Sonbeams" and have produced their own musical recording.

The public is cordially invited to attend at no cost.

County officers attend course

Officers from Charlevoix County law enforcement agencies have completed a concentrated course conducted by the Michigan State Police Forensic Laboratory of Grayling at the Kirtland Community College for officers throughout Central Michigan.

Charlevoix County personnel attended, through the efforts of Michigan State Police Post No. 78 at Petoskey.

Included in the course of instruction were the crime search scene, crime search security, recognizing trace evidence, how to work with forensic lab personnel, collection of latent prints, tool mark identification, firearm ballistics, marking and packaging of evidence, how and what can be done at the forensic lab and legal requirements for evidence.

One officer was sent from each of the four agencies in Charlevoix County. They included Robert Christensen of the East Jordan Police Department, Randall E. Howard of the Boyne City P.D., Dale G. Meredith of the Charlevoix P.D. and David Burris of the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Department.

Christmas Bazaar on tap

The Christmas Bazaar in the Market Mall which has become a part of the fall scene in Charlevoix will be held Saturday in the mall at 405 Bridge Street Mrs. Andrea Mathews, spokesman for the exhibitors, has announced.

The event will open at 10 a.m. and continue until 5 p.m. as part of the third annual Apple Festival.

During this time, local artisans will offer a diversified display of items suitable for Christmas giving.

"We have brought together artists and craftsmen who offer products they have created. You will find only top quality hand-crafted items designed and produced with care and which will meet only the highest standards of their creativity" Mrs. Mathews said of the offerings to be found at the bazaar. She went on to say that each craftsman and artist has an inner commitment to offer for sale only his or her best. "These people are proud of what they have created and therefore offer only those pieces that meet the standards they have set for themselves" she said in conclusion.

Featured among the exhibitors in this year's bazaar will be Norwegian rosemaling, a folk art, done by Dawn Fletcher and tole painting by Peggy Stang. While both are a decorative type of painting, the techniques vary, both were quick to explain. Rosemaling originated in Norway where it is used to decorate the walls and even the ceilings and furnishings in homes, Mrs. Fletcher explained. Done with oils on wood, it features non-realistic flower and scroll forms. She will exhibit bowls such as seen in the picture above, bread boards, pie carriers, picnic baskets, clocks, chests and a variety of smaller items.

The tole painting done by Mrs. Spang also uses oils on wood and tin. In fact, the word "tole" means tin in French. It was the French who developed this art for Mrs. Spang explained, adding that the secret of tole painting is the brush technique. A more realistic form of design is also used.

Both are not amateurs in their respective media. Mrs. Fletcher has taken lessons from Pat Virch of Marquette, leading rosemaler in the United States who has written books on the subject and who has traveled in Norway to study this type of art.

Mrs. Spang has also had training in her craft. She has been painting since grade school and attended classes at an art school in Dayton, Ohio, where she learned the Priscilla Hauser technique. Ms. Hauser is the best known tole painter in this country and has written books on the subject. Many of Mrs. Spang's items are made on wood and she has taken training in woodworking. She will have oven push-pulls, unique door-stops, plaques, pictures in wood and oil-can ring holders and other decorated tin items plus many small Christmas ornaments.

New jewel in Charlevoix's crown

Happiness these days is to be one of the lucky area people who are moving into, or will be moving into, Pine River Place, Charlevoix's new low-income housing project for senior citizens to be dedicated Sunday, October 11.

Those who have not had a chance to see this recently completed facility are urged to take the opportunity at the dedication to get a guided tour of the building. Not only does Pine River Place have a strikingly attactive exterior, but the interior accomodations are nothing less than plush. See the Courier's special pull out section in today's paper for details.

Providing a beautiful facility such as this for people with limited incomes does not just happen. It takes foresight, good planning, determination and an abiding sense of caring for people's needs. Over the past seven years, the Charlevoix Housing Commission has demonstrated all these qualities.

Securing over $2 million in government funding is no simple task. In fact, the complications and red tape involved can often make the experience downright frustrating. But the Housing Commission went about the task resolutely and, with the welcome help of our elected officials, has succeeded.

The Housing Commission has gone way beyond just finding the funds for Pine River Place, though. The five members, Ralph McRae, Marge Dinwiddie, Ralph Shapton, Ralph Hamilton and Robert Cook, have put as much personal involvment into the project as if it were their own development. And it shows.

How many hundreds of hours these individuals have devoted to the creation of this facility will never be known. From the planning that started seven years ago to actually helping to carry new furniture in last week, they have been on top of the project all along.

The result, is a housing facility of which Charlevoix can truly be proud. If there is a better such facility for low income and senior citizen renters anywhere, we have yet to see it.

Charlevoix owes a sincere debt of gratitude to the commission and everyone else involved with the opening of Pine River Place this week. It is a solid example of a community responding to a need through hard work and inter-governmental cooperation.

Knight on the Town

Jonathan Livingston Headache

by Dave Knight

When it comes to varmint critters, Yellowstone has its grizzlies, New York has its rats, Arizona has its gila monsters and Charlevoix...well, Charlevoix has its seagulls.

Seagulls? Nasty? Those pretty white things that glide gracefully on the wind and perch upon dock pilings just like in Audubon magazine? Those things that are so easy to draw (just make a "vee") in first grade art class?

Unfortunately, 'tis so.

Our resident flock of gulls have become so spoiled by well-meaning humans that they have become somewhat of a nuisance lately.

One concerned citizen recently reported to me that his family's cookout at Ferry Ave. beach was rudely interrupted by a hungry seagull who was just not ready to go back to diving into the chilly waters of the lake for fish after a lazy summer of handouts and scavenging.

After a few low altitude reconnaissance missions over the grill where hot dogs were sizzling, this bird had the chutzpah to actually swoop down and grab with its beak a wiener right off the fire! Some witnesses claim he then tried to go for the mustard but couldn't manage to hang onto the jar with his webbed feet.

Just a couple months ago I was playing backgammon on the beach near Mt. McSauba and had the white pieces. I glanced away from the board for an instant and when I turned back, a white move had been played right on an eligible spot. Upon closer inspection, I discovered the move had been played from far above and, looking up, saw the gull still circling as if awaiting another turn.

Seagulls are pretty and the boaters think they're neat.

But I think they better clean up their act before somebody comes up with a good recipe for seagull stew.

Winter's rude return

by Bob Clock

I THINK if summer had not been so pleasant, if we had had a drizzly July and a windy, dour August, then it would be easier to accept the fact that winter is upon us.

The weatherman has catered to our every whim for so long that it comes as something of a shock to discover the old fellow really has a nasty disposition under than sunny facade.

Snow at Pellston and Gaylord on Oct. 1? Impossible!

Of course, I remember one year when Charlevoix had a couple inches of snow on Sept. 26 — so it can happen.

Frost, of course, is a better harbinger of winter than snow, and it does a lot more damage. I am not sure we have had a frost in town yet, but the city gardens were nipped one chilly night two weeks ago. Tomato, cucumber and squash vines all turned crisp and black. However, tomatoes and cucumbers on the ground survived and squash always tastes sweeter after the first frost.

Some garden crops — notably bell peppers, carrots and beets — actually seem to do better in chilly weather. Our pepper plants shrugged off the frost and are still producing.

I DUG POTATOES over the weekend and I am beginning to suspect I am making a genetic mistake when I select my seed spuds. In the fall, I separate my potatoes into three bins, one for large, one for medium and one for small. By spring, only the little potatoes are left and these are the ones I use for seed.

However, I notice that every year my potatoes are getting smaller and smaller. Is it possible that I have been cultivating a strain of Lilliputian potatoes which are hardly worth the effort?

This year, I think we'll consume the little potatoes first and see if the process can't be reversed.

ONIONS ARE another matter. In June I bought three tiny bags of onion sets from Ben Franklin's so we'd have some little green onions. However, they got away from me. No one could eat that many green onions and still have any friends.

The onions kept growing, and growing, and growing — until I harvested them over the weekend. The crop filled the trunk of the Ford.

When the tops wither and fall off, we should have enough dry onions to last us over the winter.

A BIG WEEKEND coming up. Friday night is homecoming; Saturday is the 2nd Annual Apple Festival in East Park; and Sunday is the dedication of Pine River Place, the new housing development for senior citizens on Garfield Street.

This year's Apple Festival promises to be quite a bit larger than last year's maiden effort, judging from the number of organizations talking about erecting booths in the park.

Barnard Grange, for example, is asking member to make 200 cinnamon rolls each — to be sold with coffee to downtown visitors.

Will the Grange be able to peddle literally thousands of cinnamon rolls in a single day?

Come to the Apple Festival and find out.

Memories of Agawa Canyon

Dear Editor:

Bob Clock's enthusiastic account of his trip to the Agawa Canyon on board the Algoma Central Railroad (Courier 9-23-81) recalls for me an experience on this railroad during the 1940s and 1950s in connection with my work as a geologist, first in exploration for iron ore deposits, later in uranium prospecting.

Iron ore was discovered in the vicinity of Wawa around the turn of the century, and provided economic incentives for the construction of Algoma Steel Company's blast furnace at Sault Ste. Marie, Ontario. The Algoma Central Railroad was built primarily to haul iron ore and provide a year-round link to the outside world for miners and their families.

It was less than 25 years ago that the highway along the east shore of Lake Superior was estended north to connect Wawa with the Soo. Prior to that time, miners, prospectors, lumber-jacks, Indians, fishermen, and hunters during the moose season depended on the railroad for transportation. For some of them on southbound trains it was an eagerly-anticipated return to "civilization" after months in the bush. Northbound trains carried many who showed signs of high living in the city and were gradually again facing reality of life in the north country. Coaches of Spartan simplicicty and a dining car resembling the dining hall of a logging camp were standard equipment. The fare was strictly meat and potatoes.

For the benefit of mining and railroad officials, a luxurious private car complete with cook and porter could be attached to the train.

Business affairs as well as recreation were taken care of. The private car could be shunted to a siding in a favorable hunting or fishing area and picked up at a later date. Fresh fish were cooked on the spot.

A little happening connected with uranium prospecting amuses me to this day. In 1948, one of our prospectors, Long John McKee, discovered mineralized rock in outcrops adjacent to the Algoma Central tracks on the south edge of the Agawa Canyon. His geiger counter indicated the presence of strongly radioactive material. Mac carefully chipped samples from the outcrop, safely concealed them in his packsack and flagged and boarded an Algoma Central train for the Soo to report the find to his boss. Uranium prospecting was at a feverish pitch at that time. Everything had to be kept secretive until the specimens could be analyzed and a determination made whether to stake claims.

As it happened, Mac sat next to a talkative chap who soon struck up a conversation. He asked Mac what he was doing up there. Mac, who had shoved his packsack containing the "hot" samples on the overhead rack, said that he had been on a little fishing trip to a nearby trout lake. His seat companion then said he had been doing some prospecting and had a geiger counter with him. Would Mac like to see how it worked? In panic, Mac grabbed his packsack and said "Not right now, I've got to go to the Men's room." So he sat on the john with his packsack beside him until the train arrived at the Soo, where he managed to elude his newly found friend.

As it turned out, the samples contained rich uranium ore, claims were staked, and during the summer of 1949 passengers on the Algoma Central Railroad train could see a small drill at work near the track. Results of the exploration, however, indicated that the deposit was high grade but too small to be of economic interest. Modern day tourists are thus spared the sight of a mining camp as they approach scenic Agawa Canyon from the south.

Not the city's problem

To The Editor:

City Council interest in Mr. Northrups proposal to solve Charlevoix's summer parking problem exposes a common fallacy among business people. That is, the parking congestion is a "city problem" and should be paid for by citizens either through millage or indirect HUD block grants.

Recently our city council approved the site planning for McDonalds only after a variance in the required parking requirements. The point is there was a stipulation as to provision for parking. Where or when was such a requirement demanded or even considered for the Bay Queen enterprise?

Most residents around Charlevoix appreciate the influx of summer tourists-residents as necessary to sustain local businesses and create atmosphere. However, let's be realistic and not go overboard by building a concrete and steel monstrosity on our main street that will be idle 9 months out of the year.

The Beaver Island Company as operator of the Bay Queen should offer parking at the airport or similar facility and bus the tourists to the boat. Why should anyone else but the tourists of B.I.F. pay?

Sincerely,
Joseph A. Keck

We need leaders!

To Parents:

Girl Scouts have been on the American scene since 1912. What can you do to continue this tradition for your daughter? Now is the time to support your local Girl Scout troops and keep Girl Scouting active in your community.

WE NEED YOU!...as a leader and helper.

Being a leader is rewarding in so many ways. It boosts your ego to see happy, smiling faces on a group of energetic girls.

Your morale is lifted to a high. As you work with these girls you realize you are preparing these girls to face this demanding world we live in; to face everyday challenges head on; to grow as mature adults and active citizens.

Your biggest reward as a leader is saying to yourself, "I had a great part of shaping that girl's future."

So, come on. Get with Girl Scouting. Please consider becoming a Girl Scout leader. For further information contact Jill Washburn at 547-4202 or Carolyn Olinger at 547-5577.

We need leaders! You will experience a great reward.

Letters: The Rock, a thank-you

Eulogy for a rock

To the Editor:

The Rock.

Just the word itself means nothing more than something to be kicked along the end of your shoe or a nuisance in one's garden. They raise a ruckus with your lawn mower and Labrador retrievers just love to chase them as they whiz through the air. And as all good labs do, plop, the rock ends up at your feet for another throw.

This particular rock would put your foot in a cast and that lab would have to be content to curl up in the shade next to it.

The rock is along the stretch of beach that is now Fisherman's Island State Park. It is far enough away from lots of people. You have to work through poison ivy on your trip through brush strung with crystalline, dewy cobwebs and finally over a crest of dune where Lake Michigan caresses a beautiful stretch of shoreline.

My wife, our two dogs and myself frequent this stretch of solitude near the rock. We like it. It represents a great deal of tranquility. No busted bottles, no discarded Pampers and no abrasive, abusive and uncaring people who communally desecrate the more popular locations.

The rock and the beach have withstood years of winds, snow and rain. The winter pack ice tears, rips and taste itself with relentless fury on this piece of beach. It has survived and will survive all that nature serves.

Next summer it will be changed. You see the DNR has built new campsites just above it. The tranquility of The Rock and the beach will be lost. I expect to see graffitti on The Rock next fall.

I will not share its untiring vigil next summer. Like all things in Northwest Michigan it will change. I will once again be forced out along with other local people. This area does not belong to us any longer. Our sacred places are being desecrated by people that do not understand things like lonely stretches of beach, quiet days on the shoreline or the raging witch of a November gale.

They do not see, hear or feel this part of Lake Michigan as those who have lived with it most of their lives.

I am not a selfish individual. I have no objections to sharing this beautiful stretch of shoreline. Just keep a small portion as it is for those who love it for what it is. Those who vacation can have a portion also. We all have our needs.

It is evident that those who state rare tracts of shoreline are not those who see, hear or feel as I do. If they did, these pieces of magnificence would remain as they are.

Carl Gunn: man of many interests

Meet Charlevoix

by PEG OHLE

He's been a sailor on the Great Lakes, a laborer for the Cadillac Motor Division, a minister to youth, and a consultant for camps and schools. Now he's doing research in and studying solar energy. This week, Carl Gunn of Charlevoix tells the Courier how it all came about.

Carl Gunn

COURIER: How did you get into solar energy?

GUNN: My greatest interest has been working with young people, especially in camping situations. I've helped to start camps in Texas, southern Michigan, and northern Michigan. I've done everything from flunky jobs to management, from designing buildings to instructing in small craft water safety. Eventually, I became an independent consultant for camps and Christian schools. Energy, especially for hot water, is an important part of the cost of operating camps. Last year, I sought the advice of Jordan College in Cedar Springs about using solar energy in camps. They are well known in the solar field.

COURIER: Are you working with them now?

GUNN: Yes. I'm semi-retired but I work part time for them. I'm also taking some courses. We now have a consortium of camps in Michigan working toward the common goal of alternate energy development on campsites together with energy education of the campers. Today's young people are really interested in preserving energy.

COURIER: What, specifically, have you done?

GUNN: We have devised a hot water solar system patterned after those in use in Israel. It is a thermo-siphoning unit, which means that the water moves only because it is heated. There are no pumps. We set up the system in prominent places in camps and explain their operation to everybody who comes along.

COURIER: It sounds as if you've been interested in solar energy for a long time.

GUNN: I have been. I've attended many workshops and seminars through the years. Do you know that last year, the average family in Michigan spent $1,050 for fuel. That's a big expense. And so much of the energy is wasted. In fact, a scientist for the National Geographic has estimated that we waste 56 percent of our energy.

COURIER: You sound like a preacher when you talk about energy.

GUNN: Well, what I do is really a ministry. I'm basically a minister, not a scientist.

COURIER: Do you have any theological training?

GUNN: When I was in Texas, I studied at the Dallas Theological Seminary as a special student. It is an independent seminary – the largest in the country.

COURIER: Did you ever have a church?

GUNN: Yes, back in 1955, and of course, I was interim pastor of the First Baptist Church in Charlevoix for several months recently.

COURIER: Which of your varied experiences do you consider most exciting?

GUNN: My work with the Wycliffe Bible Translators in East Texas. They translate the scriptures for people in undeveloped countries where there is no alphabet. Wycliffe sends representatives to remote areas to analyze the sounds of the language, and their meanings. There are about 300 characters that represent all known sounds made by humans. With this information, Wycliffe puts together a language with idioms and uses it to translate the scriptures. At our camp in East Texas Wycliffe had a group of high school students in an experiment to U of M manual has local author

by FRAN MARTIN

If you've ever heard of the University of Michigan (and who hasn't) and particularly if you are an alumnus, student, or fan of the Wolverines, the recent publication, "Maize and Blue Manual" should be required reading.

Written by two University of Michigan co-eds, Martha Lee Portz and Elizabeth A. Postmus, the latter a native Charlevoixan, it tells you all you ever wanted to know about Michigan and even some things you never suspected.

Portz and Postmus undertook this great tome of knowledge last summer when neither could find a summer job. Inspired by their mothers to "do something", they put their heads together, pooled their knowledge about the University of Michigan campus and Ann Arbor, interviewed people who added a wealth of information to what they had and did a lot of research before compiling the manual which tells you, in detail, how to be a True Blue fan-adict.

In fact, the foreword defines clearly the great need for the information imparted in the Maize and Blue Manual: "to be accepted, to gain respect or merely exist in Ann Arbor as a University of Michigan football fan, it is your first commitment to be historically informed."

The authors of the Maize and Blue Manual have compiled the information necessary to "make being a True Blue fan-addict a cinch".

The manual takes you on a tour of the campus and its environs pointing out the most popular eating and watering places, imparts information on student life including wardrobe and room furnishings you are expected to have, defines the language of the campus, relates a "tongue in cheek" chapter on alumni antics, introduces you to famous M faces in the crowd including the cop who directs traffic near the staduim on Football Saturday, tells you where to dine in True Blue style, how to be assured of a ticket to M games, how to determine the intensity of your True Blue status, how to prepare for the pre-game affair: the tailgate including what to serve and how to prepare it with recipes by "names you'll recognize" people associated with the U. of M., where to purchase the food if you don't want to prepare it and, lastly, songs you must be able to sing to be True Blue.

Well written and illustrated with art work by Postmus plus photographs, both past and present, the Maize and Blue Manual is informative as well as amusing, certainly required reading for anyone with even a slight interest in the "Champions of the West".

The publisher? Out of the Blue Publications headquarted in Ann Arbor. However, the manual is available at bookstores in the area.

Portz and Postmus are both residents of the community of which they write, Ann Arbor. Portz is a sophomore and Postmus a senior at the University of Michigan. Postmus is a native Charlevoixan having been born in Charlevoix while her mother, the former Cynthia Smith, sister of Vane H. Smith, was awaiting the return of her husband, Dr. Rober Postmus, from duty with the U.S. Air Force.

Health Dept. commended for quality of Medicare services

A recent evaluation conducted in late August by the Home Health Agency Program unit of the Michigan Department of Public Health "revealed that there are no deficiencies in District Health Department Number 3's compliance with medicare conditions of participation." The report issued by Margaret McCracken, R.N., M.P.H. Chief nurse of the Bureau of Health Care Administration went on to say "You (the District Helath Department) are to be commended on the quality of professional care evidenced by the records in your agency".

Dr. Youngs, Health Officer, states that "the Home Health Care and Services provided by your district public health staff is immensely important to all our county residents." He is extremely pleased with the recent evaluation, and is confident that your local public health staff will continue to perform the best care possible, in a highly skilled manner.

Health Department nurse takes a blood pressure reading.

District Health Care is the delivery of specific types of medically related service in the home. It may allow for earlier hospital or nursing home discharge. Home Health is a program that can complement nursing home or hospital care.

Many services can be covered under home health care. Specific examples are: Patient education, direct patient care or Home Health Aide Services.

It is very important to be aware that all services are given under the orders of the patient's own physician. The services may be preformed by a Registered Nurse, Speech Therapist, Physical Therapist, or Home Health Aide. Regardless of the services provided the patients own doctor is kept completely informed, and writes all orders for the patient.

Anyone that is essentially homebound, needing home health care, and whose need is certified by their physician, may be eligible for Home Health Care. Weddings

Sell-Paul

Kimberly Ellen Sell and Ronald William Paul were married on Saturday afternoon, October 3, at St. Francis Xavier Church in Petoskey.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert M. Sell of Charlevoix and Lakeland, Florida, and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Paul of Pine Point, Charlevoix.

The reverend Father Nicholas Meyer performed the double-ring ceremony before approximately 175 guests.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a traditional wedding gown with a bodice fashioned from Point d'esprit and Victoria laces. A long ruffle, beginning at the Empire waist, ended in lace trim around the train, her chilfon vell and lace and pearl capelet were scattered with crocheted blossoms. The bride carried a colonial-style bouquet of white sweetheart rosea and stephanotis with baby's breath.

Karyn Sell served her sister as maid of honor. Another sister, Kathryn; the bridegroom's sister Lorri; and the bride's nieces, Colleen and Amy Sell were bridesmaids. Heidi Sell was the junior bridesmaid. They all wore periwinkle blue gowns with gathered, shirred bodices and column skirts. They carried bouquets of mini carnations with blue sweetheart roses and baby's breath.

Jennifer Sell, as flower girl, wore a flowered blue gown with sweetheart neckline and carried a basket of rose petals.

Benjamin Sell, a nephew of the bride, was ringbearer; Wayne Hoffman was best man; and the bridegroom's brother Michael, the bride's brother, Tracy, Tim Heller, and Brian Thompson were groomsmen.

Camille Schiele, a cousin of the bride, was in charge of the guest book.

Music for the ceremony was provided by Organist August Huybrechts and vocal soloists Fran Tollas and Diane Johnson. Mrs. Tollas sang "Ave Maria", "Prayer of St. Francis", and "Sunrise-Sunset". Ms. Johnson sang "I".

Following the ceremony, the bride's parents hosted a reception at LaCroft. The Bridegroom's parents hosted the rehearsal dinner at their home on Friday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Paul

The bridegroom is a graduate of Charlevoix High School and is associated with Wojan Aluminum Company. The bride is also a graduate of Charlevoix High School, as well as Northwestern Wyoming College in Powell, Wyoming. She is employed by The Lodge and Village Inn Pizza.

For her daughter's wedding, Mrs. Sell chose a plum colored crepe gown by Jerry Silverman. Mrs. Paul wore an original gray gown. Mrs. Kathryn Hunt, grandmother of the bride, wore a gold and white brocade suit.

Guests from Arizona, California, Florida, Illinois, Ohio, Virginia, and Wisconsin attended the ceremony.

Cheryl Prewitt

Former Miss America to address retreat

Local men and women will be able to see and hear Miss America 1980 when Cheryl Prewitt speaks at the 10th Win-Some Women's Retreat on November 7 at Boyne Mountain.

Miss Prewitt will be part of a two-day program beginning on November 6 which will develop the retreat's theme, "Trusting God".

Other particiants and their subjects include Bob Laurent, "It Only Takes a Fire to Keep the Spark Going"; Peg Burdick, "Are You Listening?"; Carolyn Wilde, "The War Within Us"; Peg Rankin, "Discovering Your Spiritual Gifts"; Phil and Myrna White, "Accepting Yourself and Accepting Your Mate"; and Lee Rankin, "God's Obedience."

The retreat, which is sponsored by the neighborhood inter-denominational Bible classes in Petoskey, is described as an opportunity to join with other women for inspiration, fellowship, and encouragement.

Miss Prewitt will tell how she started traveling and singing gospel songs with her family at the age of five, and how, when she was 11, she was in an automobile accident which crushed her leg, cracked her back, and left her with over 100 stitches in her face. Her doctors told her she would never walk again, but she did, and went on to become Miss America.

"A lot of good things have happened to me," says Miss Prewitt. "He put me back together. He put a love in my heart that the judges saw. He made me Miss America, and then He gave me a job to do. That job is to travel all over America and say two things: I love you and God loves you and really cares about your life."

Miss Prewitt will speak at the banquet at 7 p.m. on November 7 in the Convention Hall at Boyne Mountain. Tickets may be purchased for the banquet alone at Ace Hardware in Charlevoix. Reservations for the retreat must be in on or before Monday, October 26, to Win-Some Women, Box 503, Petoskey 49770.

from concerned parents: Applicants are screened and matched carefully. These situations, regarding children in need of an adult helping hand, require top notch people who want to do something out of love and kindness and are, most importantly, willing to give of their time.

Jeff Froat'a mother, In recommending Will Wiegandt for this 1st annual Big Brothers-Big Sisters award, summed up the spirit of the organization in her own worlds of appreciation to Will: "It's not the money spent with a little brother, or even the amount of time. It's how the time is spent.."

see if they could work into this type of translating.

COURIER: Getting back to solar energy, you have a feeling about the sun and its relationship to the scriptures, don't you?

GUNN: Yes, the sun is the thing we are most conscious of in the whole universe. The scriptures indicate that the Sun is representative of the Son. The sun outshines the stars – you can't see them when the sun is shining – and the sun provides the moon with its light. I could cite several Biblical verses that speak of the sun and the universe.

COURIER: We recall that you're scheduled to go to New Mexico to lecture this month.

GUNN: Yes, I've been invited to lecture on alternate energy and energy education during three seminars at the Christian Camping International Convention at Glorieta, New Mexico. Glorieta is said to be the largest camp in the United States, with accomodations for 4,000 people.

COURIER: Is Mrs. Gunn as busy a person as you are?

GUNN: Oh, yes. She is the new chairman of the Grandvue Medical Care Facility Auxiliary and the chairman of the Charlevois Hospital Auxiliary. Her big job is recruiting volunteers for both places. At Grandvue they've formed a chaplain's assistance program whereby volunteers act as communicators between patients and pastors.

COURIER: How long have you lived in Charlevoix?

GUNN: We started coming up here for summer vacations in the 1960's, and, like a lot of other people, we decided to live here year around.

COURIER: Do you and Mrs. Gunn have children?

GUNN: Two. Son Bill is an electronics engineer with Texas Instrumewnts in Dallas and daughter Carol Howlette lives in Albany, Georgia.

Apples, apples, apples; they'll all be out this weekend in Charlevoix

by FRAN MARTIN

Pomona, goddess of fruits and fruit trees, will reign supreme in Charlevoix this weekend as the community hosts its second annual Apple Festival.

Charlevoix, nestled in the heart of the north's apple country, will pay homage not only to one of the oldest but to one of the most durable and versatile of Pomona's fruits...the apple, during the forthcoming festival.

In addition to some 38 varieties of apples to be exhibited by growers during the festival, many products featuring apples and recipes will be available.

For instance, there'll be apple pie, pastries laced with apples, breads, cakes, rolls, strudel and dumplings.

There will also be caramel apples, apple cider, apple jelly, apple butter, apple salad and, of course, the "apple in the hand" that keeps the doctor away.

Long before the bees were busy pollinating the millions of apple blossoms on trees which spread over acres of rolling hills that make up the area's apple orchards, the Apple Festival Committee from the Charlevoix Merchants Association, a splinter group of the Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce, was preparing plans for next weekend's event.

Members of the committee named Michael Holmes as their chairman because after all, he does operate the Apple Tree, a downtown gift shop and what could be more fitting! Serving with him are Nancy Burnsides, Kitty Chase, Fred DeMartino, Barbara Holmes and Sue Mabee, all representing local businesses.

CORTLAND

Fruit growers in the area, encouraged by the reception their products received in earlier festivals, are planning even larger and more diversified exhibits. They will be joined by farmers in the area who are now harvesting garden vegetables.

Holmes, general chairman of the festival, said it has been enlarged to include a wide variety of booths in East Park, many featuring apple products and other food offerings and a wide variety of entertainment.

"We want this to be an area festival and we've tried to include events that everyone will enjoy" Holmes said of the plans for Saturday.

Heading the list of events will be a Christmas bazaar featuring craft items handmade by local artisans of the needle, brush, clay and saw to be held in the Market Mall throughout the day; country music in East Park beginning at 11 a.m. by the popular National Grange championship band, Jasper and his Tag-alongs; a square dance demonstration with a caller and square dancers stepping it off to live music at 12 noon and a concert by the youthful Elipse 11 during the early afternoon.

Church, school and other local groups will man booths along the park featuring apple-related food products and other goodies.

There will also be a demonstration of a apple cider mill and a gadget for making apple sauce.

Holmes went on to say that the kids haven't been forgotten for there'll be hay rides for them on a hay wagon pulled by Harold Wilson's horses, pony rides and a children's matinee at Cinema III.

On Saturday evening the Saladin Shrine Band of Grand Rapids will present a concert at the high school gymnasium. It will be presented without charge. However, a free-will offering will be accepted with the proceeds going to support Shriners Children's hospitals and Burn Clinics throughout the United States.

Another event planned to coincide with the Apple Festival is the Chamber of Commerce-sponsored Color Cruises on Lake Charlevoix aboard the Motorship Beaver Islander. Reservations for the cruises may be made at the Chamber of Commerce office. "The color cruises are very popular and it is important to make a reservation so you won't be disappointed" Mrs. Jacquie Merta, executive director of the Chamber, said in announcing the event. There will be cruises on both Saturday and Sunday with the Beaver Islander leaving the municipal dock at 1 p.m. sharp.

In discussing the Apple Festival, Holmes said the event was long overdue. "We have festivals for every fruit grown in the state except the lowly apple, the most popular and yet the most neglected of all our fruits. Added to that, apples are harvested in the fall and what better time to enjoy a festival?" Along with many varieties of apples, farmers in the area are being invited to exhibit other farm products that are being harvested at this time.

ROME BEAUTY

GRANNY SMITH

JONATHAN
September through March; good for snacks, salads, fruit cups, sauces, all-purpose cooking.

McINTOSH
September through June; good for snacks, salads, fruit cups, sauces, all-purpose cooking, (except whole).

A look to the past reveals that the apple has long been a mainstay among fruits especially in the temperate climates of Europe and North America. Certainly they have been a part of Americana since the earliest days of this country's recorded history.

Everyone knows the story of Johnny Appleseed, the early American frontiersman, John Chapman, who was born in the early American colony of Massachusetts in 1774 and who planted appleseeds procured from cider mills as he made his way west. Though few people remember his real name, as Johnny Appleseed he definitely made a contribution as America's first pomologist or fruit growing expert.

It is not beyond the realm of possibility that some of the apples grown in northern Michigan today have descended from seeds planted by Johnny Appleseed. Orchardists say that, given the proper care, apple trees will bear fruit for more than century.

While apple trees can be found throughout the countryside, most of the thousands of bushels of apples produced in the Charlevoix area come from fruit orchards that grow other fruits indigenous to northern Michigan such as sweet and sour cherries, apricots, pears, plums and nectarines.

Among the local growers are Cooper's Orchards with 250 trees bearing ten of the most popular species; the Jim Parker Orchard at Phelps and Ranney Roads, also in Eveline Township, which had 290 trees of Macintosh, Delicious and Ida Reds. This is the only "pick yourself" orchard in the area and the Rosenthal Orchard, the largest in the area, with 600 trees and 38 varieties of apples. These orchards are located outside Charlevoix.

Others are Friskie's Fruit Farm whose apple orchard alone covers 100 acres and Elzinga's Farm Market with 50 to 60 acres of apple trees. These orchards are located on the northern edge of Antrim County and, like Cooper's, grow the 10 best selling varieties of apples.

In addition to the apples, several area makers of jams and jellies will be offering their products for sale at the festival.

Bread making is unique project

by ANNE KELLY

Then they saw it. There was a THING on the kitchen table. It didn't look alive. It wasn't even moving. It was a big lump of something light brown. Mrs. Birdie pointed to it. "That's your mystery," she said.

Taken from: "The Mixed Up Mystery Smell" by Eleanor Coerr.

St. Mary's 4th graders had a unique "hands on" experience last week. Flour and sticky bread dough found itself not only on hands, but oh, wasn't it fun? As an enrichment activity, reading teacher Sr. Agnes Mary and her class enjoyed a morning bread baking session. The activity followed the reading of a story from their new Houghton-Mifflin textbooks entitles, "The Mixed Up Mystery Smell", by Eleanor Coerr. Measuring, stirring, adding ingredients, kneading and generally covering themselves with flour, the students concocted a batch of Mrs. Birdies' Bread, the recipe for which had been included in the text.

St. Mary's teachers are genuinely enjoying the new reading series. They find that the texts offer quality literature, poems and classics by noted children's authors.

Lice are evident again in area schools

Area schools may be faced with reduced enrollments, and funding shortages, but according to District Health Department officials, there will be plenty of head lice this year. Northwest Michigan is sharing an increased problem of head lice with many other parts of this nation. Lice activity seem to have cycles. Unfortunately, we now seem to be experiencing a cycle of high lice activity.

Getting lice is not an indication of poor sanitation or low economic condition. It simply means that one person has come in direct contact with someone that has lice (ie; children playing); or that the lice have been spread in an indirect manor (ie, such as sharing hats, combs, or jackets).

Summer is usually a time with less lice activity in Northern Michigan. Unfortunately this summer seemed to have a much higher than normal number of lice outbreaks. This is certainly a strong indication that lice outbreaks could be more wide-spread this fall and winter.

Schools are often implicated as the cause of lice outbreak activity. This is not because schools are a better environment for lice to grow, or because schools don't care about the problem. Most school administrators have been working very hard to minimize their lice problem. Basically schools have a greater problem with lice because students carry them in from home and the surrounding community, and have a close personal contact with each other, allowing for the spread of lice or nits.

Prevention activities can minimize the lice problem. Children should be reminded not to share personal items such as combs, clothing or towels with others. Head lice reproduce rapidly and a mild infestation, if not checked early, can soon grow to large proportions and infect many others.

Intense itching, caused by the injection of saliva by feeding lice is the major symptom of a lice infestation. A reddened area of skin, or tiny bite marks, on the neck and scalp are also, indications of a possible lice infestation.

Inspection of the head and neck area of any individual suspected of having lice will not usually result in direct identification of lice. Usually the nits or eggs deposited by the adult lice will be noticed. If left untreated these nits will develop into adult lice in a short time.

The nits are glued to a hair shaft about 1-4 inch from the scalp. They have a oval shape and may be white to silver in color. It is very easy to confuse the nits with dandruff or drops of hair spray. The nits cannot be removed easily from the hair shaft.

All schools in Antrim, Charlevoix, Emmet and Otsego county have been supplied with information for administrators, teachers, and parents of students who may be infected with lice.

Recommended treatments usually include a medicated shampoo that is available from drug stores. All clothing, towels and bed linens used by an infested person should be washed with detergent using very hot water or the hot cycle of the washing machine. Items that cannot be washed should be dry cleaned, or placed in a sealed plastic bag for 35 days. Other helpful suggestions include vacuuming all carpets, upholstery and mattresses. People living in the same household with an individual that has been infected with head lice should also be checked for the same condition.

Anyone with questions about head lice can call their own physician or the nearest office of District Health Department No. 3, Antrim 533-8670, Charlevoix, 547-6523, Otsego (517) 732-1794 or Petoskey at 347-6014.

Parents with questions about school lice outbreaks should contact their child's school.

On Friday, Long will be at the Charlevoix County Senior Citizens Center in East Jordan from 12 noon to 1 p.m., and at the East Jordan City Hall from 1 p.m. to 2 p.m.

FASCINATING FACTS ABOUT GOLD
Colleen Tilsworth
Manager
We all know that gold has made men risk much and travel far and wide throughout the ages. Perhaps you knew that there were gold mines as far back as the ancient Egyptians. Perhaps you even knew that gold is mined today from above the arctic circle to the southern tip of Africa and in more than 55 countries around the world. But did you know that there are three different types of gold mines?
First, there is the placer mine. This is the easiest type of mine to extract gold from. Placer mines are alluvial deposits of sand and gravel with tiny little flakes of gold on up to large nuggets that can weigh many ounces or even pounds. Basically the mining procedure is to sift and separate the gold from the gravel. That's it. It is the same thing as panning for gold that the old prospectors did but on a bigger scale. A pan, a little water and of course, some luck and presto you're rich!
The second kind of mine is from lode deposits. This is gold that is embedded in hard rock sometimes deep in the ground. In fact gold mines of this type are among the deepest mines in the world, some stretching down about a mile or more. The processing of this gold is much more expensive and involved. First of course, you have to find the gold and dig down to get it, then the ore is blasted out and carried to a mill where it is crushed and then treated through various complex chemical processes to extract the gold. Some mines have to process a ton of ore to get a single ounce or less of gold!
Finally, there is by product gold. This gold results form the mining of other metals such as copper, zinc or lead. These mines are basically copper or zinc or lead mines but when they process these major constituents, they also get small amounts of gold. The extraction of such gold, of course, is again a complicated physical process.
Through these three processes 42,363,000 troy ounces of gold were produced in 1980. This amounts to about 1,318 TONS of gold! Despite the enormous production, the price shot up to a record $850 per ounce, so just imagine what will happen in the future as world reserves and production shrink and eventually disappear!

Rayders give Northmen sound thrashing

Petoskey varsity football head coach Barry Aspenleiter may have made the understatement of the week after Friday night's game when he said, "We took a licking."

The "licking" to which he referred was to the tune of 42-8 and was at the hands of a fired-up Charlevoix Rayder squad.

The Northmen could not even get onto the scoreboard until the third quarter and by that time, they were at least four touchdowns behind.

The victory was won, to a large extent, in the pits where the line of scrimmage was consistently controlled by the Rayder linemen.

Quarterback Scott Kelly had an excellent evening completing seven of eight passes for 69 yards and three touchdowns. His first strike came in the initial quarter when he hit end Ross Carey in the endzone for a touchdown from 12 yards out. Mark Morgan booted the first of six extra point conversions for a 7-0 lead.

In the second quarter, Mark Beaudoin padded the lead with a four-yard TD run and Morgan made it 14-0. Later in the period, Kelly hit Carey again with a scoring pass from the seven yard line and Morgan converted for a neat 21-0 lead to take into the locker room at half time.

In the third quarter, Kelly found his other primary receiver, end Craig Klooster, with a six-yard scoring pass to make it 28-0 after another goo kick by Morgan.

Petoskey finally put some points on the board in the third period when Dan Chilcott ran the ball into the endzone from 12 yards out and Tom Nelson passed for a two-point conversion to make the score 28-8.

The Rayder offense did not let up though and struck again in the fourth quarter on a Beaudoin 11-yard scoring run and a Morgan PAT for a 35-8 margin. The defense got into the scoring act also when Dave Buday scooped up a Northman fumble on his own three-yard line and raced 97 yards for a touchdown. Morgan aagain converted for a final tally of 42-8.

Mike Loper led the Rayder defense with 15 tackles with Chris Putman not far behind with 13. Buday had nine tackles and an interception and Carey and Beaudoin each had seven tackles.

A good measure of Charlevoix's high-powered offense was the number of first downs it piled up, 17, with 11 by running, four by passing and two by penalty.

Beaudoin was the leading Charlevoix rusher with 112 yards on 21 carries; Jeff Morgridge ran for 50 yards and Ken Speigl for 23. Carey caught a total of four passes for 48 yards and two touchdowns while Klooster snared two for 25 yards and a TD. Buday caught one pass for ten yards.

This week's Homecoming contest pits the Rayders against Gaylord. Kickoffis set for 7:30 p.m. at Kipke Field. Charlevoix remains undefeated in Michigan-Huron Shores conference action with two wins against no losses. Overall they are 3-1.

JV squad wins third

Petoskey was the latest victim of the Charlevoix junior varsity football team's potent offense falling to the Rayder understudies 33-12 last Thursday evening at Kipke Field.

Charlevoix racked up 224 yards in total offense in a game that was relatively close until the the second half.

In the first quarter, Charlevoix took the lead on a one yard plunge into the endzone by Pat Mitchell. The extra point try was no good and the Rayders had to settle for a 6-0 lead for the rest of the half.

There was no scoring by either team in the second quarter.

In the third period, the Rayder offense came alive with Mitchell breaking away on a 27-yard touchdown run for the second of his three touchdowns for the day. Tim LaBlance ran for two extra points for a 14-0 lead.

Shawn Hartnett added six more points with a two-yard scoring run later in the quarter. Thad Morgan kicked the extra point and the score went to 21-0.

Mitchell took off again in the fourth quarter on a 30-yard scoring jaunt to boost the lead to 27-0 and Hartnett finished the Rayder scoring with his second TD, a six-yard run, to put Charlevoix up 33-0.

Petoskey's points came on two long passes of 50 and 55 yards.

Rayder JV coaches praised their defensive team for an outstanding performance. Wayne Bergmann, Alec Sheets, Hartnett and Morgan were especially effective on defense.

The junior varsity team takes a 3-0 record to Gaylord this week for a 6:30 p.m. game on Thursday.

Cheboygan topples freshmen

Cheboygan's freshman football squad came to Charlevoix last week and handed the young Rayders their first loss of the season 22-6.

Cheboygan took the upper hand early in the game taking advantage of five costly Charlevoix fumbles in the first half alone. One of those fumles was picked up on the five yard line in the first quarter and run into the endzone for Cheboygan's first touchdown of the game. The extra point try was no good leaving Cheboygan in front 6-0.

Later in the quarter, Cheboygan added another TD on a nine-yard run up the middle. A two-point conversion was successful and Cheboygan took a 14-0 lead into the locker room at halftime.

The Rayders finally got onto the scoreboard in the third quarter when Jim Kenney burst into the endzone from 8 yards out. The extra point was no good and the score stood at 14-6.

Cheboygan led the game in the fourth quarter with a two-yard touchdown run and two-point conversion leaving the final score at 22-6.

The loss evens the Charlevoix freshman team's record at one win and one loss for the season so far. This week the team hosts Gaylord for a 6:30 p.m. game at Kipke Field on Wednesday.

Girls lose to Petoskey in OT

The Charlevoix Girls Basketball team lost in an overtime to Petoskey by a score of 42-41 after defeating Boyne City 56-48 earlier in the week.

In the game at Petoskey Thursday, Charlevoix got off to an 8-6 first period lead only to have Petoskey knot the score 14-all at halftime. As the second half got underway, Charlevoix outscored their opponents 12-6 for a six point advantage going into the final period when Petoskey caught fire and dumped in 15 points of Charlevoix's nine to end the regulation game in a 35-35 tie.

In the overtime, Petoskey went to the free throw line to score seven points to Charelvoix's six for the win.

Rhonda Buchanan scored 18 of the Rayder points and Holly Taber had 12. Kristin Ronan led the scoring with 23 for Petoskey.

Charlevoix now has a four win-two loss record for the season.

In their game with Boyne City, Charlevoix outscored their rivals 28 to 23 from the floor for a 56-48 victory.

Charlevoix paced the game 16-12 at the quarter, 32-24 at halftime and 42-34 going into the final period.

Holly Taber with 19 rebounds and Laura Kemp with 16 controlled the backboards for Charlevoix while Rhonda Buchanan scored 18 points and Kemp 16 for the victors.

Julie Paquette had 12 and Sheila Smith and Michelle Russell 10 each for Boyne City.

The Boyne City JVs won 39-37 and the Petoskey JVs won by a similar score.

Charlevoix will be at Cheboygan Thursday and will host Grayling on Tuesday.

Charlevoix County Cancer Society unit elects officers

Lynda Christensen of Boyne City has been elected president of the Charlevoix County Unit of the American Cancer Society.

The woman's election came during the Unit's Sept. 28 board of directors meeting. At the same time, Keith Kenney of East Jordan and Jan Russell, also of East Jordan, were elected vice presidents.

Others elected to the board included Chris Anderson of Charlevoix, secretary; Hugh Mason, Charlevoix, treasurer; Dr. Michael Engel, DO, of Boyne City, professional education chairman; Joanne Curtis of Charlevoix and Ginny Carey of East Jordan, annual Crusade chairpersons; Mary Ann Bishop of Boyne City, public education; Joan Hoffman of Charlevoix, former Unit president, service and rehabilitation; and Phil Loomis of Petoskey, public information and special events.

It was reported the Charlevoix County unit raised more than $800 in its first annual Walter Hagen-Babe Zaharias Golf Tournament this summer. He noted 49 such tournaments around Michigan raised approximately $300,000 which is $50,000 more than was raised last year. In addition, a record 420 golfers participated in the State Golf tournament at Boyne Highlands earlier this month.

Board members also voted to participate in "Daffodil Days" next April and in "Bowl Down for Cancer" December 1-15--two events aimed at informing area residents of the services the Cancer Society provides and to help raise additional funds for research, education and service.

Dr. Engel discussed with board members "Management of Depression and Cancer"--a report he had taken from "Your Patient and Cancer". He noted the report says, in many cases, depression is not being spotted, treated or maximized.

He added the report points out that many patients have died because of depression rather than cancer.

The report, he said, goes on to say that shock therapy has been a very effective tool in dealing with depression.

The board's next meeting is October 19 at 7:30 p.m. In the basement of St. Matthew's Catholic Church in Boyne City.

Sister Agnes Mary teaches success

Teacher Feature

by ANNE KELLY

"I try to make the kids feel good about themselves," explains Sister Agnes Mary Wojtkowiak, Dominican sister and principal of St. Mary's school. "My main philosophy is that we should try to help the children develop a good self-concept-to realize that they are worth something and can succeed."

Talking with Sister and watching her easy manner with the children, one can sense that she feels comfortable and successful with her convictions.

A graduate of Acquinas College in Grand Rapids, with graduate studies in Elementary Administration from Central Michigan University, Michigan State and the University of Detroit, Sister taught at Saginaw St. Mary's, Grand Rapids Immaculate Heart, and Traverse City St. Francis before assuming her position at Charelvoix St. Mary's 3 years ago in a teaching-administrative capacity.

Sister Agnes Mary Wojtkowiak

Since that time, she has concentrated on updating the curriculum and has initiated a new reading and social studies program. Presently Sister serves on the Human Growth Advisory Board along with public school administrators, teachers, parents, the school nurse and a local clergyman. This committee is in the process of screening materials to be used in the Ses-Education Program in the Charlevoix Schools.

This year St. Mary's will be evaluated by a Diocescan team out of Gaylord, who will be sizing up St. Mary's as regards curriculum, academics, testing program, physical plant and the relationships between and among teachers, students, parents and the community.

They will find at St. Mary's, five fully credited teachers, teaching grades 1-6, a music teacher, volunteer teachers in art and physicel education, and a volunteer secretary.

They will see a small Catholic School which strives to teach beyond academics, Christian values.

And they will find at the helm, a lady who seems confident and enthusiastic about her role and her goals.

Big Rock not affected by lifting of ban on fuel reprocessing

by SARA GAY DAMMANN

Despite President Ronald Reagan's policy statement issued last Thursday, lifting the ban on the reprocessing of nuclear fuel, there will be no change in Consumers Power's Big Rock Point Nuclear Plant's application to the Nuclear Regulatory Commission to expand its spent fuel pool, spokesmen here say.

Big Rock's application to the NRC to expand the pool in which it stores spent nuclear fuel – plutonium and uranium – pending since April 23, 1979, has been based on the ban imposed by former President Jimmy Carter in 1977 on the shipment and reprocessing of nuclear waste. The Carter administration felt the stockpiling of plutonium – the nuclear fuel product resulting from reprocessing – presented too great a danger of subversion by terrorists. Plutonium, a man-made nuclear material, is used in making nuclear weapons.

Since Carter's ban was imposed, nuclear power facilities have had to store the still highly radioactive spent fuel rods on site. At Big Rock Point the spent fuel pool, located within the reactor containment dome, now hold 193 assemblies of spent fuel. Consomer Power's application is to raise the number of assemblies to 441, by storing them closer together.

Consumers Power Co. has argued that Big Rock, a 75 mega watt plant, the 2nd oldest nuclear plant still operating in the U.S., would be forced to close in 1983 if the spent fuel pool is not expanded. Big Rock's license to operate expires in 2000.

The application has been protested by the Concerned Citizens of Charlevoix, who have been formally admitted as intervenors in the case by the NRC.

Christa Maria, spokesperson for the citizens' group, said Friday that President Reagan's lifting of the ban "should mean they no longer need to expand the spent fuel pool."

She also said that Consumers Power Company has an application pending before the Michigan Public Service Commission for a rate hike, based partially on the fact they have to store spent fuel at the plant, which the company says is a liability.

The Concerned Citizens stated Friday that the lifting of the ban on reprocessing, "the spent fuel becomes an asset."

Big Rock last shipped uranium and plutonium to a reprocessing plant in West Valley (near Buffalo), New York, in November 1971. That plant is now closed because of radioactive contamination. There are no commercial reprocessing plant now operating.

Phil Loomis, spokesman for Consumers Big Rock Point Plant said the need for enlarging the spent fuel pool at the plant will remain

Pine River Place dedicated

by DAVE KNIGHT

An overflow crowd of well over 200 people turned out Sunday afternoon for the dedication of Charlevoix's new senior housing project, Pine River Place, at 210 W. Garfield.

The ceremony took place in the community room of the new facility and featured remarks from several individuals involved in the project including representatives from the city Housing Commission, the architects and planners and the Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) from which the funding was obtained.

Guest speaker for the occasion was recently installed District Court Judge Harvey C. Varnum whose comments emphasized the better quality of life now provided to the senior citizens of the community by Pine River Place.

Also on the program was Charlevoix native Deano Davenport who is currently athletic director at Ferris State College but who was instrumental ten years ago in securing the first lots for the project which now occupies a five-acre plot off Garfield.

Davenport pointed out that although Charlevoix is known by most for its physical beauty, the creation of Pine River Place shows that "the real beauty of Charlevoix is in its people."

Elmer J. Veen, chief of multiple housing developments in the HUD Grand Rapids office, was surpised by an announcement at the dedication that the community room would be named after him. Housing Commission member Ralph Shapton told the audience that the commission voted to name the room for Veen in gratitude for the assistance Veen lent to the project. Said Veen, "I'm speechless."

Several of the speakers Sunday lauded the Housing Commission for their many hours of volunteer work in making the housing project a reality. Commission members include President Ralph McRae, Vice-president Marjory Dunwiddie, Secretary Ralph Hamilton, Treasurer Ralph Shapton and former president Robert Cook.

At least two of the speakers, Veen and Paul Peterson, director of the Traverse City Housing Commisssion, said Pine River Place was the most outstanding facility of its kind they had ever seen.

Others on Sunday's program included Deputy Mayor Ray Wood, Housing Commission executive director Edwin Gregory, Jack VanDyke of the architectural firm of Daverman Associates, George Ross of the consulting firm of Mack & Ross, Father Dale Magoon, Rev. Walter Hastings and the Kingsmen quartet.

No new owners, but new look is in store for Castle concerts

by DAVE KNIGHT

Castle Farms has not changed hands but it is trying hard to change its image. According to owner Arthur Reibel, recent rumors about a major transaction involving the outdoor music theatre are unfounded and he has no intention of selling.

"As in other years, we have had some people express interest in the property but we've not sold it and do not plan to in the near future at least," said Reibel.

Reibel did say, however, that major changes are in store for next summer's concert season including completion of a man-made amphitheater, installation of some permanent seating and a more diverse variety of performers.

"We are planning to have only four rock and roll concerts next season," said Reibel, "The other four concerts or so will be country western and popular, middle-of-the-road type acts."

Since late summer, a massive berm has been created within the concert grounds using 50,000 cubic yards of fill dredged from Lake Charlevoix at the site of the Northwest Marina project. The berm now rises about 15 to 20 feet off ground level at the outer perimeters of the fenced area and gradually slopes inward toward the stage creating an amphitheater affect.

Reibel plans to haul in another 30,000 yards of fill boosting the outer edges about ten feet higher. The berm, which Reibel says is "99 percent sand" and not marl characteristic of some lake bottoms, will be covered with black dirt and eventually grass.

"We are debating right now whether to hydro-seed it this fall or wait until spring and sod it," said Reibel, "Either way, we plan to have grass on it by the next concert season."

Also planned for next season is a sloped area right in front of the stage with wooden bench-type seating for up to 5,000. These seats, said Reibel, will be numbered and sold on a reserved basis.

"It will be just as good as the seating at a Michigan football game," he said.

Along with the 5,000 permanent seats, the berm area behind them will provide "lawn seating" for 10,000 more. Reibel says Castle Farms could actually accomodate as many as 18,000 customers with its new arrangement but that a 15,000 capacity is more comfortably handled.

Liquor consumption at Castle Farms rock concerts has always been a sore point with opponents of the concerts. This past year, for the first time since the concerts began five years ago, no beer or wine was sold on the concert grounds. Next year, says Reibel, he will again be selling beer and wine but that will be the only alcoholic beverage allowed on the grounds. Nobody will be allowed to carry in their own.

"We think that by eliminating the coolers full of 12-packs, we will cut down on the number of people who tend to drink too much and the massive amount of litter from the concerts," said Reibel, "We will also be able to regulate its use much more carefully. Those who have obviously had too much and those underage will not be served."

Under another phase of development being considered, Castle Farms would be open weekdays during the summer season for dining and entertainment. Two restaurant arrangements are on the drawing board. One, in the large horse barn, would specialize in pizza and feature local bands for dancing. Another, in the courtyard area, would feature exclusive dining in a more subdued atmosphere.

Reibel said he also plans to blacktop all the roads inside the concert area and provide permanent restroom facilities to replace the portable toilets used in the past.

Behind all the physical improvements to the property, says Reibel, is a desire to attract a more diverse audience. Pyramid Productions, which has handled bookings for Castle Farms in recent years, will not be associated with the theater next year although some of the individuals from the agency will remain with the Castle. Chief booking coordinator Bradley Parsons will be back.

"We are not going to be just a rock and roll theater any more," Reibel said, "By providing a more comfortable atmosphere for people and bringing in top names in country and western and popular music, we plan to provide a high quality source of entertainment for the area. The community needs it; our local economy needs it."

Still pending in the courts are a suit filed by Marion Township against Castle Farms and a countersuit filed by Castle Farms against Marion Township. The township's suit claims that Castle Farms failed to meet requirements for a seasonal concert permit last spring while the Castle's countersuit maintains that Marion Township's actions have resulted in a loss of business for Castle Farms. There have been no major developments on either front recently.

Charlevoix Yesterday

This photograph, taken in 1890, shows State Street from Antrim Street in the foreground looking north. The building in the left foreground is the old Court House building, which housed County offices plus the public library, the fire department, and the jail. The steeple in the left background is the Congregational Church. The steeple in the right foreground is the old Baptist Church (located on the site of the present City Building parking lot). The steeple, in the right background is the Methodist Church. When the Village of Charlevoix was platted in 1866, it was believed that State Street would become the business street of the town, so it was made much wider than the other streets.

Mrs. Wiesinger warned Sadat six years ago

by TOM DAMMANN

On December 1, 1975 – six years ago – Charlevoixan Ethel Wiesinger wrote President Anwar Sadat of Egypt, warning him that he would be killed by his own people.

In her letter, the Austrian born woman, who will be 92 next March, wrote the man who was assassinated last Tuesday morning, expressing her approval of his purchase of American weapons.

"You will need those arms very badly, not for aggression, but for your own defense against your own people," she wrote.

In an interview this week, Mrs. Wiesinger explained that she feared for Sadat because his ideas for peace were counter to the impassioned beliefs of so many of his countrymen and co-religionists who "have blindfolds over their eyes."

"I wrote nine letters to President Sadat and received eight replies, as well as Christmas cards," she said.

Of course the letters weren't from him and they were form letters, signed by the director of his public relations, but they indicated that at least my letters were getting to his office where somebody read them."

In each of her letters Mrs. Wiesinger hammered away on two themes: the absolute need to make peace with Israel and the need to stop the dangerous spread of communism.

She used flattery, encouragement and logic in the letters, each punched out on her typewriter in English somewhat influenced in grammar by her German language background.

In a letter dated May 9, 1975, she attacked the Russians stating "The United States didn't lose a war in Vietnam, but a battle with Russia," and predicting the same situation for Egypt and the Arab world in five years.

"It is still time to stop them," she wrote. "There is still time – instead of annihilating Israel – to join them and use their brains."

In several letters she speaks of Jesus Christ (she herself is a converted Lutheran having been born Jewish) and Mohammed, as being messengers from God and suggests that he, Sadat, can be the third messenger.

"You are a man selected by God to be the greatest man of this century provided you do not perpetuate the stupidities of this century," she wrote on March 29, 1975.

On November 12, 1977, Mrs. Wiesinger urged Sadat to accept the invitation to go to Jerusalem, which he did later the same month.

"You, sir, have the chance to become the third one of their kind (Christ and Mohammed) who changed the thinking of the world.

"Go to Israel and start talking," she wrote. "Your words will be stronger than any sword. The round table will be your best battleground. Your desire for peace is sincere, therefore, you must win and you will."

Mrs. Wiesinger claims no credit (other than possible encouragement) for Sadat's action.

"It may have been a meeting of the minds," she suggested.

She wrote her last letter on December 10, 1979.

"He got along so well with President Carter, so well and everything was going so well I saw no need in writing my advice to him anymore," she explained simply.

Having lived and worked in Europe, China, San Francisco and Los Angeles, Mrs. Wiesinger came to Charlevoix in 1967 to visit her daughter, Mrs. Edith Gilbert. She saw a house which she liked, bought it and has lived in it ever since.

She says she has never written to a public figure before, despite her keen sense and knowledge of history, gained from reading, travelling, living and working in so many parts of the world.

She believes that Sadat may well have been one of the truly great men, if not the greatest, in her lifetime, at least.

'War Without Winners' to be shown here

"War Without Winners" is the title of a film to be shown at First Congregational Church on Sunday, October 18, at 6:30. The film was produced for the Center for Defense Information in cooperation with the Members of Congress for Peace Through Education Fund. Unlike most nuclear war films which are an appeal to fear, "Way Without Winners" is an appeal to reason. It is people expressing their thoughts about the future in an age of nuclear weapons capable of destroying civilization.

Following the film a proposal for a National Peace Academy will be presented. It offers an alternative to reliance on military power as the only response to situations of international conflict.

There is no charge for this program and everyone is invited.

Knight on the Town

Are hydrants deficient?

by Dave Knight

It seems strange that a city located on an isthmus between two lakes should worry about having enough water available to fight a major fire. But that is a growing concern in Charlevoix following a major fire at the LexaLite manufacturing plant in August and some spot testing of fire hydrants in the central city that has revealed potential water volume deficiencies.

In their own tests, city firemen have found the water volume provided by several downtown hydrants may possibly be far below a level considered neccessary to fight a major fire.

The department has tested 14 hydrants so far, four on Bridge St. downtown, six on Belvedere Ave. and four in the Pine River Lane area. To calculate gallons of water per minute from each hydrant, a hose was connected from the hydrant to the department's 3,400 gallon truck and the time kept on how long it took the truck to fill.

While the hydrant on Bridge and Antrim took only four minutes to fill the 3,400 gallon tank for a gallons-per-minute figure of 850, the hydrant on the west end of W. Dison Ave. took 23 minutes to fill the tank for a rate of only 148 gallons per minute.

The Bridge and Antrim hydrant test of 850 gallons per minute was by far the highest of all tested; tests on the other three hydrants downtown, at the Bridge St. intersections of Mason, Clinton and Park Sts., averaged 366 gallons per minute. Hyrants on Belvedere averaged 482 gallons per minute and those on Pine River Lane and W. Dixon, which serve several condominium units unequipped with sprinkler systems, averaged only 242 gallons per minute.

Doug Bergmann, president of the Volunteer Firemen's Association for the city and chairman of a committee recently established to study local fire fighting capability, says the volume levels are dangerously low for an area with as much property value and as many jobs at stake as the central city.

A staff member of the State Fire Safety Board contacted in Lansing last week said that, although the sufficiency of flow rates depend on many factors, a range of 500 to 1,000 gallons per minute is generally considered advisable for a business district.

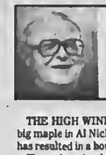
We are still waiting for the Insurance Services Office to respond to our request for the "fire flow rates" assigned to the hydrants in question. The ISO is a private rating agency that computes fire flow rates for specific city blocks based on several factors including cubic feet in building space involved.

What's the problem with the hydrants? Nobody is entirely sure. Utility superintendent Ed Whitley says that, although an eight-inch water main serves Bridge St., not all the tap-ins to hydrants are eight inches in diameter; some are six and four inches. He also points out that the eight-inch main serves an area of especially heavy use: "The Valley" and the southeast part of the city. During periods of heavy use, the draw off the Bridge St. main is substantial. The age of this plumbing must also be considered; some of the city's mains date back decades to when the utilities were first installed and may be constricted by mineral deposits or other substances.

To replace or repair the whole hydrant system, which would require the ripping up of almost the whole downtown, is out of the question. What Bergmann's committee will study is whether a new, large capacity pumper and a large diameter hose of 2,000 feet or more could be used to draw water to crucial areas of the central city from either Round Lake or Lake Michigan.

Serving on the committee are representitives of several interests including fire chief John Curtis, City Council member James Block, downtown store owner Jeannine Wallace, industrialist Don Hulford, firemen Barry Wood and Bob Geer and local residents Condit Drury and James Elliott.

Only a few months ago, one would have a hard time getting anybody in Charlevoix worried about the potential for a major fire. Now, it is not so difficult.



Clockwise

Wanted: One hollow tree

by Bob Clock

THE HIGH WIND a few weeks ago that toppled the big maple in Al Nickamin's backyard on Dixon Avenue has resulted in a housing shortage of sorts.

The red squirrel who lost everything when the tree snapped in the middle of his living room has now taken up residence in the walls of the Nickamins' house. He can be heard scurrying around the rafters and between the floor joists at all hours.

The Nickamins discovered where he entered the house and blocked it off. Then they realized that his entrance probablyserves as his exit as well and opened it up again.

If you have any ideas on how to get squirrels to vacatesuch cozy premises in mid-October, pass them along. The Nickamins have no intention of sharing their home with a squirrel. However, they don't want to hurt him; they just want him to leave.

What is needed, of course, is 'another hollow tree stocked with acorns. But every hollow tree in the neighborhood already has a nest of squirrels in residence.

THE CLOCKS stopped at Pine River Place Sunday for the dedication of Charlevoix's new senior citizen residence and were surprised to find there was standing-room-only in the ample community room and lobby. Apparently a number of Charlevoixans were interested in having a first-hand look at where they could well spend their so-called "golden years."

Since seating was at a premium, we skipped the formal program and began inspecting the model apartments. They are tastefully decorated and far larger than I expected, with nice, big rooms, loads of storage space, ceramic tile baths, modern kitchens, scenic vistas out of every window and other amenities you don't find in many private homes.

Judy was impressed with the bright and cheerful laundry room on the second floor front — with a skylight, window-wall and balcony. The machines, incidentally, are not coin-operated models. They are free to residents of Pine River Place.

The building includes 53 one-bedroom units for singles and couples; six one-bedroom units equipped for the handicapped; two two-bedroom units for the handicapped; and one two-bedroom unit for the custodians.

The custodians, incidentally, are Jeff And Glenda Wilhelm, who were married just last week at the Eastport Baptist Church — making Pine River Place a honeymoon cottage of sorts. Glenda (she is the daughter of the Chester Farrells, owners of Villa Moderne Motel) and Jeff recently bought the Shear Happiness beauty salon — so they have their work cut out for them.

If I have any criticism of Pine River Place, it is that the hallways were too warm. Of course, senior citizens seem to like things warmer than we children in our 50's.

O.K, I WANT THE entire Sophomore Class at Charlevoix High School to stand up and repeat after me: S-O-P-H-O-M-O-R-E. Traditionally, there are three "O's" in sophomore — including one between the soph and the more. And that's the one that was omitted in the gigantic sign on the Sophomore Class float in Friday's homecoming parade. Picky, picky, picky.

Letters: Movie has important message

Dear Editor:

In the "Reasoner Report", Sept. 14, Harry Reasoner claimed that the neutron bomb is a waste of the taxpayers' money because no nation is going to be deterred by a bomb that just kills people but doesn't hurt buildings or property. People always get killed in wars, so what's so terrible about a neutron bomb? Better we should spend our money developing a bomb that wouldn't hurt people at all but would totally destroy everything else! Who could face the prospect of living totally without possessions?

Mr. Reasoner's preposterous suggestion was intended to point up a national characteristic that we'd prefer to believe does not apply to us. Is it possible that we value possessions more than human life?

Supposedly the race to stay ahead in the development and production of nuclear weapons makes the world more secure. Actually the main reasons why the arms race continues are economic. Armaments are big business. Enormous numbers of jobs depend on the arms industry. Billions of dollars worth of business is done annually by the U.S. arms industry. Enormous profits are made selling arms to other countries, so that all over the world, people can kill each other with American-made weapons. Do we value profits more than human life? What if the profits were theirs and the lives being destroyed were ours? Isn't it time we got our priorities straight?

President Eisenhower said "In the councils of government we must guard against the acquisition of unwarrented influence, whether sought or unsought, by the military industrial complex." In spite of that warning the milltary budget continues to increase every year, even under an admisstration that is asking for drastic cuts in other government programs.

On Sunday October 18, a film "War Without Winners" will be shown at the Charlevoix First Congregational Church at 8:30 P.M. There is no charge to see it and everyone is welcome. The film was made by the Center for Defense Information in cooperation with the Members of Congress for Peace Through Education Fund. "War Without Winners" is an appeal to reason. After seeing it, perhaps you too will question the course our government is pursuing in the name of "national security".

Handbell choirs from all over seek Bill Aten's help

by PEG OHLE

Have you ever heard an English Handbell Choir? Have you ever known anyone who rings an English Handbell? Have you ever met anyone who repairs English Handbells?

Meet William "Bill" Aten of Boyne City.

Aten is an English Handbell repairman, a trade he learned as a boy from his father. His business card bears the name of his father, G. Avery Aten, as founder and carries the slogan, "A Tradition in Craftsmanship".

Now the senior Aten has retired and his son carries on the very specialized business in his garage in Boyne City.

Bill Aten tells how it all started:

"When I was young we belonged to a church with a Handbell Choir. Father taught industrial arts and when a bell needed maintenance, he took care of it. Before that, they used to send the bells back to England where they were made.

"The director of our Handbell Choir was active in the organization of bell choirs and told them about my father. That gave him national publicity and was the beginning of our business. We're still the only people in business in this country who repair English bells."

But not just any English bells — only Whitechapel Bells, made by the foundry in London that gave the world Big Ben and the Liberty Bell.

"There are close to 15,000 Handbell Choirs in the world," Aten explains, "but only about 3,000 of them are Whitechapel Handbell Choirs. My father visited the Whitechapel Foundry in London. It still has dirt floors and leather-driven lathes. One laborer works on a single set of bells. Production is slow so customers have to wait about three years for their orders to be completed. That probably accounts for the popularity of domestic bells. But I believe Whitechapels are still the best. They have pride of workmanship and we try to carry on with it."

The Atena have repaired Whitechapel Handbells for people in every state of the Union with the exception of Alaska, but most of them come from New England, where Bell Choirs abound, according to Bill Aten. He knows of three Bell Choirs in northern Michigan — two in Traverse City and one at the Presbyterian Church in Petoskey, but they do not use Whitechapel Handbells. There have also been handbell seminars at Bay View, he says.

One of Aten's most unusual jobs was repairing a set of handbells that were discovered in a cave in Pennsylvania. He completely refurbished them and the owners had them engraved and given to family members.

The average set of handbells consists of 37 bells and costs about $4,000, Aten says. A more complete set is 81 bells covering five octaves and ranging in size from 12 inches in diameter at the crown down to one and a half inches.

What happens to handbells that requires repairing? Aten lists some of the repair jobs: The bells have leather handles which wear out and must be replaced. The clappers have spring mechanisms which need tuning. The pins they swivel on wear out. The bells come with catgut pins which are usually replaced with longer-wearing nylons pins. The clapper mechanism may need fine tuning.

Since White Chapel Handbells are handmade and are all individual, parts for them are not interchangeable. The parts have to be custom made, Aten explains, which is not the case with domestic bells.

Teachers to learn CPR

by ANNE KELLY

Ron Cox practices on an infant model.

You are dining with your husband at your favorite restaurant. A lady at the next table suddenly clutches at her throat. She cannot speak, cough or breathe. Everyone around her panics and makes no move to help. What would you do?

It's a rainy night. You are driving back from a party in Petoskey. Your headlights pick up what appears to be the scene of a recent accident. A single car has apparently skidded off the road and rolled over into a ditch. The victim, a teenaged boy is unconscious. You cannot feel a pulse. What would you do?

Your wife has left you in charge of your two week old infant and has gone out to a meeting at school. The evening is uneventful until suddenly, the baby, who has been laid in an infant seat, makes strange jerking motions, reddens in the face but makes no sound. He appears to be choking or at least not getting any air. What would you do?

Teachers and other building personnel in the Charelvoix Schools have learned what they might do in just such emergencies. Hopefully the C.P.R. (Cardiac Pulmonary Resuscitation) training course presented at their respective buildings this week, will enable them to act more quickly and confidently should a crisis occur in their presence. There are about 4-6 minutes in which to act to save a person's life in any of the above situations, perhaps less in the Aten does his repair work with handtools adapted for specific uses by his father and himself. "You have to be creative," he says of his work. He also says that being a handbell repairman is more of a hobby than a business with him. "I couldn't live on what I make on the bells," he confesses.

Aten's "real job" is Youth Diversionary Program Director for the Charlevoix County Department of Social Services. He repairs his handbells during evening hours and on weekends and limits the work he takes in because he doesn't want to lose interest in it.

Most Handbell Choirs are in churches, and these handbells need repairing about once every eight years, Aten has found. However, the bells that are used in school Handbell Choirs receive more use and usually need some repair work about every two years.

Handbell Choirs are used in schools to teach the reading of music, Aten explains. Also, ringing handbells doesn't take any musical training and anyone can be part of a group that plays music.

"The popularity of Handbell Choirs began to increase about 25 years ago and still continues," Aten says, "and most of the new choirs are youth choirs."

To keep abreast of trends in Handbell Choirs, Aten attends the national convention of Handbell Choir Directors. He brings home what he has learned to his two associates: his 17-year-old stepson, Ed Boyer, who does all the polishing of bells for the business, and his wife, Maxine, who does "all sorts of jobs".

because, "we have no place to reprocess."

Loomis pointed out that the only reprocessing plant now operating is a government facility in South Carolina.

"We do not think we can use the government facility," Loomis said. "And it will take years for a private facility to be contructed."

"If it (reprocessing) goes to private industry, there will still be a question of nuclear waste," Loomis added.

Loomis revealed he had spoken with members of the Atomic Industrial Forum in Washington, D.C., Friday morning about the question of private reprocessing plants. "The AIF says there is no organized effort to get together on the idea of a private reprocessing center," Loomis reported.

"So nothing is changed at Big Rock," he concluded.

GEM WISE
JEWELRY FASHIONS, FACTS, FICTION

TOPAZ ISN'T WHAT IT USED TO BE
Colleen Titsworth
Manager
History tells us that hundreds of years ago Topazios was a fog enshrouded island in the Red Sea where pirates of old often landed. As the sailors searched for drinking water, they sometimes stumbled upon bright yellowish green pebbles to add to their coffers. These also were called "Topazios," Greek for "to guess."
The island and the gemstones were probably given their names because the fog made them so difficult to find. These first gemstones to be called topaz, however, were probably not what we know today by that name. Most likely they were peridot, and the island was probably St. John's Island, a location known to be rich in this greenish-yellow gem.
For many centuries all yellowish stones were called topaz. The gem we call topaz today was then qualified as "Brazilian topaz" or "Saxony topaz."
Why all the confusion? Well, the early names given to gems were based on their color, appearance or surroundings. Modern scientists have more sophisticated ways of classifying minerals. They consider their chemical composition and physical and optical characteristics.
The mineral now called topaz is a fluosilicate of aluminum. The most familiar colors range from yellowish-brown to red. The gem also occurs in a colorless variety and a light greenish-blue which resembles aquamarine.
If you are interested in this or any other gems, I welcome questions any time. Just like any other person who loves his or her work, I've got lots of tales (and facts) to tell.

Rayders delight Homecoming crowd with impressive 21-14 win over Gaylord

Though there have been suspicions since the beginning of the season, the Charlevoix Rayders brought it wide out into the open Friday night.

They are a darn good football team with the conference championship well within reach and a playoff bid not totally out of the question.

Friday's homecoming game saw Charlevoix grind out a 21-14 victory over the Gaylord Blue Devils in a classic struggle. Despite penalties that cost them 115 yards and two touchdowns, Charlevoix played consistently well in crucial situations to log the win.

The Rayders' explosive offense mixed hard running with a potent passing attack to amass 15 first downs to the Blue Devils' 6. Fullback Mark Beaudoin carried 26 times for 127 yards and a 4.8 yards-per-carry average while quarterback Scott Kelly struck on 9 of 14 passes for 186 yards and two touchdowns.

Beaudoin and Mike Loper led an inspired defense with 11 and 10 tackles respectively while Ken Spegel had nine solos and Craig Klooster six.

The first quarter saw both defenses rise to the occasion with neither team able to put any points on the board.

With 11:53 remaining in the second quarter, Kelly hit end Craig Klooster with a 49-yard scoring pass and Mark Morgan tacked on the conversion for a 7-0 Charlevoix lead.

A couple minutes later Klooster pulled in a crucial interception at the nine but Gaylord managed to hold and got the ball back. After a long pass play from their own 48 to the Charlevoix 25, Gaylord struck paydirt with a TD pass from Ron Sides to a leaping Mike O'Connor in the corner of the endzone and an extra point kick by Sides which tied the game 7-7.

In the third quarter, Beaudoin had the first of two touchdowns called back as his apparent seven-yard scoring run was nullified by an illegal motion call. Kelly came right back, however, with a 13-yard pass to Ross Carey for the touchdown. Morgan added the 14th point.

The Blue Devils roared back with a long pass from Kurt Kakavista to Brad Bureau to tie the game at 14-14.

Not long after, Beaudoin broke away from about his own 40-to score on a beautiful run but his efforts were again frustrated by a penalty, this time an illegal block. With 8:24 remaining in the game, Kelly lofted a long, high pass which Klooster had to come back for between two defenders and snare on the Gaylord one yard line. From that point a couple of plays later, Jeff Morgridge pounded in for the go-ahead touchdown and Morgan made it three for three kicking the extra point.

Three excellent defensive plays told the story of the rest of the game. Darrin Podskalny killed a Gaylord drive with 6:40 left on the clock when he pounced on a Gaylord fumble at the Blue Devil 28 and Klooster made a great open field tackle following a Charlevoix punt. Carey closed the book on Gaylord with a broken-up screen pass on the Blue Devils last chance with 16 seconds left and 4th down on their own 45.

The Rayders are now 3-0 in the Michigan-Huron Shores standings and will face their biggest obstacle left on the schedule Friday when they travel to the home field of perennial conference power Cheboygan.

STATE OF THE SCHOOLS REPORT

Once again the taxpayers of the Charlevoix Public Schools renewed the operating millage, assuring a well balanced educational program for the youth of our community. Due to declining enrollment, the board of education has adjusted the teaching and administrative staff accordingly. This has enabled the board to keep a balanced budget with the same millage rate.

Through various committees and a community survey, the board has received input from the citizens of our school district. This information has been used to establish board of education goals, to set a discipline policy, and to make curriculum changes.

If you have questions regarding the school operation or would like to visit the schools, please call 547-6972. Your support is appreciated.

Teachers learn CPR

second instance, because we are not sure how long ago the accident occured.

Following a film depicting facts and situations created to illustrate the technique of C.P.R., volunteers were called upon to demonstrate on life-size models. "Resuscitation Annie" (who makes the rounds of just such training sessions) and her infant-sized counterpart, afforded an idea of what it feels like to perform the procedure on human beings. Even minus the panic of the moment that would be present in a real-life situation, participants found that the skills require knowledge and practice.

Briefly summarized, the program presented the ABC's of resuscitation: (A) Airways: how to tilt the head back so as to open the airways making sure there are no obstructions; (B) Breathing: how to check for signs of breathing, if none, then how to administer four quick breaths with nose sealed off; (C) Circulation: how to check for pulse, if none, how to begin actual CPR alternating chest compression with mouth-to-mouth breathing.

The importance of differentiating between choking victims and heart attack victims was discussed. A choking victim cannot speak, cough or breathe. The methods of dealing with both choking and heart attack victims, and their resuscitation, were demonstrated on the dummies.

Directing the program were Tom Loudenslager and Val Avery, CPR instructors from Big Rock Point.

Council reviewed the Minutes of the Charlevoix Compensation Commission dated September 29, 1981, which recommended salaries to be set for the elected officials of the City.

Moved by Councilman Muma and supported by Councilman Wood to set a Public Hearing for 8:00 P.M., on October 19, 1981 regarding a request for a Commercial Facilities Tax Exemption Certificate as requested by Michael Barnard for his proposed commercial project at the corner of Ferry and Stover Roads.

Motion was adopted by the following yea and nay vote:

Yeas: Councilmembers Muma, Block, Porter, Timms, Roloff, and Wood. Nays: None. Absent: None.

Council briefly discussed a letter from Gove Associates regarding the possibility of obtaining a Community Development Block Grant for construction of a parking facility in the City.

Dawson Way, a member of the General Public present, asked Council to consider returning to him a portion of the cost of an electrical extension to his Sugar Bush Knoll development. He stated that the City's policy of having a developer pay 100% of the cost of an extension is not consistent with other electrical service units in the area. Mayor Supernaw stated that the City had at one time offered a rebate on extensions but that current policy is for the developer to pay 100% of the cost. The Council generally agreed to uphold this policy.

A proposed Resolution governing procedures for development plans, rezoning and zoning permits was tabled for further discussion at the next regular Committee of the Whole meeting.

Moved by Councilman Porter and supported by Councilman Block to authorize the City Clerk to sign a lease with the United States Coast Guard for City dock space in 1981-82.

Motion was adopted by the following yea and nay vote:

Yeas: Councilmembers Muma, Block, Porter, Timms, Roloff, and Wood. Nays: None. Absent: None.

Moved by Councilman Muma and supported by Councilman Timms to authorize the Acting City Manager to sign a contract with Gourdie Fraser and Associates for engineering of Phase IV of the City Harbor Project involving sidewalk replacement and to further authorize the Acting City Manager to take bids on the project and to have a survey prepared of the City property involved.

Motion was adopted by the following yea and nay vote:

Yeas: Councilmembers Muma, Block, Porter, Timms, Roloff and Wood. Nays: None. Absent: None.

Council generally agreed that all meter tests requested by the General Public must be paid for in advance.

The Council having examined bills totaling $106,046.54 find them correct and recommend the bills be allowed.

Moved by Councilman Porter and supported by Councilman Timms that the bills be approved and orders drawn for their amount.

Motion was adopted by the following yea and nay vote:

Motion was adopted by the following yea and nay vote:

Yeas: Councilmembers Block, Porter, Timms, Roloff, and Wood. Nays: Councilman Muma. Absent: None.

Moved by Councilwoman Roloff and supported by Councilman Porter to approve two variances as requested by Donald and Joyce Brown to reduce the rear yard setback requirement from 25 ft. to 2 ft. and the E. side yard setback from 25 ft. to 22 ft. at their property at 501 Newman St. to allow construction of a garage, approval being granted due to the unique feature of the small lot being bordered by streets on three sides.

Cowboys maintain lead in flag football league with win

The Cowboys continued to lead the Flag Football League following action Wednesday when the team defeated the Saints 26-0. In a second game the Seahawks held on to second place with a 14-12 win over the Steelers.

On Tuesday, the league will close out its six-game schedule when the Seahawks meet the Saints at 6 p.m. and the Cowboys and the Steelers meet at 7:15 p.m.

Kevin Pearsall scored on 10 and three yard runs and Jeff Arnold scored a conversion to give the Cowboys a 13-0 halftime lead before Jody Putman got off a seven yard scoring pass to Brian Wilmot and later scored on a 10 yard pass interception for the lopsided win. Pearsall addded a conversion following the Putman to Wilmot play to account for the 26 points.

In the Seahawk victory, Deano Drost romped to a 14 yard scoring play to put his team on the board with John Loder adding the conversion for a 7-0 lead early in the game. Jim Morgridge got the Steelers back in the game with a 38 yard kick-off return but the conversion was missed as the Steelers trailed 7-6. Later in the first period, Loder scored on a six yard run and added the conversion to give the Seahawks the advantage going into the second period when Morgridge trimmed their margin to two points on a 22 yard run. Loder, on an 18 yard pass play to Drost, put the game away for the Seahawks in the final period.

The Cowboys lead the league with a 4-0 record; the Seahawks are in second with a 2-2 record; the Steelers in third place with a 1-2-1 record and the Saints with an 0-3-1 record.

Seek V-ball, B-ball teams for city leagues

Dwight Boss, Charlevoix Recreation director, has issued a call for more volleyball as well as basketball teams following an organizational meeting Thursday.

In the volleyball program, he said there were 10 women's teams with room for two more; two men's teams and a need for four more and three mixed teams and a need for five more.

The independent basketball program has attracted seven teams, three B league teams and four A league teams. A minimum of five more are needed to round out the leagues, he said.

Volleyball is played nightly Monday through Thursday of every week at the Elementary school gymnasium.

Independent basketball is usually played Monday, Wednesday and Thursday night at the middle school gymnasium.

Deadline for entering any of the leagues is Oct. 23. At this time, fees must be paid.

Entry forms may be obtained at the treasurer's office on the first floor, at the city hall.

More information may be obtained by calling Boss at 547-9098.

All Savers Certificate

Get up to $2,000.00 Tax-Free Interest at Family Federal Savings.

These new one year certificates will allow you to exclude the interest from your State of Michigan and federal income tax—up to $2,000.00 on a joint return and $1,000.00 on an individual return. The minimum deposit required on the All-Savers Certificate is $500.00. The interest rate will be 70% of the average investment yield for 52-week U.S. Treasury Bills. The Treasury Bill rate changes every fourth Thursday, and the All-Savers Certificate rate changes on the next Monday following the fourth Thursday. This account is insured to $100,000.00 by the FSLIC.

It's what's left after taxes that counts.

An exact comparison of the tax-free interest rate on All-Savers Certificates with the rate of return on taxable investments, of course, depends upon an individual's complete income tax situation. You may wish to consult your tax advisor for this purpose. However, in general terms it can be said that an All-Savers Certificate paying 10% could have an equivalent taxable rate of as much as 20% for a taxpayer in the 50% tax bracket.

Federal regulations require a substantial interest penalty and loss of interest exclusion in the event of early withdrawal

by ANNE KELLY

Kindergarten students at Charlevoix Elementary school have everything going for them this year. There are three fine Kindergarten teachers on the faculty: Mrs. Smith who couples experience with a kindly manner and gentle firmness, Becky Berg whose genuine loving concern for her students became a trademark of her reputation as an excellent first grade instructor, and Diane Boss, second year Kindergarten teacher, who emits the kind of contagious enthusiasm that makes you wish that you were 5 years old again.

I visited Diane in her classroom after school last week. She was surrounded by freshly gathered and arranged leaf pictures, the by-product of a morning walk in the woods with her class.

We talked briefly about her training and professional backround. Diane received her degree in elementary education from Michigan State University, after having completed her first two years of college at NCMC. An interesting diversion from normal studies was 3 months spent student teaching in an American school in Belgium during her senior year at State. She has been with our schools since Sept. of 1976, substituting in the elementary and middle schools, serving as administrative assistant to Mr. Raymer, and Title I co-ordinator. Prior to teaching Kindergarten, mid-year by another Diane assumed a 2nd grade position vacated present position, Diane believes that "the kids have to feel good about themselves before they're willing to put forth effort." Therefore she is an advocate of lots of positive reinforcement.

Teacher Feature

Diane Boss

"The kids have to have a positive self image," she explained. There's so much that they must learn when they begin school in the fall. They are apprehensive about so many things. Sometimes they are upset and afraid. They have to adjust to a whole new social world. They have to learn how to use a "public" bathroom. They have to go home on the bus. They really know very little about rules.

"It's fun to teach Kindergarten because the kids are so unin hibited," she continued. A Kindergarten teacher must teach the music, art and physical education along with everything else. This makes for a total learning experience and the teacher does well if she gets in there and enjoys everything right along with them.

By Spring, these little ones will have progressed by giant steps into socially well rounded little people. They will be more independent, have learned how to follow directions and have a knowledge of letters, sounds and numbers. Some will already have begun to read.

It's no wonder that Kindergarten requires a special breed of teacher--like Diane Boss.

Hunt now on the job as new city manager

by DAVE KNIGHT

Robert A. Hunt was officially appointed to the post of City Manager by the Charlevoix City Council Monday night. Hunt assumed the position Monday having moved to Charlevoix last week from Steamboat Springs, Colorado where he held the post of assistant city manager.

His expertise was immediately sought by the council as they deliberated over a proposed zoning amendment that would levy a fee of $2,000 per parking space needed for any new business or intensified current business in the Central Business District unable to provide on-site parking.

The funds generated by the fee would be dedicated to a special fund to create more municipal parking downtown, according to Planning Commission Chairman David Strawbridge who spoke in favor of the amendment at the meeting.

Hunt pointed out that similar policies have been used successfully in other cities but that it is only an initial measure toward easing the parking squeeze in the downtown area.

"I don't see anything wrong with passing this amendment now," said Hunt, "It is a good first step but you should then come back with a mechanism to solve the problem."

Council member Shirley Roloff objected to the penalizing of new businesses and said that the parking problem involved the entire downtown business community and should thus be funded by a more equitable means.

The council tabled the matter to allow further study of the amendment in a work session.

Two other ordinance amendments did pass, however, with little trouble.

One changed the wording in the zoning ordinance pertaining to non-conforming lots of record so that variances for such lots "may" be granted instead of "shall" be granted. The amendment, explained Strawbridge, is meant to give the council more flexibility in granting variances for non-conforming lots. The interpretation of the previous wording was recently used by Donald Berlage to seek a sideyard set-back variance for a carport aside his Michigan Ave. home. Though the variance was denied, the carport was built and a December court date has been set for a city suit, charging Berlage with a zoning ordinance violation. The amendment passed unanimously.

The council also unanimously approved an amendment to the weed control ordinance that will pass along to the property owner the full cost of the city crew cutting any noxious weeds not sufficiently controlled by the property owner. The ordinance previously put a limit of $25 on how much the city could charge.

Michael Barnard, who was granted site plan approval last month for his plans to establish a party store-lounge-motel at the corner of Ferry Avenue and Stover Road, appeared before the council Monday night to seek a Commerical Facilities Exemption for the project. Under the plan sought by Barnard, property taxes would be computed on the basis of 50 percent of the equalized valuation for the next 12 years.

Said Barnard, "I would like to start the project today but the economy is not condusive to building. I had hoped that interest rates would have started to come down by now but they haven't."

Barnard also told the council that without the exemption, he would wait to start the project "for some other inducement", such as a lower prime interest rate which, he said, may be as long as three years away. The first step to granting a tax exemption is to form a Commercial Redevelopment District which Barnard also sought in tandem with the CFE.

Council members voted 5-1, with Mrs. Roloff dissenting, to form the redevelopment district. They then voted 4-2, with Mrs. Roloff and James Block casting nay votes, to grant Barnard a compromise exemption for a period of six years.

In other action, the council:

-Accepted the resignation of Ralph McRae from the Housing Commission, which he chaired, and approved the issuance of a certificate of appreciation to McRae. Mayor Sam Supernaw said that appointment of a replacement will be made at a later meeting.

-Set Monday, November 2 as the date for a public hearing on a proposed sign ordinance.

-Granted a variance request by Robert Cooper, 1027 May St., for front and sideyard setbacks to accomodate a garage.

GETTING THE BALL ROLLING is Thomas Thimm, left, of the Medusa Cement Company who presented Charlevoix United Way Vice President Dick Kenney with a check for $2,600. The check represents Medusa's corporate donation to the United Way 1981 fund drive which is now underway. With the industrial and commercial drives currently being conducted, plans are now being made for the door-to-door residential drive scheduled for the evening of October 29. Couples to participate are still being sought. Those interested are asked to contact Chairman Beverly Plumm for more information.

County Board votes .4 mill tax break for 1981 levy

Taxpayers in Charlavoix County will get a break this year to the tune of a .4 mill reduction in the general tax levy. The County Board of Commissioners voted 13-1, with only Thomas Breakey of East Jordan opposed, to reduce the county tax levy from 4.55 mills to 4.15 at their regular meeting last Wednesday.

Concerns over possible cuts in services provided by the county were allayed by members of the Ways and Means Committee who stated that the 1982 budget, with the millage reduction, would be sufficient to maintain neccessary services.

By reducing the general tax levy by .4 mills, the board will cut the amount of tax revenue by approximately $134,000.

Temporary restraining order lifted; Michigan National Bank North opens

Michigan National Bank North's Charlevoix branch opened for business Monday morning following the lifting of a restraining order that had prevented the branch from opening for over a month.

According to Michigan National Bank North President Larry Maddox, Judge Richard A. Ensien lifted the temporary restraining order and remanded the bank's application for a charter back to the federal Comptroller for re-examination.

The restraining order had been in effect since September 4 when it was sought by the Charlevoix County State Bank to prevent the MNBN branch from opening September 8 as orignally planned.

Reached Monday, Maddox had not received full details of Judge Ensien's action and had no further comment.

Parents go back to Middle School for a night

by ANNE KELLY

Middle School Principal Dave Smith, at a preliminary assembly before a parent walk-through of the school last Monday evening, had much to tell parents about their 11 to 13 year-old sons or daughters.

His remarks were centered on the growth syndrome of the pre-adolescent adolescent student: what he's like, what his school day is like and finally how the sturcture and discipline of the Middle School is geared to guide him through these years.

"The Middle School student is outgrowing his old self," explained Mr. Smith. "He has a bigger body, new teeth, a new building, and a whole new set of experiences to adjust to when he arrives at Middle School." He is involved in the intricate process of intellectual and emotional growth. His situation is unique. He has to contend with himself, with family pressures, and with peers during this unstable time. He tends to view his world through his own self-concept. And there's times that he doesn't like himself.

GETTING A MANICURE is Middle School Principal Dave Smith as part of a demonstration on proper nail care for men and boys. The demonstration was in Mrs. Barbara Bump's sixth grade home economics class which has been studying personal hygiene in a health unit. Guest speaker for the topic was Debbie Belanger from Shear Happiness.

A large part of the maturation process is learnig how to fit into sex roles. Since this is an age in which anything they're interested in is explored, the Middle School curriculum is striving to foster a unisex interest in such areas as shop and home economics by requiring all students to be exposed to these subjects.

He cites as the main objective of his staff: to help each student discipline himself and to provide a constancy which will facilitate that purpose. He and his teachers will hopefully provide role models for the students.

Parents then were asked to follow their child's schedule class by class through a "mini-day". I, too, am a middle school parent. Up and down stairways and corridors, hurrying to get to our next class before the bell, we simulated some of the activities which make up a typical day for our Middle Schoolers.

How does a middle school student view his own day? I asked the sixth and seventh grade students in our house to describe a typical day. Amy, age eleven, is in the sixth grade, and this is how her day hums along:

"Middle school has lockers and bells to know when I got to the next class. I knew before Middle School that it was going to be different. I get up for school at 6:30. I get dressed and eat breakfast and everything else that is necessary in the morning. I think getting up is very hard but after you get up it's not so bad. To get out at 2:30 is a lot better than 3:30. When I get to school I go to my locker, put my things in and just take what I need. My first hour class is math. We have been doing review on multiplication and soon will be in division. 2nd hour is reading and our main work is reading modules, a kind of test that has many lessons in each one. 3rd hour is back to our homeroom class for English and Science. In English we are working on nouns and adjectives and in science, we are doing chemistry. Soon we will be making papier mache models of the molecules. Band is right before lunch. After lunch is writing skills where we either do handwriting practice or work on poems and stories. We are working on a class paper that we will share with the other sixth graders. Social studies comes next. We are studying Mexico, its history and present. When I get home I do my homework (which is a drag) practice my flute for ½ hour every day until it comes time to make my lunch and get ready for bed and read until I get tired."

Our 12 year old, Scott, is in seventh grade. (Scott is more to the point).

First I have English. We do workbooks, read or take spelling tests. Next comes band. Then social studies. We work in packets and take tests, have discussions etc. Then I have Phys. Ed. Right now we're working on football skills. By lunch time I'm hungry and wish I had packed a bigger lunch. But I'm usually full after Home Ec. (We cook in there). Finally there's Math and Science. We're studying the skeleton. Then comes afternoon, free at last from all those hours of labor in the classroom. It's nice to come home to a nice glass of cold milk.

I noticed all the parents happy to get to "lunchtime" which was coffee and cookies served in the cafeteria. I was just happy I didn't have any homework to do when I got home!.

Local photographer-historian Bob Miles believes that this is the oldest picture of Charlevoix in existence. It shows the first steel swing bridge to span the channel from Lake Michigan to Round Lake. Operated by hand, it was built in 1878, painted a brilliant vermilion, and served until 1901, when the second steel bridge was built.

Sports medicine to be topic at hospital for coaches, parents, athletes

Sports Medicine – conditioning to diet – will be the topic at Charlevoix Area Hospital's free public monthly discussion session, Tuesday October 27, at 7:30 p.m. in the hospital's classroom.

Dr. Richard Mansfield, of Boyne City, will be joined by hospital dietician Diane Charlebois, in the meeting, which is especially designed for athletes – student and adult – coaches, and parents.

"We think student athletes and adult joggers, tennis players, skiers, racquet ball players and so on, will find this valuable," Ms. Charlebois said recently.

Dr. Mansfield will present ideas on conditioning, how to deal with multiple field injuries, warming up and cooling off techniques, among other topics.

The physician will point out that certain minor injuries are best handled immediately and if they are, will eliminate the necessity of bringing the problem to the hospital. He will focus on such problems as dislocated shoulders and strains in this portion of his presentation.

Ms. Charlebois will separate fact from fiction in the discussion of foods and conditioning.

"It is false, for example," she said, "to think that filling up with proteins just before a game will be helpful."

"On the other hand, it is true one should have a high carbohydrate diet for two or three days before a big game and eat lightly just before the game."

Another misconception, she said, is the idea one shouldn't drink much liquid before an athletic event. On the contrary, the dietician explained, "one should stay well hydrated, drink plenty of liquids to replace what will be lost."

The Sports Medicine session, Tuesday, Oct. 27, is expected to attract a large crowd to the hospital's classroom on the lower level of the new wing.

Organizers request that reservations be made by Monday, October 26th, by calling the hospital switchboard and providing the name and telephone number of expected participants.

The Sports Medicine gathering is one of a continuing series of programs presented to the people served by Charlevoix Area Hospital, by the Health Education Committee composed of hospital professional staff.

Future programs include a two-day CPR (cardio-pulmonary ressuscitation) Training course, Monday and Tuesday, November 9 and 10, from 6 to 10 p.m. Reservations will also be necessary for this two-day class. It will be taught by RNs Arlene Brady and Mary Ann Cox, and hospital Respiratory Therapist Jan Ballard.

In mid-November the hospital will offer a home fire safety training class. The exact date and time will be announced later.

Tower power

by Dave Knight

What shall we do with the old water tower?

Now that Charlevoix is to be serviced by a sleek 1981 model, we are left with a sturdy old beast that guards the entrance to the harbor just as the Colossus stood watch over ancient Greece. Propped up on spindly legs wearied by their burden of so many years, the old tower has watered many a lawn, diluted many a shot of bourbon and provided baths for several generations of Charlevoixans.

The old tower predates both the monolithic Medusa plant and the aseptic green new tower as the community's most recognizeable landmark. To mariners approaching from the west and land travelers from the eastern hills, the old tower has traditionally been the first to bid fond welcome to the friendly environs of Charlevoix.

But the years have taken their toll on this steel senior citizen. Its arteries have hardened and its belly can no longer provide enough capacity for our growing city. Having faithfully served its purpose for so many years, the time has come for its retirement.

Demolition is the fate of most such structures and the city fathers, with no visible signs of sentiment, have already begun planning the deed. Can nothing be done to save the old tower?

To their credit, the Charlevoix Historical Society foresaw this development months ago and came forward with an interesting proposal to convert the tower into an observation deck. From this vantage point, say those who know, one would be able to scan from Grand Traverse to the Beaver archipelago to Good Hart on a clear day. But this plan faded in the light of realism; more specifically, it was pointed out that nobody would be peering off toward Good Hart while there was a condominium's private swimming pool right below the tower with a less historic but more compelling type of scenery.

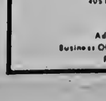
Let this not be the end of our creativity, though. There are many other potential uses for the old tower. For instance, the one I like best so far proposes that hot water be pumped into the tower and a heavy-duty Jacuzzi installed. Bill it as the World's Largest Hot Tub and mellow people would flock from miles around.

Or how about donating it to the Pentagon to use as an MX missile? Just fill it with rocket fuel and stick a nuclear warhead or two on top. It would surely pack a wallop and the Russians would never suspect it, even as it came sailing over Vladivostok.

And certainly any inventive realtor can see what a great condo it would make. "High rise, lake view," would say the ad, "Exclusive living with an old world flavor. Swimming beach one step out the door. Unmatched privacy. Rust-proofing included."

These are just a few ideas. How about it? There must be some more good ones floating around out there. Has no one the motivation to step forward and organize SOT (Save Our Tower)? Or POT (Preserve Our Tank)?

It could be the civic opportunity of a lifetime.



Clockwise

Bad now? Just wait!

by Rob Clock

The most discouraging aspect about the onslaught of winter this year is how we are going to pay our heating bills for the next six months — even with a wood stove crackling in the parlor.

Our Michigan Consolidated Gas Co. bill from Aug. 28 to Sept. 25 was a whopping $83.39. The company says this figure is an estimate, but it's still high enough to bring on an attack of apoplexy considering all but the last four days of the billing period were technically summer.

However, Michigan Con says the period was 54 percent colder than it was in the same period last year.

I can't say for sure because I didn't keep records. But I do know that there were many days in September when our furnace didn't click on once. And when it was chilly in the evening we usually cranked up our wood stove — so the furnace was not used that much.

Now I can hardly wait to see what our bills will be like in January and February when the temperature hardly budges above zero for weeks at a stretch.

If I were retired — or even skilled at any kind of seasonal employment — I would seriously consider moving south for the winter as so many of our senior citizens do. I am not sure the cost of the disruption — including travel, meals in transit, temporary housing, etc. — would offset the high cost of heating a big house in Charlevoix for the winter. But I imagine the two figures are moving pretty close together — and there's not a great deal of snow to shovel in Ft. Lauderdale.

IT NOW APPEARS that Gov. William Milliken was shooting from the hip when he called for property tax relief a few weeks ago.

Democrats, union leaders and liberals generally jumped on his proposal immediately, pointing out that Michigan is in no position to cut taxes during these dire times.

As it turns out, they were right.

Milliken has swung into their corner, claiming he doesn't know how the state will fare under President Reagan's second and third-round cuts. It is becoming increasingly apparent that Uncle Sam is no sugar daddy.

The reversal not only was embarrassing to Milliken, but serves to underscore the chaotic state of Michigan's economy.

FURTHERMORE, Reagan now concedes that the nation is in recession — but he hopes it will be short and light.

His admission comes as something of a surprise, because I can't remember that the last recession was ever declared over. True, Northern Michigan's summer season went fairly well, but our industries — particularly those connected to the auto industry and building trades — are having a tough time staying afloat.

Auto sales in early October, for example, were down more than 30 percent from the same period last year — which was wasn't much of a bell-ringer to begin with.

The administration, of course, is hoping its tax cuts will funnel more money into the economy, bolstering both capital expansion and buying power.

I'm still deciding what to do with the tax cut which showed up in my paycheck last week. I'm torn between building a steel mill and buying a hamburger.

Take the 4-H Challenge

by Leah Green, 4-H program assistant

Isn't the fall weather beautiful? October has shared with us some of her bright blue weather of intense skies and sunlight as well as some rain, a few foggy mornings and there's been enough wind mixed in along the way to make it seem as if colored rain is falling as the leaves come down continuously while it blows. Good, invigorating weather. Terrific weather to be outside, perhaps tramping about on a hike that takes you through some of Charlevoix County's spectacular woods and up in the hills where the views are the best. The bright shiny days might also suggest a trip by water. Picture yourself canoeing down a local river with some friends. Leaves make bright spots of yellow and orange on the water, Sunlight filters down through the partly bare branches and helps to warm exercise — and natural beauty sounds great doesn't it? If you're not experienced as a hiker or canoeist it might SOUND great, but impossible. If you don't know East from West or how to keep from getting lost it might even sound frightening. If you don't have anyone to share your vision of all this great outdoor activity with it isn't very attractive either.

Well, now that I've set you up with this beautiful picture and then managed to spoil it for you; the least I can do is to suggest a cure. 4-H to the rescue! Did you know that 4-H has a terrific program that consists of just the kinds of activity we've just been talking about? It's called 4-H Challenge. Any young person in this county who is 13 or over can take advantage of a thoroughly trained 4-H leader who is ready to make these unbeatable outdoor experiences a reality instead of wishful thinking. The program challenges you to get outdoors, it challenges you to learn how to hike and backpack with ease and confidence, it challenges you to become a team with other people as you become a skillful manager of canoes, compasses and other outdoor equipment. Challenge challenges you to learn how to find your way in the wilderness, how to climb rocks and perhaps mountains. Challenge even challenges you to become an explorer by learning how to cave. If you're interested in learning some of these skills, but feel that you lack the confidence to pursue them actively, there are even confidence courses that the leader sets up. These help you learn to trust yourself and the team you are a part of.

Challenge is going to become a reality in Charlevoix County 4-H. The leader is ready. What he needs now is you. Look out at that brilliant blue sky, see all the beauty of the season in your minds eye and trust that you have the ability to get out and make full use of the gorgeous environment in which we live. Don't forget that winter will come soon, but Challenge will not stop for winter.

Chances to cross country ski, snowshoe and winter camp loom on the snowy horizon. They need not be mysterious. They need not be something that the other guy can do while you stand inside getting only the visual benefit of the season. Jump intake the challenge that has more to offer than calories to offer. Accept a challenge that can teach you exciting things that will last a lifetime.

4-H Challenge will meet for the first time on Saturday, October 24 at 7:00 P.M. in the Boyne City at the City Hall Auditorium for an hour. A short movie explaining the activities included in Challenge will be shown. David Shetterly, Boyne City, the leader, will display equipment, explain the program further and answer questions. Come, see, hear, open yourself to a learning experience in confidence, trust, teamwork and a more thorough enjoyment of our unique and special corner of the world.

Methods to determine Medicare payments are unfair to this area

by 11th District Congressman Robert W. Davis

The method by which Medicare reimbursements are determined in Michigan is an issue I have been most concerned about for some time. It is also an issue that my constituents have been most vocal about. This concern was expressed not only by senior citizens, but by Northern Michigan residents of all ages.

As you may know, federal law requires that charging zones, which separate each state into areas with comparable health care costs, be established. This was one cost containment measure included into the amendments of the Social Security Act which created the Medicare program. It was believed that health care costs in some areas are more expensive than in others and that Medicare reimbursements should reflect that difference. However, the law made no provision for regular checks to determine that a state's Medicare divisions continued to be proper and fair. It has become apparent that Michigan's charging zones are outdated and are no longer just.

I introduced legislation which would require that Medicare reasonable charges be determined on a state-wide basis in Michigan. Because the legislative process is usually a lengthy one, I also have been pursuing an administrative remedy.

Last week Blue Cross/Blue Shield of Michigan reported the results of a study we requested on the cost of health care in Michigan to the Health Care Financing Administration. HCFA assured me that if there is evidence that health care costs are essentially the same in northern Michigan as in the rest of the state, a state-wide screen could be implemented.

Unfortunately, the Blue Cross/Blue Shield study was not as conclusive as we had hoped. However, it did demonstrate beyond any doubt that the present Medicare zoning of Michigan desparately needs changing. This study used only Marquette County as a sample county and found that Marquette health care charges were 35.5% higher than the rest of zone three, 12.9% higher than zone two and even 7.1% higher than zone one which comprises the four counties surrounding Detroit. It was our understanding that the Blue Cross/Blue Shield study would include the whole state.

After learning of the results of the Marquette study, we asked Blue Cross/Blue Shield to provide similar information on the rest of the state. Blue Cross/Blue Shield advised our office that the cost would be prohibitive for conducting the kind of study which would demonstrate each of Michigan's counties overall health care costs. While the Marquette results proved insufficient for creating a state-wide screen, the study certainly indicated the serious inequity of the present system.

Upon learning the results of the Marquette study, I personally telephoned the Administrator of the Health Care Financing Administration, Dr. Carolyn Davis, and expressed the urgency of the situation. At our request, Dr. Davis has agreed, as of last Friday, to grant to Blue Cross/Blue Shield of Michigan $25,000 to conduct the comprehensive study we hope will substantiate our belief that Northern Michigan Medicare beneficiaries are being under-reimbursed. HCFA estimates the study will take four to six months.

Because the law requires that Medicare reimbursements reflect local health care costs, we will have to accept what this study reveals. The result may be that charging zones will have to continue, but we will be sure that they are equitable and proper. We have also asked that the possibility of some interim relief for Marquette County be investigated. It appears that this change cannot be implemented until the final report is available.

With the exception of Emmet county, every county in the 11th Congressional district is now included in the last charging zone which provides the lowest level of Medicare reimbursement. The changes which will occur as a result of the extensive study will create a substantial increase in the amount of benefits paid by Medicare and an equally substantial decrease in the out-of-pocket medical expenses of many of our senior citizens. Hopefully, it will also create a more favorable environment for physicians to establish new practices in Northern Michigan – certainly a benefit to all residents.

Now is the time for legislative action

by Donald Huffard, Charlevoix County Republican Party Chairman

The importance of this fall's legislative session to all of us cannot be overstated.

Michigan's business climate both in perception and in fact has suffered severely for the last decade and each ensuing year seems to have added to our plight.

The intention of this letter is not to address the issue in terms of balance sheets and accounting statements, but rather in human terms. Recently published Bureau of Labor statistics show that during the period between 1969 and 1980 Michigan lost nearly 186 thousand manufacturing jobs. Those thousands of jobs represent relatives, friends and neighbors who find themselves without jobs to provide for themselves and their families. We all know of relatives or friends who have left Michigan, not because they wanted to, but because employment opportunities are else where.

Many of the factors that have prompted existing business to relocate outside of Michigan and have kept new employers from locating here can be traced directly to actions taken by Michigan's Legislature.

The responsibility for correcting this situation, therefore, lies with that same Legislature. Michigan's Workers' Compensation System, Unemployment Compensation System and Single Business Taa have, in their current state, created excessive burdens for Michigan's employers.

Legislative Leaders and Governor Milliken have in recent weeks stated that the major purpose of this fall Legislative session will be to address and act upon Michigan's Business Climate.

I hope you will join with me in carefully scrutinizing the action of our area Legislators during this process. We need to convey to them by letter and phone our support and willingness to help them once again make Michigan a State that means business.

Our jobs, our schools, our communities and our ability to live and work in beautiful Northern Michigan hangs in the balance.

Karen Bennett

Bennett is new Animal Control Officer

MEET CHARLEVOIX

by PEG OHLE

Karen Bennett recently joined the staff of the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Department as Animal Control Officer. This week the Courier talks with her about her job and about herself.

COURIER: Is this your first law enforcement job?

BENNETT: Yes, but I did serve in the Sheriff's posse for several months. I liked it and decided to apply for a full-time job. I was also head of the county Child Abuse Prevention Committee. We made presentations to different groups and schools, trying to make them aware of the abuse and neglect of children.

COURIER: Did you have any special training for your job?

BENNETT: Just my posse training and then I worked with the previous animal control officer.

COURIER: Are there any other female animal control officers?

BENNETT: I'm the only one I know about – at least in this area.

COURIER: What are your duties?

BENNETT: I work mostly with phone complaints about animals, usually dogs. I go out in the animal control officer's truck and bring them in to the shelter. I also serve legal papers for the Sheriff and fill in in the office when needed.

COURIER: What animals other than dogs are you concerned with?

BENNETT: Almost all of them. For instance, right now we have two horse cases – one a complaint about some horses running at large, and another about cruelty to horses.

COURIER: Is there an oversupply of dogs at the shelter now?

BENNETT: Oh, yes. We had to put some to sleep this morning. That's the part of my job I don't like.

COURIER: What suggestions do you have for dog owners to keep them out of trouble?

BENNETT: Keep your dogs licensed and tied up. The law says that dogs must be kept on owners' premises. With the deer season coming up, we'll be getting more complaints about dogs chasing deer.

COURIER: What other jobs have you had?

BENNETT: I worked in a hospital as a switchboard operator and was a night supervisor for adult education. I just graduated from high school last year.

COURIER: Where did you grow up?

BENNETT: In Muskegon. We moved to East Jordan from there. My husband is from this area. He's a truck driver.

COURIER: How many children do you have?

BENNETT: Six – ages 16, 15, 14, 13, and twins 12. They think it's great for me to work for the Sheriff's Department. They even bought me a plate to put on the front of the truck. It says, "Wolf Patrol".

COURIER: Would you like to advance to other police work?

BENNETT: Right now I'm happy doing what I am, but I would like to become a certified officer in the future. That's my goal, but it would mean going away for two months. I like people and enjoy being around them but I wish some of them wouldn't have the feeling they do about uniformed officers. Sometimes the verbal abuse we take is unbelievable.

COURIER: Speaking of uniforms, is there a difference between men's and women's? Do you have to pay for them?

BENNETT: Yes, but the one I'm wearing now is a man's uniform. I've ordered some women's uniforms but they haven't come in yet. We don't have to pay for them.

COMPLETING YOUR FASHION WARDROBE

Fine jewelry has a way of adding a touch of class to your wardrobe. A few well chosen pieces can go a long way, too, so you don't have to spend a fortune. Some women have developed quite a nice collection by buying (or being given) only one or two pieces of jewelry a year.

Since fine jewelry does not go out of style with the whims of fashion, you can continue to wear it for many years and, if it eventually looks old fashioned to you, you can have the stones reset and the gold melted down for a new piece altogether.

For the last few years different shades of lavender have been big on the fashion scene. This has brought certain gemstones into the limelight, namely amethyst and kunzite.

Amethyst, a variety of quartz, occurs in many shades of violet from pale lilac to deep purple. The dark tones of amethyst were very popular in the early part of this century. And a few hundred years ago, the amethyst was more highly prized than the diamond!

Kunzite is a stone many people have never heard of. Named after G.F. Kunz, who first described it in 1902, this is a pink violet to light violet variety of the mineral spodumene.

Developing a colorful fine jewelry wardrobe is an exciting venture. With a little guidance you can put together a classic collection that will blend with your highest fashions season after season. In economic times like ours, it's wise to put your money into quality items that will last and retain their value. Fine jewelry can last a lifetime if you care for it properly, and how many items do you know of that can match that for endurance?

Chiefs run away from Rayders in second half

Hopes of a Cinderella season highlighted by an upset of Cheboygan were rudely dashed Friday night as the Charlevoix varsity grid squad fell apart in the second half and saw the Chiefs romp to a 46-14 victory, their 34th straight.

The Rayders came into the game unbeaten in conference play and are now 3-1 in conference standings which is good for a three way tie for second place with Petoskey and Gaylord.

The only bright spots for the Rayders Friday night was the consistent running of senior fullback Mark Beaudoin, who racked up 144 yards in 18 carries, and the passing of quarterback Scott Kelly which accounted for 90 yards and two touchdowns.

Cheboygan took the early lead in the game with a one-yard touchdown run by Doug Rozek after which the extra point try was no good. Charlevoix answered in the second quarter with a 10-yard Kelly to Ross Carey touchdown pass and an extra point kick by Mark Morgan which put the Rayders on top for the moment 7-6.

John Fisher took the ball into the endzone from the six yardline, however, to give the Chiefs a 12-7 advantage going into the lockeroom. At that point Charlevoix was still within striking distance.

The Chiefs came on strong in the third period scoring one touchdown on a four-yard run by John LaFrinere and Fisher put a morale-killing six points on the board with a fumble recovery and a 58-yard jaunt for the touchdown and a 26-7 lead. Mark Tombley kicked the points after touchdown following both third quarter Cheboygan scores.

In the final quarter, Rozek went in from the three, LaFrinere returned a punt 70 yards for a score and Tony Clark passed to LaFrinere for 20 more points to ice the victory. Charlevoix pulled out one more touchdown on a Kelly to Jeff Morgridge pass of 11 yards and Morgan added the extra point for the final tally of 46-14.

Charlevoix's offense was held to 265 yards, 90 passing and 175 rushing, while the Chiefs accumulated 358 total yards, 83 on passing and 295 on the ground. Turnovers played a big part in the Rayders' downfall as they fumbled three times and lost all of them and Kelly tossed three interceptions.

Of Charlevoix's receivers, Carey caught two passes for 18 yards and a TD, Dave Buday had three catches for 57 yards, Chris Putman had one for 9 yards and Jeff Morgridge one for 11 yards and a touchdown.

Mike Loper was the top hitter defensively for Charlevoix with 19 tackles while Buday had 13, Beaudoin and Craig Klooster 11 and Ken Speigl and Mark Oostermeyer 10 each.

The Rayders play at Grayling this Friday night.

Junior varsity breaks Cheboygan string

For the first time in 28 games, Charlevoix's junior varsity football team bested their counterparts from Cheboygan 1st week. The Rayders scored two touchdowns and were successful on a two-point conversion attempt which made the difference in a 14-12 victory Thursday.

Pat Mitchell scored all 14 points for Charlevoix, his first touchdown coming in the first quarter on a 24-yard run after which the extra point try was no good.

Cheboygan answered with a 30-yard touchdown pass in the first quarter from Andy Grisdale to Joe Kurtz, after which the attempt for two points was stopped by Charlevoix. The score was knotted at 6-6 at halftime following a scoreless second quarter.

Mitchell hit paydirt again in the third quarter with a six-yard touchdown run. He then added the winning points on the extra point try. Cheboygan pulled within two on a one-yard touchdown blast by Richard Boardman but could not convert the needed extra points.

Charleoix coaches praised the efforts of Mitchell , Thad Morgan and Shawn Hartnett on offense and gave much credit for the big win to the defense including Alec Sheets, John March, Bill Tillenand Neild LaCroix.

Cowboys champs of flag football league

The Flag football league, sponsored by the Charlevoix Recreation Department, closed out its season Tuesday with the Cowboys, coached by Don Potter and Dick Putman, the 1981 champions.

In the final night of play, the Cowboys defeated the Steelers 25-19 and the Seahawks downed the Saints 28-12.

Earlier in the week, the Seahawks had played the Cowboys to a 13-13 tie and the Steelers had rolled over the Saints 29-14.

The Cowboys won the title with a five-win one-tie record. The Seahawks finished in second place with 3-2-1 record; the Steelers in third place with a 2-3-1 record and the Saints with an 0-5-1 record.

In Tuesday's game, the Cowboys and the Steelers matched touchdowns in the first half which ended in a 13-13 tie after Roger Smith had scored on a seven yard run in the first with Brian Wilmot adding the P.A.T. and a 23 yard pass from Kevin Pearsall to Jody Putman had given the Cowboys their points and a 39 yard kick-off return by Jim Morgridge plus his conversion and a nine yard pass from Mark Himebauch to Alan Geer had ended the half in a tie score.

As the second half got underway, the Cowboys took command, scoring on a nine-yard pass from Pearsall to Putman in the third period and a two yard plunge by Putman early in the last period to put the game out of reach of the Steelers who made one final attempt by scoring on a 19 yard pass by Brian Greenway to Morgridge late in the game.

In the second game the Seahawks romped to a 22-0 halftime lead before the Saints got on the board on a nine yard run in the first period and a 39 yard romp in the second period by John Loder, 33 yard run by Larry Drost, a safety by Jeff Engler and a P.A.T. by Loder.

A Joe Hayes pass to Sean Ferguson, good for 19 yards, in the third period and another 19 yarder from Hayes to Scott Mitchelltree in the final period gave the Saints their 12 points. Meanwhile, Drost scored on a 39 yard punt return to wrap up the win for the Seahawks.

Township flag FB

The Landings squeaked past Consumers Power 6-0 and Wojans trounced the Coast Guard Station 37-7 in Charlevoix Township Flag Football action Thursday.

The township league will close out its season this week with games on Thursday and Friday. Consumers Power will meet the Coast Guard Station at 5:30 p.m. and the Landings and Wojans will play at 6:30 Thursday and the Landings and Coast Guard at 5:30 and Consumers Power and Wojans at 8:30 p.m. Friday.

In Thursday's action, the Landings scored its single TD in the second period on an over-the-line pass from Beano Archery to Tom Morrison. The team spent the remainder of the game defending its lead.

Wojans had no trouble defending their first place standing as they scored with ease over the Coast Guard Station whose one toughdown came late in the game on a 15 yard pass from Hal House to Randy Norton. House then passed to Bill Travis for the P.A.T. that stopped a shut out.

Passes by Scott Kerridge accounted for four of Wojans six touchdowns with one scored in each period. The first was a 15 yard pass to Steve Dunkelberg; the next a 10 yarder to Bill Herriman; the third one for 20 yards was to Dean Kerridge and the fourth a pass for 18 yards to Dan McKenzie. McKenzie scored again on a four yard run in the second period and Dunkelberg in the final period on a pass interception from 25 yards out. Kerridge passed to Herriman for the only conversion point.

Halloween party planned by PAC

By ERIC LARSON

Halloween '81 is just a few short days away, and the Parents Advisory Council of Charlevoix Elementary School is planning a party for all of Charlevoix to enjoy.

October 31 will be a special day this year. Along with the traditional ghouls and goblins, a special Halloween afternoon is planned for area children and parents.

The place is the Charlevoix Elementary School; the time is 4 to 6 p.m. for a Halloween Party that is a real treat—no tricks—for the whole family.

Pat Leadabrand, P.A.C. President, invites all of our community to an afternoon of food and fun. All area children will wear their special wild-and-crazy costumes to the school for judging at 4:30 p.m. Prizes will be awarded to the youngsters in a variety of categories including, "funniest, prettiest, ugliest and most original," according to Ms. Leadabrand.

Another treat at the P.A.C.-sponsored party is a dinner of hot dogs, chips, cheese slices, cider and apples for a nominal cost of 50¢.

For the party, the elementary school gymnasium will be transformed into a haunted haven, complete with special effects. A flying witch, a trio of ghosts, and orange and black streamers will add to the festivities.

Prizes for the Halloween Party are sponsored by the Parents Advisory Council and the Literary News Center. Children in costume from pre-school age through fifth grade will be judged by members of the Charlevoix Board of Education.

For an afternoon of ghostly fun, the Parents Advisory Council invites you and your family to attend the Halloween Party at the Charlevoix Elementary School. Parents of elementary children will receive after-school notices for the gala occasion.

Sister Ellen Mary Lopez to mark 25 years as Dominican sister

By ANNE KELLY

Sister Ellen Mary Lopez, originally of San Marcos, Texas, is familiar to many around town as a neat, trim and sincere lady who is always anxious and willing to lend a hand (or a prayer). This year she celebrates 25 years of service as a Dominican Sister out of Marywood Motherhouse in Grand Rapids, Michigan. She has been associated with St. Mary Church in Charlevoix since February of 1978.

"When I first came to Charlevoix, I visited homes taking a parish census," Sister recalls. "My plan was to complete the census and be on my way."

Sister visited over 500 families that year meeting the people on a person-to-person basis and getting a feel for the faith needs of the parish community.

"When I finished with the census, I felt that I was needed and I just couldn't leave. I found the people warm and responsive." Sister also found them needing of direction and encouragement in many areas of their spiritual lives.

Her role in the past 3½ years has been that of pastoral ministry, a two-fold responsibility which involves serving as the director of the religious education program at St. Mary and pastoral ministry which includes home visitations of the sick and elderly, counselling and instructions in the faith. In this way she assists the pastor in the ministry of the parish.

"I love pastoral ministry within the parish community." Sister emits a spiritual aura of dedication as she explains her work. "Rather than feeling that I have ministered to the people, I feel that they have ministered to me."

Sister Ellen Mary Lopez

What she has been trying to do in Charlevoix is perhaps what she has dedicated her 25 years as a nun doing all her religious life: "bringing people to an awareness of building a faith community." She accomplishes this by leading people to become aware of their specific gifts and talents. She envisions a perfect community in which people of her own and other faiths may join together lovingly, growing together and serving other's needs.

Sister Ellen Mary is a member of the ecumenical Ministerial Association. There will be a special Mass in her honor on Sunday, Oct. 25th at 2:00 P.M. at St. Mary Church. The community is invited to attend.

Local BMXers visit Dome

Saturday and Sunday, Oct. 9 and 10, the Charlevoix Burnbusters rode in the NBC World Invitational BMX (bicycle moto-cross) meet in Pontiac's Silverdome. Close to 3000 riders from 15 foreign lands plus the U.S. decended upon the Metro Detroit area for one of the biggest events in the sport.

Five riders from the Charlevoix area raced although none made the main event many did make the semi-final moto. During the weekend there were shows and clinics given.

Manufacturers showed the riders the new innovations in BMX and clinics were to show a rider how to improve his or her skills. Other area teams from Northern Mich. were represented. The race was sponsored by Huffy Bikes & Pepsi. The next race is the ABA Worlds in Indianapolis, Ind., during the Christmas - New Year's Holiday.

Fall rally

Vince Chew returns to classroom after stint in office

by ANNE KELLY

Fifteen years ago, Vince Chew and his wife, Mary Ann, started teaching in the same building where Vince is presently a sixth grade Middle School instructor. A graduate of the Flint Branch of the University of Michigan, Mr. Chew's main scholastic interests had been in the areas of engineering and math. After graduation and employment with the telephone company in Flint, Vince became aware of the need for educators especially in the area of high school counselors. He began to consider education as a possible career. Then the opportunity arose for teaching as an elementary substitute teacher in the Flint Public School System. Subsequently he tried his hand at Junior High level. By this time he was convinced that education was for him – that he enjoyed working with kids.

Interjected into his teaching career was a seven-year stretch as principal at the Middle School. Now, happily back in the classroom, Vince reflects on his role as a teacher.

"If you start thinking about it," Vince reflects, "it gets sort of awesome." Working with his students he thinks of himself as a "partner" with the parents in contributing to the young person's intellectual and emotional growth. Sometimes that's very difficult in the sixth grade teacher-contact with the parents is not always as tangible as it was in the elementary.

This year Vince is one of the sixth grade teachers involved with the Middle School where contained concept of classroom situation. In addition he also teaches an 8th grade journalism class which has recently come out with the first edition of the CMS Press.

"I'm really enjoying this class," he reports. "They're here because they want to be." Journalism is an elective for 8th graders.

I surmise that varied interests are what has made Vine Chew a versatile and interesting teacher.

Other than an enthusiasm for math and engineering, Vince is also a licensed builder who enjoys remodeling, an accomplished pilot, member of the Cherokee Club, and an avid reader.

Re-Elect SAM SUPERNAW
Mayor
Vote Tuesday, Nov. 3, '81
FOR THE MOST EXPERIENCED AND THE BEST QUALIFIED

Perhaps you are wondering why I am running for the fifth term as Mayor. Born and raised in Charlevoix with plans to spend the rest of my life here, I am concerned about and interested in the direction Charlevoix will take in the future. We all know Charlevoix is going to grow. We need to plan and control this growth so that Charlevoix will remain "Charlevoix The Beautiful". I believe that I have worked for this over the past four years as your Mayor. I want Charlevoix to remain the quaint, quiet and unique small town that it is because I love to live here, work here and enjoy my leisure time here.

Names In The News

The Assembly of God Church in Charlevoix has welcomed a new pastor, Rev. Mike Mitchell, above, and his family; his wife's name is Gina and the children are Charity and Gabe.

The Mitchell's have traveled extensively throughout many of the states conducting crusades and performing in gospel concerts. Previously, they were youth pastors in Quincy, Ill., senior pastor in Ava, Ill., and most recently began an Assembly of God Church in Kalkaska, Mi. that was known as the "fastest growing Assembly Church in Northern Michigan". Beginning with 12 people in a rented building, the church grew to more than 150 in less than three years.

The Mitchell's first Sunday with their congregation will be October 25th. The community is invited to come and to make their acquaintance.

Airman Sherman Merriner III, above, son of Sherman J. Merriner of 2770 Four Mile Road, Traverse City, Mich., and Cleta B. Trumble of 405 Main St., East Jordan, Mich., has been assigned to Chanute Air Force Base, Ill., after completing Air Force basic training.

During the six weeks at Lackland Air Force Base, Texas, the airman studied the Air Force mission, organization and customs and received special training in human relations.

In addition, airmen who complete basic training earn credits toward an associate degree in applied science through the Community College of the Air Force.

The airman will now receive specialized instruction in the fuels specialist field.

He is a 1981 graduate of Traverse City High School.

Rev. James Raum, above, is the new pastor of the Charlevoix Church of the Nazarene. He was born and raised at Owosso, Michigan. He served 10 years in the United States Air Force as military police. At the age of 39 he attended Nazarene Bible College in Colorado Springs, Colorado. He has pastored in Belle Glade, Florida, and is now coming to Charlevoix after starting a new church in Lakeview, Oregon. He served that church for 2½ years.

Rev. Raum and his wife, Louise, have two daughters, Michelle, 16 and Jamie, 14. First Sunday for the Raums at the church will be October 25. Rev. George M. Galloway of Traverse City has been serving as interim pastor.

New barricade installed at library

The Charlevoix Public Library recently installed a barricade of stones and shrubs across each end of the well area in back of the building.

The wall was built to prevent further erosion of the slopes leading down to the well area and to prevent damage to the building.

The wall was also built to prevent children from riding their bikes through the back area and raising the possibility of injury to them by going through one of the large windows or jumping their bikes in front of cars going through the alley.

Traces of TCE found in Charlevoix city water supply

by DAVE KNIGHT

Test results received by the City of Charlevoix last Wednesday from the Michigan Department of Public Health have revealed the presence of trichloroethylene (TCE), a suspected cancer-causing substance, in the city's water supply.

City council members met Monday night in a work session to discuss ways to deal with the problem which was discovered following the identification earlier this year of TCE in the Petoskey water supply.

Concentrations of TCE found in Charlevoix city water ranged from 14 to 31 parts per billion (ppb). U.S. Environmental Protection Agency guidelines state that someone drinking water with 45 ppb of TCE for 70 years would increase the risk of cancer by one in 100,000.

TCE has several industrial uses and has been in use for about 55 years. It is most commonly used as an industrial degreasing agent though other uses include coffee decaffination and dry cleaning. In Michigan, TCE has turned up in water supplies at Albion and Battle Creek among other places, according to Dr. Brian Youngs, district healthofficer.

Said Charlevoix City Manager Robert Hunt at a Friday press conference, "I do not consider the levels of concentration of TCE found in Charlevix's water supply to be a significant health hazard. There is no reason for people to start drinking bottled water."

Charlevoix's municipal well is located at the city's Lake Michigan Beach park about 50 feet from the water's edge. According to Health Department test results, no traces of TCE were found in the lake water thus indicating that the chemical is infiltrating the well from a groundwater source. No comprehensive hydrological studies have ever been conducted to find out just how much of Charlvoix's water comes from the lake and how much from groundwater. District Health Department staff member Larry Levengood said Friday that such testing will probably be one of the first steps for the city to take.

Youngs said that pinpointing the source of the TCE may be difficult since it may have been the result of an industrial use many years ago that no longer exists. He added that 234,000 metric tons of TCE is manufactured in the United States each year making it one of the more common industrial chemicals in use. Though it's effect on human health is not yet fully known, TCE has been found to cause cancer in some mice. It is suspected to be a potential cause of liver cancer. Youngs pointed out, however, that records in Emmet County, where levels of TCE ranged as high as 31 ppb in recent water samples, showed only one death from liver-cancer in the past ten years. Even with perfect water, he said, four to six deaths from liver cancer would be a normal rate.

CHIP forced to lay off staff

by DAVE KNIGHT

Employees and staff of the CHIP Counseling Center's counseling program will not be paid next week following action taken by the CHIP Board of Directors October 21 to indefinitely suspend the counseling program for lack of funds.

Painting a bleak financial picture for the center, Treasurer Thomas G. Bickersteth told the board that CHIP faces a deficit of over $6,000 by the end of October. Unless additional sources of revenue are found, said Bickersteth, the center will only continue to lose money.

The board's decision does not affect the Substance Abuse program for which CHIP is contracted by the State of Michigan. Going without pay for their counseling services will be. CHIP Director Oren Schroeder, staff counselor Terry Smith and part-time administrative assistant Elaine Plackner. Schroeder and Smith will, however, receive 25 percent of their normal pay for their work with Substance Abuse while Mrs. Plackner will receive 80 percent of her normal wages for Substance Abuse work.

According to Schroeder, both he and Smith will continue to keep scheduled appointments with clients through the month of October but no new clients will be seen.

November 3

City Election

Races, amendment, millage on ballot

Tuesday, November 3 is election day in Charlevix with voters facing decisions on a mayor, two representives to the City Council, a charter amendment on the mayoral term and a sewer millage.

Incumbent Mayor Samuel C. Supernaw will seek a third term against challenger Kenneth A. Staley in the mayoral contest. The two survived a three-way primary race in August to earn places on the ballot. In the Second Ward council race, seven-year council veteran Robert N. Timms, the incumbent, will face off against F. Ivan Whitley who left the council last December after five years. On the Third Ward council ballot will be Joseph G. Morris and David J. Strawbridge who are seeking the seat vacated by F. Earl Muma. First Ward councilmember Jeffrey Porter is running unopposed as is City Clerk Deanne Balch.

In addition to the mayoral and council races on next Tuesday's ballot, city voters will decide whether to extend the mayoral term from one to two years and whether to allocate 1 mill for improvement of city sewers.

The charter amendment to extend the mayoral term originated two years ago in the city compensation committee. It is the second step in a recommendation by the committee that both the mayor's and city clerk's terms be two years instead of one. Last year city voters approved extending the clerk's term.

The recommendation was made for the reason that, with one-year terms,the mayor and clerk were faced with the decision whether to run again after only six months in office since the terms began in January and nomination papers were due the following June. If the charter amendment passes Tuesday, the two-year mayoral term will begin in January, 1983. Thus the mayor's and clerk's terms will be staggerred; one year the clerk and three councilmembers will be up for election and the next year the mayor and three councilmembers will be on the ballot.

The millage on sewer improvement was placed on the ballot by action of the council last month. A 1 mill levy will raise approximately $47,000 in 1982; there is a five-year limit on the millage.

Though the funds raised by the millage, d passed, will be dedicated solely to sewer improvement, the council has not set a specific schedule for the project and no areas have yet been specifically targeted. It is expected that recent problem areas on State St. and on Dixon Ave. will receive high priority when improvements begin.

City Council candidates respond to questions

The following questions were provided to the four candidates, David J. Strawbridge and Joseph G. Morris in the Third Ward and Robert N. Timms and F. Ivan Whitley in the Second Ward.

1. How should a council member vote when his personal views differ from those of his constituency?

Strawbridge: I feel that most often a constituency will be divided on most issues. In this case it would seem as though a council member's personal views would come to the forefront. However, if an issue were to arise in which a constituency has an obvious preference it is the duty of a council member to not only vote as his constituency would, but also to make his constituencies' views known. A council member must represent his constituency.

Morris: An elected person is elected to represent the views of the majority of one's constituency. One's personal views are not a factor in a vote.

Timms: The Councilperson is elected to represent his constituents. There are times when the councilperson has to vote for the good of the entire city and not with a small, special interest, pressure group.

Whitley: A council member should always vote with his constituency. Personal views are too easily influenced by what's best for the pocketbook. If a council person is listening and in touch, he will be with his constituency the majority of the time.

2. What type of relationship should the council have with the retail community?

Strawbridge: The council must have the same relationship with the retail business community that it has with the rest of the city. The council's function is to represent the people of the city, and as such must work hand in hand with the retail community, the people of the city, the police department and any other body with a concern in the city.

Morris: As a business man throughout my life, I can respond to this question from experience. The Council must understand that business is an integral segment of the community and be sympathetic and cooperative. The climate for business whether it be retail or otherwise is so often set by a governmental body.

Timms: The Council should have a good working relationship with the business' community. A thriving business sector is the backbone of employment in the area. The retail stores, restaurants, gas stations and motels are a very important part of a financially healthy community.

Whitley: As the downtown goes so goes the community. I feel, the cities responsibility lies with areas such as parking, parks, street cleaning, police and fire protection. Frills such as trees in sidewalk, special promotions, etc. should be 100 percent backed by retail merchants. A good healthy business community is a must!

3. How can the city council best cope with high taxes and unemployment in Charlevoix?

Strawbridge: I feel the city council must conserve funds whenever possible in order to cope with high taxes. I will point to the Charlevoix school system as an example of this concept, and they are to be congratulated for their conservation efforts. Second, I feel some tax burden must be shifted from the residential sector to an increased labor intensive light industry sector. This in my mind is the most important factor for future tax relief for all of us in Charlevoix.

Morris: So many believe high taxes and unemployment plague every community and there is nothing we can do about it. Each community must do their bit to help themselves. A few examples of what we can do: utilize the new County Economic Development Corporation for new or expansion of existing business; actively seek new business with sales effort and appoint an individual to serve as "host" for each business inquiring about our city; shop in Charlevoix, and so forth. All should realize some services may not be expanded or even cut back if we are to just hold the line on taxes. Lobby or petition in Lansing or elsewhere to get the message broadcasted. Examine each expense and reflect the dollars cost of the service for each taxpayer. Utilize the results of the Master Plan that is an analysis of our community's strength and weaknesses.

Mayoral candidates' views

Mayoral candidates Samuel C. Supernaw and Kenneth A. Staley responded to the following questions.

1. What is the Mayor's most important role in City Government?

Supernaw: The mayor is the spokesman for the City Council. He carries out the duties and wishes of the council and represents their decisions. He should also be a public relations man for the city.

Staley: The Mayor's most important role in city government is to be "the Chief Executive Officer of the City" (City Charter). He is the leader chosen by the people to be chairperson of the meetings of the City Council. He has the responsibility to preside over meetings, making sure that they are informative, well-prepared for, and receptive to public input. He must then represent the Council in carrying out their decisions. He should be a full-time coordinator.

2. What can best be done by the Mayor and the City Council to improve Charlevoix's economy?

Supernaw: We should continue what we've done in the past such as seek federal and state economic development grants, grant tax exemptions to businesses willing to expand or open new plants and generally encourage business people to create more jobs in Charlevoix.

Staley: Low taxes and utility rates will boost the economy by allowing the people of Charlevoix to have more of their own money to spend. Charlevoix must operate like the multi-million dollar business that it is. The Mayor and Council must continually strive to retain the Coast Guard Cutter Mesquite and Lifeboat station, the Bay Queen, Harbor Industries (Freedmans) Wojan Aluminum, as well as the factories and other places of high employment located in the Charlevoix area. These employers and others

Jimmy may be a crow but to Seymour he's part of the family

by SARA GAY DAMMANN

Jimmy has been a free spirit, like most crows, since he learned to fly. But Jimmy has chosen to live in two worlds – the crow world and the human world.

Jimmy comes and goes, unpredictably. When he choses the human world his family, the Michael Seymours on Nettleton, are delighted, but his crow friends caw their displeasure from the trees around the Seymour home. When he choses the crow world, the Seymours try to take it philosophically.

Jimmy's comings and goings have amazed and fascinated many of the Seymour's neighbors and unsuspecting passers-by.

It began four years ago when a woman appeared at Mike Seymour's Resale Shop, looking for a cage to house a baby crow who'd fallen from a nest. When Mike offered to trade another item for the crow, she readily gave up her charge.

Jimmy took up residence in a large parrot cage. All day long he sat beside Mike's CB radio, listening to the incessant chatter. At the end of the work day, he rode home on the seat of Mike's van.

"As soon as he was ready to fly, we turned him loose," Mike recalls.

"But Jimmy couldn't fly," Jean Seymour adds.

"We chose a weekend to turn him loose, so we could all be home to help. When we realized he couldn't fly, we set the cage on a picnic table with food, just visible, on a stool a short distance away," Mrs. Seymour, a registered nurse, explained.

The family remembers that as his flight pattern increased in distance, so did his vocal agility.

"Jimmy would sit, looking at me, his head nodding, talking in a very serious tone, not saying an intelligible word, but making it all sound like sentences and paragraphs," Jean Seymour remembers. "He'd always end his conversation saying, 'boogie.' Mike thought he was saying 'blue jay'" she laughed.

"Hello" and "How are you" became a regular part of Jimmy's vocabulary, as he took to flying to the nearby Charlevoix Elementary School, where he invariably picked out the Seymour boys, Chris and Kent, during recess and after school.

Swooping into the school yard, Jimmy would perch on the swings, waiting for his "brothers."

Jimmy thoroughly confused one father intent on teaching his preschool daughter to distinguish make believe from reality.

Bree Swan, then 4, enjoyed holding imaginary conversations with animals. When her father, Ken was urged by colleagues at the Charlevoix-Emmet Intermediate School District to make sure she knew animals didn't really talk, Ken encouraged Bree to end her stories with, "I know Dad, animals don't really talk."

Waiting with her father for her older sister Kim, Bree watched a chipmunk dash across the playground, one day.

"Dad, that chipmunk is saying, 'I'd better get out of here before all the kids come.'" Bree grinned, quickly adding, "Yes, Dad, I know, animals don't really talk."

With that, a large black crow hopped onto the car hood, cocked his head and said, "Hello."

Island fed by Mike every afternoon, Jimmy took to flying two blocks down the road to Julius and Edith Gilbert's back yard, for more handouts.

The Gilbert's reputation for gourmet dining somehow had reached Jimmy. They added occasional steak to his diet of hamburger.

"If you wanted a great meal where else would you go?" Jean Seymour quipped.

Jimmy always seemed to know where his family was going. Mike would find him waiting at the post office or store, eager to hitch a ride home on the steering wheel of the van, startling on-lookers.

"Who are you, St. Francis of Assis?" one doctor friend laughed when he first say Jimmy jumping onto the steering wheel.

Jimmy seemed to enjoy chattering from trees in his imitation English, confusing joggers who'd search for the source of the often taunting sounding voice.

Every weekend when the Seymours – 2 adults, 2 boys and 2 dogs - went for a stroll, Jimmy would join the parade, walking on the sidewalk, not flying. He loved to ride on Kent's bike on his newspaper route. And he was a persistant sneak thief.

He flew off with Kent's money bag, swiped candy bars, and often took off with nuts, bolts and small tools as Mike repaired his motorcycle.

When a neighbor was rearranging her two cars one winter day she was startled to hear wind chimes. Looking around she saw Jimmy and the source of the musical sounds – her car keys dangling from his beak.

Feeling quite foolish she cautiously approached the bird, "Here crow, here crow, please give me my keys."

Jimmy flew to a tree. Exasperated she hurried to work and phoned her husband. "When you get home take a ladder across the street and get your car keys out of the tree."

And then, one year ago, Jimmy was gone. The Seymours missed their friend. Occasionally, Mike remembers, a crow flew over his van as he drove to work, but it never landed nor talked to him.

"We raised Jimmy to be a free spirit. If he's chosen to be a crow, we must live with that," Mike consoled his boys.

Five months later a flock of crows arrived in the Seymour's yard. Mike called, "Jimmy" and he came down. The other crows cawed loudly.

Jimmy's been home two weeks now. He's brought several other crows to visit, including a young crow. One crow has become brave enough to join Jimmy on the Seymour front porch.

Jimmy no longer talks, but the Seymours know he's their Jimmy. For one thing, he still pecks at Chris' shoe laces, remembering that Chris, who was very young when Jimmy was first on the scene, used to tease him.

He's returned to his routine of greeting the family every morning by pecking on their front window, waiting for his morning handout, coming down from the trees when his name is called, and sitting on Mike's van's rear view mirror as he leaves for work.

Will he stay?

Mike's only comment was, "He can't get old English cheddar cheese in the woods."

High school art class: chance to explore and create

by ANNE KELLY

Marty Mathers high school art room is an amalgamation of creativity on parade. Here and there, completed drawings or sculptures attest to progress but what mainly strikes the eye is the availability of materials with which to work, close at hand and ready to be explored or made into something else. I have always loved the "feel" of an art room or studio. It is the feeling of possibility that lingers in the air, with infinityas the boundary. For students at the high school, the atmosphere is one of getting down to en enjoyable piece of business.

Beginning students, involved in just scratching the surface of art training, find a wealth of materials and spectrum of mediae with which to dapple, from which to sample. For the more advanced art-oriented student, the class provides a sanctuary of sorts, amidst the busyness of high school life, for creative expression.

Whereas an elementary art program is process oriented, Ms. Mathers explains, the high school level of art training is more product oriented, the accent being on technique and creative expression.

Art 1 is a basic carry-over from Middle School, emphasizing the basics of line, the elements of design, and art terminology. It touches on experimenting with many different mediae. 9th gradcrs are presently creating apple head dolls for which they must decide on a character and costume it accordingly.

Two other courses are offered preceding the Advanced Art course. Pottery and sculpture is one of these. Unique sculptures ranging from piggy banks to buttons await firing in the kiln. The other is Art Media which deals with the more three-dimensional, craft aspects of art-rug hooking, weaving, etc.

At least one of these two courses coupled with Art I are a prerequisite for Advanced Art. Here are the serious students of art who may look towads a possible career in some art related field like commercial or graphic art, fashion design, illustrating, film making. Students of this class are trained in the finer aspects of art with an emphasis on creative expression. A requirement of this class is independent study. Some, like senior Louie Knudston may choose to paint a mural on one of the hallwey walls.

This week Ms. Mather's is displaying her student's work at Boyne Highlands as Charlevoix High School's contribution for the Michigan Art Education Association's State Conference.

Knight on the Town

Important experiment

by Dave Knight

Certainly one of the sadder stories this week is the financial crisis facing the CHIP Counseling Center. It has seen hard times before but its situation now is nothing less than desparate.

This unique attempt to provide in a small community the services of qualified, professional counseling for virtually anyone who asks for it must go down as one of the noblest of experiments.

And experiment it has been.

There is little, if any, proven ground for such a concept. When the organizers started out five years ago with the Ransom bequest, it was like planting a seed from an unlabeled packet. Nobody really knew what would come up.

It is hard to say the idea has failed when there is really nothing with which to compare it. It is even harder to consider something a failure that, for instance, helped 875 people in just one year. What would have happened to those 875 people had CHIP not been available? Would some have gone to another agency? Could they have afforded it? Would some have taken their problems out on other people, possibly other family members?

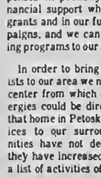
Might some have done something very drastic?

It is all conjecture, of course, but fact is CHIP has earned the respect and support of the community through its valuable contribution, if not enough cold cash.

For those more apt to view such things with a pragmatic eye, there is a solid argument for CHIP's enhancement of a very important natural resource. People. People are a resource with just as much effect on an economy as raw materials or interest rates. To improve this resource is to improve the overall health of the community and make life better for everyone, not just those seeking direct help.

Actually f prefer not to think of people like part of an equation, though. To me, a project such as CHIP represents one of the higher human qualities, compassion.

It is important, I think, thet the experiment continue.



Clockwise

Hats off to Ellsworth

by Bob Clock

CONGRATULATIONS to Ellsworth and the volunteer workers of Banks Township for the fine job they have done refurbishing their old town hall into a gracious and commodious Community Center.

We attended the first dance at the renovated facility Saturday night and the results of their hard work were everywhere. The hardwood floor in the main hall has been sanded and refinished to a high luster, the foyer has been papered and carpeted, new roll-down draperies adorn the windows and paint has been applied liberally throughout.

Proceeds from Saturday night's dance will be used to replace the front doors of the stately old building which had fallen into a state of disrepair over the years.

Many of those attending the festival dance recalled playing basketball and roller skating in the ancient structure when they were kids.

All in all, it's an attractive, sturdy building, worth keeping, preserving — and using.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS are slow to change and Americans generally are pretty set in their ways.

Take weddings, for example. f have been to dozens, including my own, and they're all pretty much the same. Friends and relatives show up at the church at the appointed hour, the bride walks down the aisle on her father's arm to the altar where the old man relinquishes his daughter's care and feeding to a nervous gentleman in a tuxedo. Then they all repair to the church parlors or one of the local watering spots for food, drink and merriment.

Elsewhere in today's Courieryou'll find pictures of a couple who dared to do things differently. They are Barbara Godwin and Dave Chulick of Charlevoix who were married Saturday morning at the First Congregational Church.

The ceremony was fairly traditional, according to all reports, with the Rev. Austin Regier doing the honors. However, after the knot was tied the newly-weds put tradition aside. They had arranged for the Epsilon Jass Band to meet them at the church and lead a parade of wedding guests from the church down Park Avenue, across Bridge Street and over the bridge to where the Bay Queen was waiting to take them all on a reception cruise.

Ushers carried an overhead banner congratulating the couple and the guests all carried helium filled balloons.

When they all started swinging down the middle of Park Avenue to the strains of "When the Saints Come Marching In," you knew right away this wasn't your ordinary wedding.

Now f wasn't invited to the nuptials, mind you. But f happened by when all this was taking place and I have never seen so many happy people at one time since f took the kids to the Shamrock Tavern on Beaver Island to celebrate Richard Nixon's resignation.

There's something about the Epsilon Jass Band that puts a spring in your step and even casual passersby joined the parade.

SO WHY NOT wedding parades? We all like to see pretty brides, and a parade like the Chulicks' lets the whole town in on the fun. It certainly is preferable to having the wedding party ram around town in souped-up jalopies with their horns blaring.

Timms: Taxes for city services and operations can be held down by providing only necessary services. The airport, marina, golf course, water sewer and electric utilities must be self supporting. Employment can be increased by giving new businesses an incentive to locate in the city and not penalize existing businesses with undue regulation.

Whitley: Keep spending down. We all have to do belt tightening (worn out cliche). Unemployment is an area problem more than just a city problem. We should work with the County Commission on Charlevoix County Economic Development Corporation. Making our fndustrial Park available for new industry, with sewer, water and electrical hookups.

4. What future does multiple family housing have in Charlevoix?

Strawbridge: On the face of it we would seem to have adequate multiple family housing in Charlevoix. The May Street apartments, new senior citizen housing project, and new condominiums, all built within the last five to seven years have alleviated the needs in this area. However, we must not preclude the possibility of some future expansion in these areas.

Morris: Multiple family units continue as a world and national trend due to many evident factors. The city has realized this trend is upon us with the passage of an ordinance for 2-3 multiple units, with guide lines for new or converted dwellings. The community has responded very well to the Senior Housing units developed by the Housing Commission after many years of effort. Multiple housing is the only obvious answer to many in all age groups but for the benefit of all this housing must be strategically located.

Timms: There will be more pressure in the future from developers wanting to build multiple housing (condominiums and apartment buildings) because of the lower cost per unit and more intensive use of a parcel of land. The city council will have to examine each project to determine if it will be compatible with the surrounding area. Also the council must be sure the utilities in the development area will be able to handle the added demand.

Whitley: Like it or not It is the way of the future. With the strong R-4 zoning ordinance, f see no problems. The council must hold the line on granting variances for every R-4 project that comes along. Their decision should be made on the long range orderly growth of Charlevoix, not on the sometimes very strong pressures of the moment.

like them having fewer than 100 workers employ 55 percent of the U.S. labor force. During the past decade, two-thirds of all new jobs were created by these firms. Although hurt by the nation's general economy, we still have substantial employment because we are diversified. The Township-City relationship becomes increasingly more important to the economy. We must show leadership in this area to coordinate our efforts.

3. What city services neeed the most immediate attention by the Mayor and Council?

Supernaw: Number one is the water situation though. I don't believe there is a threat to anyone from the TCE found in the water supply. We must do, however, whatever the Health Department dictates. Certainly the sewer system needs attention in some areas for which we have one mil on the ballot which I support. The other thing is parking downtown. After our experience of last summer, I am hoping we can get soemthing done by next June.

Staley: The Charter provides a "Check List" early in the year for "review of all management guidelines" as well as budget reviews and hearings. The section of the Zoning Ordinance pertaining to setback variances for construction of garages, etc. is not working effectively. The process has become too long, too expensive, and too confusing. Often extra time is spent on projects that should be handled quickly and without issue. Sometimes we lost track of the intent of the ordinance because of the red tape. At the same time, larger projects that need supervision are not being pursued. As Mayor I intend to address the above and many others, including but but not limited to, parking, sewer interconnections, employee input, opinions, and morale, record keeping procedures and audit recommendation follow-up, waste in city government, summer weekend clean-up contracts, and the use of local private contractors.

4. How do you feel about large, outside-owned firms competing with locally owned businesses?

Supernaw: We are in a free enterprise system and there is not much we can do. They come in and employ people from Charlevoix which is good. I do have some concern for local businesses that might get hurt. We can't stop such development but we can control it and be selective.

Staley: I feel intense loyalty to the businesses and people who were here first. f also feel government should allow all businesses to operate without unnecessary restrictions. The free enterprise aysem is the best system for all people. While temporary tax relief incentives to build factories which employ a substantial number of people is justifiable, I oppose giving low interest, government backed loans and extended tax exemptions to outside interests creating competition with established retail businesses that have no tax exemptions. The impact of each proposal should be carefully studied and evaluated before any approval is given. I wish to thank the editor and the Courier for their public concern to bring candidate opinions to the general public through their media. In this way, f believe they provide a valuable community service to all.

Letters: Crooked Tree Arts Council, Learning to Read program

Crooked Tree

alive in Charlevoix

Dear Editor:

The support that the Crooked Tree Arts Council enjoys from the Charlevoix community is most encouraging. Many individuals, businesses and industries have given their time and money to help promote the arts in our area. The Crooked Tree Arts Council serves both Charlevoix and Emmet Counties, including East Jordan, Charlevoix, Ironton, Bay Shore, Boyne City, Petoskey and Harbor Springs. If ever there was a saying that aptly applies, its the old saying "in unity there is strength" because by having our seven communities band together, we avoid duplication of effort, we save expenses on publicity, we gain in financial support when applying for grants and in our fund raising campaigns, and we can bring outstanding programs to our area.

In order to bring worthwhile artists to our area we needed a home–a center from which our creative energies could be directed. We found that home in Petoskey, but our services to our surrounding communities have not decreased–in fact, they have increased! How? Here is a list of activities offered to Charlevoix citizens by the Crooked Tree Arts Council this last year starting in Oct. 1980:

Sponsored the Dayton Ballet workshop in the Middle School, Charlevoix. Co-sponsored "The Messiah" sung by the Community choir at the Community Reform Church in Charlevoix. Sponsored Julianne Van den Wyngaard, Faculty Member Grand Valley State College, who gave a piano recital and workshop in our High School in Charlevoix. Sponsored 2 gourmet cooking classes in the home of Lindy Smith and J.J. Kang in Charlevoix. Classes taught by Sue Kleinpell and Hinato Regier, both of Charlevoix. Bussed K-5 Charlevoix Elementary School children to the Virginia McCune Arts Center in Petoskey to see the Prince Street Players from New York City perform "Jack and the Beanstalk". (Putting on a play on a real stage with a backdrop, curtains, lights and sound is far more impressive than putting on that same performance in a gym.) In Spring, Charlevoix students of all grades participated in the Youth Art Exhibit at the Virginia McCune Arts Center. A goodly number of Charlevoix youngsters performed in the musical production "Oliver" performed by the Little Traverse Civic Theater. Eighteen mixed doubles players entered the Racquet for the Arts Tennis Tournament played on four Charlevoix private courts. fn August Crooked Tree Arts Council sponsored weekly noon concerts in East Park. Northwood Symphonette played for a third year at Community Reform Church in Charlevoix.

This month, the Grand Rapids Brass Quintet performed for the music students in the High School followed by a workshop.

Not only do many Charlevoix residents attend pottery, painting, dance and music classes at the Arts Center, but Charlevoix's Fran Tollas teaches children's music and voice classes at the Art Center and Krista Knight, also of Charlevoix, teaches Suzuki violin at the Center.

Charlevoix artists Russel and Sue Bolt, Barbara Godwin and Bonnie Staffel are only a few in this area who are active members of Artists North which group meets every month at the Art Center. In addition, their work is displayed and sold in the shop –The Art Tree.

The above activities are financially supported by your friends and neighbors in Charlevoix and your dollars stay in the community we serve.

An invitation

To the Editor:

On Wednesday, October 28, 1981 at 7:30 atthe elementary school, the parents of the children in the "Learning To Read Better" program are invited to an open house. They are to come with their children and will see the program in operation.

We realize many people have heard about "Learning To Read Better". We would therefore like to extend an invitation to the community to come to the open house. This is the only time during the year that the program will be demonstrated in the evening to give people who work an opportunity to observe. We are pleased that, again this year, we will be able to show the film put together by Louise Anes, Project Director. This film shows the actual procedures used in the program.

The program is now in its second year. The response to the program has been tremendous. Parents, as well as teachers, are pleased with the results. Last year the children showed an average growth of 1½ years in reading. Parents' comments include, "The program is the best thing that ever happenedto my children." When the students themselves were asked last year, "Do you think you are becoming a better reader?", 100% of the third, fourth and fifth grade students in the program answered a definite "yes."

Don't forget! Wednesday, October 28, 7:30 p.m. See you there.

Society gets Young map reprints

The Charlevoix Historical Society has been the recipient of numerous reprints of the unique regional map done by the widely known artist, the late Mrs. Earl A. (Irene) Young, Mrs. Dale Boss, society president, has announced.

These beautiful maps which encompass the region of Emmet County four miles north of Cross Village including the Beaver chain of islands, Charlevoix County to the Antrim County line and both counties to their eastern boundaries were presented to the society by the family of the late Mr. and Mrs. Earl A. Young.

The maps, which are 36 x 37 inches in size, are known as the million dollar sunset maps. The original map was done in 1934. They were updated and reprinted in 1971.

The Charlevoix Historical Society, which is raising funds for its museum, Harsha House located at 102 State Street, will offer the maps for sale from now until January t for $5.00. After that date they will be $9.95, Mrs. Boss said.

It has been suggested that the map in a suitable frame would be an ideal gift for use in a den, family room, office or classroom.

The historical society has also had an original cookbook, published in 1907 by the residents of the community at that time, reprinted for sale at this time. "The Charlevoix Cookbook" as it was called, includes recipes by such early residents as Mrs. Partridge who submitted a recipe for Carrot Stew; Beef Loaf my Mrs. H.S. Harsha, mother of Mrs. Young and grandmother of the late Anne Harsha who willed the family home to the Historical Society; potato salad dressing by Mrs. O.D. Ham-

It's Show Case time again

One can almost hear the strains of "It's beginning to look like Christmas" around the storeroom at the Charlevoix Area Hospital as Mrs. Eleanor Freedman unpacks an early shipment of stock for the Pre-Christmas showing at the Show Case, the gift shop operated by the Women's Guild. These and a host of other gift items will be offered at the annual event scheduled for Thursday and Friday, Nov. 5 and 6.

They're at it again...the Show Case committee at the Charlevoix Area Hospital.. unpacking and preparing for the annual Pre-Christmas showing of a host of gifts and stocking stuffers to be found in the gift shop in the main lobby of the hospital.

As in the past, the pre-Christmas showing of these Christmas ideas will be held the first Thursday and Friday in November. This year the dates are Nov. 5 and 6.

"The unusual, unique and economically priced items you will find at the Show Case are the result of long months of scouting gift shows searching for the things you will find at the Pre-Christmas showing" Mrs. Eleanor Freedman, spokesman for the Show Case Committee said in announcing the event.

Shoppers will find those little gifts suitable for all members of the family as well as the hard-to-find stocking stuffers, all priced to fit everyone's pocketbook she continued.

The hours of the showing will be from 10 a.m. until 7 p.m. Thursday and f0 a.m. until 6 p.m. Friday.

We've tried to arrange our hours for the convenience of all potential shoppers," Mrs. Freedman added.

Serving on the Show Case committee with Mrs. Freedman are Mrs. Marge Dinwiddie and Frances Milner.

The Show Case is operated by the Charlevoix Area Hospital Women's Guild with the proceeds going to finance equipment for the hospital.

Is RADIO as hot as it claims to be?

The Radio Advertising Bureau (RAB) and some local stations tra again — with a blank

You may have heard a radio campaign recently blasting newspapers and extolling the virtues of radio. The campaign was developed by the National Advertising Bureau a national trade organization that promotes radio. While some of the facts may make radio look "red hot" nationally, we found them not true for Emmet and Charlevoix counties.

Let s compare

RAB POINT Radio is ahead of newspapers in reaching upscale consumers

The newspaper audience is upscale both in the percent who read a newspaper on an average day and in the number of newspaper readings. The percentage of listeners who listen to radio on an average day is income group is flat. No advertiser can achieve the daily reach of radio with a schedule unless he buys all available stations all day long.

LOCALLY Studies conducted by Market Opinion Research in Emmet and Charlevoix counties show the News Review particularly strong in readership with those making $15,000 or more. Of those earnings between $15,000 and $20,000 in Emmet and Charlevoix counties 63 percent read the News Review every day. In the $20,000 bracket, 72 percent read the News Review.

Radio doesn't even come close

Re-Elect SAM SUPERNAW

Mayor
Vote Tuesday
Nov. 3, '81
For The Most Experienced and the best qualified.

Here are some of the accomplishments the Mayor and Council have made over the past four years:

Reactivated the Charlevoix Planning Commission for a more direct role in advising the City Council.

Organized a Housing Commission which just completed the Senior Citizens Housing.

Constructed a greatly needed new water tower for the City.

Established financial soundness in City finances by hiring a Comptroller and more recently a City Treasurer who has an excellent financial background to hand our almost three million dollar budget.

Had an electrical, water and sewer rate study done which has made rates equitable to all citizens and businesses in the Charlevoix area.

Promoted new dock space for our beautiful City marina.

What's for the future? In addition to trying to direct the growth of Charlevoix, our sewer system is one of the top priorities. There is a ballot proposal for one mill for our sewer system which I support.

Downtown Charlevoix needs more parking. We are presently looking into obtaining an outright grant in order to increase our downtown parking capacity.

I would like to continue for another term as Mayor for the City of Charlevoix, and I would greatly appreciate your support in this upcoming election.

Sincerely,
SAM SUPERNAW

GARLIC IN THE WINDOW

Colleen Titsworth
Manager

Don't step on a crack, or you'll break your mother's back.

--Place a clove of garlic in your window frame to ward off the evil eye.

You may be chuckling at these suggestions, but how many of you chuckers nonchalantly walk around a ladder rather than beneath it or are terrified of breaking a mirror?

Although superstitions linger only faintly in American culture, they are still quite strong in many parts of the world. In centuries past, they played a major role in daily life the world over.

Did you know that people were afraid to be without talismans or lucky charms? And gemstones were among the major objects used as such.

For instance, a warrior would wear or carry an agate to protect himself from danger and to ensure victory over his foes. If he was inclined to lose sleep after a day's battle, the agate would cure his insomnia and ensure pleasant dreams.

Amethyst was thought to have a sobering effect -- not only on those drunk on alcoholic spirits but also on those drunk with the passion of love.

The emerald was believed to confer the ability to foretell the future and to recognize whether or not a lover was being faithful to his or her vows. Its psychic powers carried over into the realms of memory and logic, so that the wearer of an emerald was assured of eloquent speech.

Gemstones were probably chosen to carry beneficial powers because their mysterious beauty was so spellbinding to our ancestors.

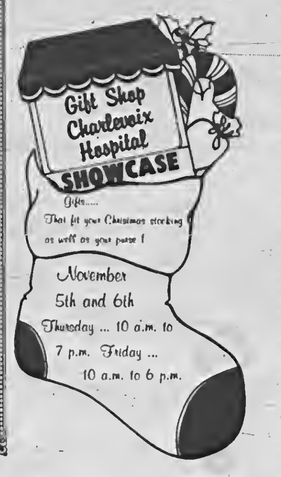
Mesquite plans ghost ship

The U. S. Coast Guard Cutter Mesquite will become a "ghost ship" this weekend as Lt. Cdr. Harold Blomberg and the crew of the ship host the annual Halloween party Saturday evening for the children of the Charlevoix area.

Ghosts, goblins and ghouls will greet the youngsters who may be dressed in costumes for trick or treat if they wish. From 6 to 8 p.m. the visitors will be escorted through the ship before being returned to a variety of goodies.



CHIP...

CHIP Counseling Center was created in 1976 when the Woodbury Ransom family, summer residents of Charlevoix, provided funds to establish a community counseling facility as a memorial to their son, Charles Allen "Chip" Ransom who was killed in a boating accident off Pine Point in Lake Charlevoix.

Over the center's five-year existence, seed money provided by the Ransoms has amounted to over $262,000. Despite efforts to convert the center to a self-supporting status, its revenues from fees and collections have not been able to keep up with operating expenses. Its present financial crisis has become especially severe with the Ransom subsidy apparently used up.

Clients using CHIP's services pay fees based on a sliding scale determined by their income. Counseling fees currently range on the scale from $3to $40 an hour. During the center's 1980-81 fiscal year which ended September 30, 875 clients were served and the average fee was $10.39 an hour.

Excluding the Substance Abuse program, CHIP incurred expenses over the year of $57,491 while revenues totaled $55,377 for an operating deficit of $2,080 according to a budget committee report. Fees and collections totaled $46,877 with the Ransom subsidy and public support comprising the balance of the revenues.

At present, efforts are being made to initiate employee counseling programs with area industries on a contractual basis to provide a steady source of income for the center.

Said Schoeder, "Even though we are in a financial crisis right now, I remain optimistic that CHIP will be able to survive, though it may not be in the same form that the board and I had first envisioned. The reason for my optimism is our industrial program which is our best possibility for an immdeiate source of funds."

CHIP has already contracted with LexaLite International of Charlevoix and, according to Schroeder, the program has been enthusiastically received by the firm.

Schroeder said that developments over the next four weeks will determine the future of CHIP.

"We just need something to carry us through the period between subsidation and self-support," he said, "It's going to be very tight and we'll need some answers very soon."

All Savers Certificate

NOW AVAILABLE

Get up to $2,000.00 Tax-Free Interest at Family Federal Savings.

These new one year certificates will allow you to exclude the interest from your State of Michigan and federal income tax — up to $2,000.00 on a joint return and $1,000.00 on an individual return. The minimum deposit required on the All-Savers Certificate is $500.00. The interest rate will be 70% of the average investment yield for 52-week U.S. Treasury Bills. The Treasury Bill rate changes every fourth Thursday, and the All-Savers Certificate rate changes on the next Monday following the fourth Thursday. This account is insured to $100,000.00 by the FSLIC.

It's what's left after taxes that counts.

An exact comparison of the tax-free interest rate on All-Savers Certificates with the rate of return on taxable investments, of course, depends upon an individual's complete income tax situation. You may wish to consult your tax advisor for this purpose. However, in general terms it can be said that an All-Savers Certificate paying 10% could have an equivalent taxable rate of as much as 20% for a taxpayer in the 50% tax bracket.

Federal regulations require a substantial interest penalty and loss of interest exclusion in the event of early withdrawal

Lewis St. says goodbye to two old residents

Charlevoix lost two of its most senior citizens last week when a pair of gnarled old maples were taken down in the front yard of the Freda Stewart home on Lewis St. Crews arrived in the early morning hours, above, to remove the trees which were estimated at close to 200 years old. Their chain saws made short work of the trees, right, whose aging limbs were becoming a hazard. Now the Stewart home stands without its ancient sentinels, below.

Brunett finds Char-Em duties fulfilling most of the time

by ANNE KELLY

Mike Brunett, school psychologist, is a member of one of the three teams of special education staff serving Charlevoix and Emmet Counties. Mike's duties find him covering the territory between Charlevoix and Central Lake, as well as Beaver Island offering his services to 15 schools, both public and parochial, included in his "Southern" team's district.

A graduate of Western Michigan University, Mike's credentials include a year of teaching U.S History and Psychology in Harper Creek, Michigan and a year of working with the "Custer Job Core" program, a program for the underprivileged initiated during the term of former President Johnson. Perhaps as a result of working in this capacity, Mike was prompted to pursue his interest in psychology and special education. He returned to school and received his Specialist in Education degree from Western Michigan University. Subsequently five years were spent with the Kalamazoo public schools as a special education teacher.

As is often the case, the beauty of northern Michigan and a love of the outdoors drew Mike and his wife, Bonnie, north. Today Mike, his wife and their two children find themselves settled in East Jordan.

During the seven years Mike has spent with the Charlevoix-Emmet Intermediate School District, he has found his efforts to have been fulfilling if perhaps frustrating at times. When he began at Char-Em his duties were more flexible in dealing with parent concerns, teacher concerns, and both the gifted and the special education student. As a result of the wide scale cutbacks in state and federal funding, Mike along with all educators, finds his role more restricted. Mike would define his role as that of "providing educational evaluations to assist schools in developing special education programs as required by state and federal law."

What are parents to do who suspect a possible psychological problem in their child? I asked Mike to explain.

"Most parents are very concerned about their child. Their child is the most important commodity they have." Sometimes it's hard for parents to sort out the things that are part of the normal process of development and those that may require special services. If after evaluation, it is decided that a problem does exist, assistance is given to parents and schools in the form of suggestions or referrals to other community agencies. Of course, the earlier concerns are referred and evaluated, the better the cance of success in dealing with them. Sometimes just the knowledge that other parents are experiencing similar difficulties is supportive therapy in itself.

Regarding psychological concerns of parents in the normal process of growing up, Mike stresses the importance of starting early.

"It's important to establish a rapport with your child when they're young. Then it will be easier to handle normal adjustment problems that come later."

In the Charlevoix area, we are fortunate in having the availability of the diagnostic services provided by Char-Em as well as school counselling services, the Chip Counselling Center (which includes a substance abuse program), Bergmann Center, and the Charlevoix House.

As Mike Brunett would put it, "I am personally impressed with not only the availability of programs, but the quality of mental health programs and services in the Charlevoix area."

JV grid squad records 5th victory

The Charlevoix junior varsity football team upped their season record to 5-1 last Thursday with a 20-8 victory over Grayling.

The Rayders scored first in the game when Tim LaBlance took the ball into the endzone from six yards out in the first quarter. The extra point attempt was no good.

Charlevoix increased its lead in the second quarter when LaBlance hit Neild LaCroix with a 60-yard scoring pass and Pat Mitchell added two points on the conversion attempt for a 14-0 halftime lead.

In the third quarter, Mitchell added six more points with a four-yard touchdown run.

Grayling finally made it onto the scoreboard in the third quarter with a four-yard touchdown run and two point conversion that made the final score 20-8.

Beaudoin leads Rayders past Viking threat

Offensive stalwart Mark Beaudoin topped the 100-yard rushing mark once more, his sixth straight game in triple figures, to help the Rayder varsity grid squad to their fifth win of the season over Grayling by a 18-12 score Friday night.

Beaudoin accounted for 144 total yards rushing and both Charlevoix touchdowns in a win that will keep Charlevoix knotted in a three-way tie for second in the conference at 5-1, 5-2 overall.

The Rayders sprung to an 8-0 lead in the first quarter when Beaudoin slashedinto the endzone from the nine-yard line for the touchdown and then carried the ball over for a two point conversion.

The Grayling Vikings came back in the second period with a Terry Norman to Jerry Norman pass play from two yards out. The extra point attempt was unsuccessful and Charlvoix took an 8-6 lead into the lockeroom.

No points were put on the board by either team in the third quarter but in the fourth, Beaudoin struck again, this time from six yards out, and quarterback Scott Kelly hit end Ross Carey for two more points and a 16-6 cushion.

Terry Norman finished the scoring for Grayling with a 55-yard scoring pass to Dan Lucksted but it was too late and too little to catch the Rayders who wold have had at least six more points had not a 63-yard touchdown run by Beaudoin been called back on a penalty.

Defensively, co-captain Mike Loper had 11 tackles with Chris Putman not far behind with 9.

Charlevoix's dominance of the game shows up more in the stats than the score; they racked up 11 first downs to Grayling's 5, 206 rushing yardage to Grayling's 81 and 237 total offensive yards to Grayling's 167. The Rayders were, however, also way ahead in yards penalized with 140 to Grayling's 25.

This week Rogers City (2-5 overall) comes to Charlevoix.

Wojans cops flag title

Wojans with a season record of six wins and no losses captured the title in the Charlevoix Township Flag Football League.

Two of the team's wins came last week when they defeated the Landings 20-0 and Consumers Power 18-0.

The Coast Guard Station moved into a 3-3 tie with the Landings after edging Consumers 19-18 and the Landings 25-18. Consumers closed out the season with an 0-6 record.

In their game on Thursday, Wojans did all their scoring in the first half with Scott Kerridge scoring on a 10 yard run and passing to Steve Dunkelberg for the P.A.T. and to Dan McKenzie for 25 yards and a TD in the first period. Dunkelberg then got off a 15 yarder to McKenzie for a score and to Brian VanLoo for the conversion.

On Thursday, the champions shut out Consumers Power 18-0.

After getting off to a slow start, the Coast Guard Station posted two wins to finish in a second place tie with the Landings.

It was a conversion point on a pass from Jim Rogers to Denny Brenk in the second period that spelled victory for the Coast Guard in Thursday's game. A 31 yard pass by Rogers to Randy Norton and a second, an eight yarder, to Brenk plus a TD on a six yard run by Rogers combined with the P.A.T. that gave the service team the win. Consumers had scored on a six yard run by Scott Olmstead and two passes, a 15 yarder and a 25 yarder to Roger Crain.

In Friday's game, the Coast Guard won 25-18.

The scoring in Friday's games was not made available.

CITY OF CHARLEVOIX COUNCIL MINUTES

October 19, 1981
8:00 P.M.

The Common Council of the City of Charlevoix met on the above date and time with Mayor Supernaw presiding.

Present: Councilmembers Block, Porter, Timms, Roloff, Wood, and Muma. Absent: None.

The minutes of the October 5, 1981 regular meeting were approved as presented in writing and as recorded in the Council Minutes Book.

A Public Hearing was held regarding the request submitted by Michael Barnard to establish a Commercial Redevelopment District at the corner of Ferry Ave. and Stover Road. Mr. Barnard stated that his proposed commercial development of the site meets the State criteria to qualify for a Commercial Facilities Exemption Certificate. Councilmembers questioned the fact that Mr. Barnard had appeared ready to proceed with the project at the time he presented his Site Plan to the Council without being considered for an Exemption Certificate. Mr. Barnard explained that, due to the present state of the economy and high interest rates, the Exemption Certificate would provide an inducement to start the project as soon as possible which would result in an immediate benefit to the City rather than waiting for interest rates to come down. The City Treasurer pointed out that Mr. Barnard would pay taxes on 50% of the assessed valuation of his project if the Exemption Certificate is granted.

The following Resolution was offered and moved for its adoption by Councilman Timms and supported by Councilman Wood.

RESOLUTION NO. 81-10-1

WHEREAS, by petition duly filed, the Board was petitioned to establish a Commercial Redevelopment District pursuant to Act 255, 1978; and

WHEREAS, due notice has been given for a public hearing on said petition; and

WHEREAS, at such hearing held on the 19th day of October, 1981, all parties interested therein were heard and given due consideration; and

WHEREAS, the property involved is legally described as: Lands and premises situated in the City of Charlevoix, County of Charlevoix and State of Michigan:

Beginning at an iron pin located at the intersection of the centerline of Stover Road and the centerline of Ferry Avenue; thence Northerly along the centerline of Ferry Avenue 158 feet to an iron pin; thence Westerly at right angles to the East line of the Para Marquetta Railroad right of way; thence Southwestwardly along the East line of said Para Marquetta Railroad right of way to the center line of Stover Road; thence Easterly along the centerline of Stover Road to the place of beginning, EXCEPTING THEREFROM Stover Road and Ferry Avenue highway right of ways and part of said premises in the Southeast corner thereof now used as a public highway; said land being part of the Northeast quarter of Section 35, Township 34 North, Range 8 West.

WHEREAS, after considering all the testimony presented to the Council, this Council has determined that the proposed District is characterized by obsolete commercial property and vacant land which is part of the existing developed commercial zone, which obsolete commercial property has been zoned commercial for three (3) years prior to the effective date of P.A. 255 and is characterized by being obsolete with a decline in commercial activity.

NOW, THEREFORE, BE IT RESOLVED that the City Council of the City of Charlevoix ordains that the petition to establish a Commercial Redevelopment District for the above described property is approved.

Resolution was adopted by the following yea and nay vote.

Yeas: Councilmembers Block, Porter, Timms, Wood, and Muma.
Nays: Councilwoman Roloff.
Absent: None.

A Public Hearing was held regarding Michael Barnard's Application for a Commercial Facilities Exemption Certificate for his commercial complex at the corner of Ferry Ave. and Stover Road, for a period of 12 years. Councilmembers generally agreed that they would consider granting the Certificate for a shorter period of time and discussed Mr. Barnard's failure to apply for a Certificate when he presented his Site Plan for the complex.

The following Resolution was offered and moved for its adoption by Councilman Muma and supported by Councilman Wood.

RESOLUTION NO. 81-10-2

WHEREAS, The Common Council of the City of Charlevoix met on Monday October 19, 1981, in a Public Hearing as heretofore resolved and noticed for the purpose of establishing a certain described area known as 15-52-335-073.00 on the City tax roll as Charlevoix Commercial Redevelopment District #2; and

WHEREAS, during said Public Hearing the City Council heard all persons desiring to be heard either orally or in writing with respect to the designation of the subject area as Commercial Redevelopment District #2, pursuant to 1978 PA 255, Section 5, et seq.; and

WHEREAS, such designation met all of the prerequisites of the cited act; and

WHEREAS, pursuant to 1978 PA 255, Section 5, et seq.; the City Council established Charlevoix Commercial Redevelopment District #2, and

WHEREAS, Michael Bernard, owner of a parcel of realty within said District #2, has applied for a Commercial Facilities Exemption Certificate under the provisions of 1978 PA 255, Section 6, et seq.; and

WHEREAS, pursuant to 1978 PA 255, Section 6 (2), the City Clerk has caused to be posted a notice of a Public Hearing concerning granting of said Commercial Facilities Exemption Certificate; and

WHEREAS, the City Clerk has further notified in writing the legislative body of each affected taxing unit of said hearing; and

WHEREAS, representatives of said taxing units and interested citizens have had an opportunity to be heard with regard to said application; and

WHEREAS, the Commercial Facilities Exemption Certificate for Michael Barnard is legally described as:

Lands and premises situated in the City of Charlevoix, County of Charlevoix, State of Michigan, viz: "Beginning at an iron pin located at the intersection of the centerline of Stover Road and the centerline of Ferry Avenue; thence Northerly along the centerline of Ferry Avenue 158 feet to an iron pin; thence Westerly at right angles to the East line of the Para Marquetta Railroad right of way; thence Southwestwardly along the East line of said Para Marquetta Railroad right of way to the center line of Stover Road; thence Easterly along the centerline of Stover Road to the place of beginning, EXCEPTING THEREFROM Stover Road and Ferry Avenue highway right of ways and part of said premises in the Southeast corner thereof now used as a public highway; said land being part of the Northeast quarter of Section 35, Township 34 North, Range 8 West." Known on the tax roll as 15-52-335-073.00.

and as such is located within the Charlevoix Commercial Redevelopment District #2; and

WHEREAS, the application of Michael Bernard for a Commercial Facilities Exemption Certificate is for 12 years permitted under Section 9 (2) of PA 255 of 1978.

NOW THEREFORE BE IT RESOLVED, the City Council of the City of Charlevoix in consideration of the facts identified above hereby approve the Commercial Facilities Exemption Certificate #2 for Michael Barnard for 6 years personally under the act based on his property's assessed valuation as of December 31, 1981.

Resolution was adopted by the following yea and nay vote.

Yeas: Councilmembers Porter, Timms, Wood, and Muma. Nays: Councilmembers Block and Roloff. Absent: None.

The following Ordinance was offered and moved for its adoption by Councilman Muma and supported by Councilman Timms.

ORDINANCE NO. 389

5.226 Non-Conforming Lots of Record. VACANT lots of record that are non-conforming because of lack of required number of acres or minimum number of square feet shall be allowed to be built on provided that a residential structure shall not be allowed to be built on any lot with less then fifty (50) feet of street frontage and variances MAY be allowed for required setback, yard sizes, provided that the adequate potable water supply and proper and safe sewage disposal facilities can be provided

Wood: Fuel of The 80's

Know the facts before installing a system

If you are like millions of Americans heating their homes with wood, you should know how to get the most out of every heating dollar you spend on each cord. Follow a few suggestions from the Wood Heating Alliance:

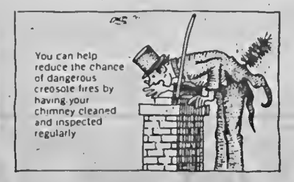
Buy and burn well-seasoned or air-dried wood. The greater the amount of moisture in the wood, the more heat is lost in the evaporation process when wood is burned. Wood should be seasoned at least six months after it has been cut.

Buy your wood in the spring or early summer to help assure proper seasoning before the wood-burning season. You may also be able to benefit from off-season prices.

Know the difference between a standard or full cord, a face cord and a "truck load." A standard or full cord is a stack of wood eight feet long, four feet high and four feet wide. A face cord is a stack eight feet long, four feet high and as wide as the individual lenths, of wood. This could be 12, 16 or 24 inches. (A 16-inch length face cord is 1-3 of a full cord.) A face cord is always less than a full cord. A "truck load" is not a standard measure and depends on the size of the dealer's truck. A standard pickup holds only about 1-3 to 1-2 of a full cord. Most dealers are reputable and it is reasonable to expect small variations in the size of the wood piles. But, if you feel you have been cheated, contact your state consumer protection agency.

Store firewood outdoors to keep insects in the wood out of your house. Store wood under cover to keep it dry. The drier the wood, the more fuel value it has. A sheet of plastic is better than nothing if a wood or utility shed or garage is unavailable. Keep an air space between the wood and any covering and store the wood off the ground.

Plenty of insulation helps make heating with wood even more economical.



Wood is becoming more economical in comparison

In the past, wood has supplied approximately 90 percent of our energy needs. But, as gas and oil became cheaper, that figure decreased to less than 1 percent in 1970. Since the 1973 oil embargo, more and more Americans are returning to this country's renewable fuel. A survey conducted for the Wood Heating Alliance estimated that nearly 24 million American households own at least one wood-burning stove or fireplace.

Is Woodheating Economical For You?
This depends on the cost of a cord of wood compared to the cost of fossil fuels in your area. It also depends on the efficiency of your furnace or woodburning applicance. Use the following charts to compare the price you pay for gas, oil or electricity to the equivalent price per cord of wood. The two prices should meet at the line indicating the efficiency of your appliance.

Catalytic combustion

The heart of the catalytic stove is a ceramic honeycomb coated with a thin film of precious metal catalyst. The chemical catalytic action of the converter forces wood smoke to undergo a catalytic reaction before it passes out the chimney. The smoke is reburned as it passes through the converter, and most of its harmful material is consumed. This a true third stage of combustion.

Catalytic action means that the stove uses 30 percent less wood to produce the same amount of heat as ordinary "airtight" stoves.

Catalytic stoves involve latest in technology

All across the country, homeowners are returning to the past to solve the uniquely modern problem of rapidly rising fuel costs.

To combat high energy bills, millions of Americans have switched back to wood, our oldest source of heating energy. Now, thanks to a major advancement in wood stove design, the trend should continue even more strongly in the 1980s.

The catalytic wood stove, a technological breakthrough, was accomplished by combining a catalytic converter (similar in concept to those used in auto exhaust systems) and a stove with specially designed internal air flow paths to provide up to 85 percent heating efficiency and reduced air pollution.

That's why catalytic combustion has been trumpeted as the first major innovation in wood burning and why wood stove marketers are calling the 1980s the "catalytic decade."

To understand the reasoning behind the wood industry's enthusiasm, it's necessary to look back to 1973. Prior to that, conventional fuel sources such as oil and gas were in plentiful supply. The 1973 Arab oil embargo forced up those fuel costs and sent homeowners wearching for alternative heating methods.

In wood, consumers found a fuel source that literally "grew on trees." A wood stove boon quickly followed, and since the embargo, approximately 7 million stoves have been purchased. Demand is now approximately 1.5 million units per year.

However, the stove rush pointed out a number of wood-burning drawbacks: heavy demand drastically drove up the cost of wood, the quality and efficiency of some heating units was substandard, and widespread wood-burning in some low-lying New England and Far Western areas caused an unhealthy, unsightly haze of air pollution.

The catalytic wood burner answers all these concerns, leading some industry forecasters to predict a dramatic increase in wood as a home fuel source. In fact, it is estimated that wood fuel technology can provide 7 to 10 percent of future U.S. energy needs in an environmentally safe manner.

Clean and safe

The catalytic stove effectively eliminates creosote and emission particles that would otherwise pollute the air. Pollution tests indicate that harmful emissions from the catalytic stove are significantly lower than from traditional stoves. Further study showed that three homes can be heated by catalytic wood stoves with the same amount of pollution now caused by one regular stove.

The catalytic stove also burns mildly seasoned and highly resinous wood without fear of creosote buildup and with little loss of efficiency. It's almost impossible to burn those types of softwoods in a traditional stove.

The homeowner who installs a catalytic stove this winter will be at the forefront of the "catalytic decade." He will also heat his home more economically and with virtually no risk of creosote buildup in his chimney.

Economic and efficient

Catalytic burners operate almost as well as many gas or oil-fired units. They burn nearly all the potential fuel in the wood. Traditional airtight stoves waste one-third of the potential fuel, nearly six times as much as the catalytic.

Two factors combine to produce the overall efficiency of any wood stove: combustion efficiency--the percentage of potential fuel that is converted to heat; and transfer efficiency--the percentage of heat delivered to the room. Traditional stove designs require a tradeoff: improvements in combustion efficiency cause reductions in heat transfer efficiency and vice versa.

By contrast, catalytic stoves are the first to achieve nearly complete combustion efficiency (95 percent) while equalling the 80 percent transfer efficiency found in better traditional stoves. The result is an overall efficiency of 85 percent as compared with 55 percent for typical non-catalytics.

A woodburning checklist for the beginner

You may already be heating your home with wood. Or, you may be considering purchasing a wood stove, fireplace or fireplace insert. But, before you make a selection or start that first fire, use this wood-burning checklist from the Wood Heating Alliance.

Choose a wood-burning stove, fireplace or fireplace insert that has been safety-tested by a recognized, listed authority.

Check local fire and building codes for installation recommendations and clearance standards.

Be absolutely sure you follow manufacturer's instructions and clearance standards to the letter.

Use recommended materials to vent your appliance. Wood-burning stoves and fireplaces require a Class A, All-Fuel chimney. Be sure chimney is properly installed.

Do not burn treated wood, flamable liquids, or trash in your appliance.

Keep all combustibles away from the appliance.

Have your chimney cleaned and inspected regularly, especially before each wood-burning season. Then, follow regular maintenance program.

Where to cut

Our national forests are full of undesirable trees that are poorly formed, diseased or of little-use or weed species. These trees compete for sunlight, food and water with valuable crop trees. Diseased trees pose a health problem to nearby healthy trees. Fallen and dead trees increase the chance of wildfire and insect problems.

Before you begin cutting or collecting wood, however, the Wood Heating Alliance suggests you contact your state forestry office for help with your selection.

Firewood can also be obtained from dumps and landfill, but be sure you first get approval from the landfill authority.

Sawmills are another possible firewood source. Scraps, trim and edgings may be obtained at a nominal cost.

Your state forester, county extension agenta and county and city foresters can help provide additional firewood sources.

Some woodburning terms:

Airtight Stove
Airtight stove is a generic term for any stove having tight joints and controlled drafts. Most modern stoves are airtight while antique stoves and their reproductions usually are not.

Catalytic Stove
A wood-burning stove that includes a catalytic combustor. The combustor's purpose is to lower the ignition point of bydrocarbon gases evolved from the wood so that these gases burn like a fuel instead of going up the chimney.

Fireplace Insert
An appliance that increases the efficiency of an existing masonry fireplace by converting it from a radiant heater to a convective one, and reducing the amount of room air drawn up the chimney.

Heat-Circulating Fireplace
Usually a factory-built fireplace that adds to the standard radiant heat output by distributing useful amounts of convected heat. Some units increase heating efficiency through use of fans and glass doors.

Heat Shield
A protective unit consisting of sheet metal of a specific gauge and asbestos millboard anchored one inch out from the wall or ceiling to allow air to flow freely. The heat shield allows wood stoves to be placed closer to a combustible material.

Clearance Standard
A required distance from a heat-producing surface to nearby construction or combustibles.

Combustibles
Materials which bcb will burn if subjected to fire or intense beat. Concrete, brick, masonry, and stone are noncombustibles. A sheetrock or woodframed wall covered by a noncombustible material is still considered to be a combustible wall.

Factory-Built or Engineered Fireplace
An integral fire chamber and chimney assembly, usually listed or approved by a recognized safety testing laboratory, consisting entirely of factory-made parts for unit or component assembly without requiring field construction.

Creosote
A black, tarry or flaky substance that forms in chimneys from the condensation of wood gases not burned in the combustion process. Accumulated in large amounts, it could become fuel for a chimney fire.

Zero-Clearance Fireplace
A factory-built fireplace where the outermost layer stays cool to touch even with a hot fire burning in the firebox. This unit can be safely installed in direct contact with wood walls and floors. Not all factory-built fireplaces are zero-clearance, however.

Dedication of Pine River Place will cap seven-year effort

by FRAN MARTIN

Seven years of work by the Charlevoix Housing Commission will be climaxed Sunday, October 11 with the dedication of Pine River Place located at 210 W. Garfield Ave. in Charlevoix.

The 62-unit, three-story low income housing facility built with a loan from the Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) will be dedicated at a formal ceremony at 2 p.m Sunday according to Ralph McRae, chairman of the Housing Commission.

A tour of the facility with members of the commission as guides will follow.

Judge Harvey C. Varnum of the 90th District Court will be the principal speaker at the dedication ceremony to be held in the lounge on the first floor of the building. Also speaking briefly will be Elmer J. Veen of Grand Rapids, HUD representative; Dean Davenport of Big Rapids, representing the former owners of the property; Paul Peterson, director of the Traverse City Housing Commission; David Tulos of Grand Rapids, chief architect of Daverman and Associates and William Saxton representing West Shore Builders, Inc. of Ludington, prime contractor for the $1.627 million structure.

U.S. Senator Donald Riegle, through whose efforts HUD funds were obtained to finance the building, and U.S. Representative Robert Davis who officiated at the groundbreaking ceremonies on August 5, 1980 have sent regrets that they will be unable to attend the dedication because of pressing business in Washington.

McRae, who will serve as master of ceremonies for the program, will introduce members of the Housing Commission including Marge Dinwiddie, vice-chairman, Ralph S. Hamilton, secretary; Ralph Shapton, treasurer; Robert Cook, first president of the commission and Edwin Gregory, executive director. Others involved with the project will also be introduced.

Pine River Place has 62 units including 53 one-bedroom units for singles and couples, six one-bedroom units for the handicapped, two two-bedroom units for the handicapped and one two-bedroom unit for the live-in custodian, Jeff Wilhelm.

It also features an attractive lounge with a two-story ceiling and adjacent, Pullman-type kitchen, lobby, two public rest rooms, general office, manager's office, free operating laundry room with three washers and dryers and lounge area, elevator (with front and rear doors), receiving,

Best in security, fire prevention equipment provided to residents

by DAVE KNIGHT

Residents of the Pine River Place senior citizens housing project will enjoy all the comforts of a modern apartment complex plus some added conveniences specially designed for this facility's particular use.

Each living unit, for example, features two emergency signal mechanisms. These consist of strings hanging from the wall in both the bedroom and the bathroom. When a resident pulls one of the strings, an alarm sounds in the first floor office and a light goes on in the hallway over the resident's door.

The alarm cannot be turned off in the office; it can only be turned off at the point where the string is pulled so anyone triggering the alarm will be assured that help is on the way.

Each unit is also equipped with an intercom system linking the units with the front entrance of the building. When a visitor or delivery person comes, he presses the appropriate button to ring the apartment. The resident can then converse with the visitor through a speaker system and, if the door is locked, press another button to open it electronically.

Nothing has been spared in the way of fire detection and prevention. Smoke detectors are located in every unit and in several other locations throughout the building. Ceiling sprinklers are also liberally located throughout.

More sophisticated fire prevention systems include a pressure differential of about five pounds of air pressure between the hallways and the units. Special fans and vents create the slightly higher pressure in the hallways so that smoke from a fire in an individual unit would be contained in that unit. The pressure differential also prevents the escaping of any odor from individual apartments.

There are six fire doors in the facility equipped with electronic smoke detection mechanisms that automatically close the doors when triggered by smoke from a fire.

When any of the fire prevention equipment is activated, whether a sprinkler or one of many manual fire alarms provided (along with more fire extinguishers than in most apartment buildings), an alarm goes off at the city fire department as well.

Even trash collection is automated at Pine River Place. Residents on the second and third floors need haul their full garbage bags no further than the end of the hallway where a chute opens to the bottom floor. The chute goes down to a trash compactor which feeds the compacted refuse into a standard "dumpster" type container which is then rolled out the back door for pick-up by a garbage truck.

There is also a system for regularly spraying the garbage chute with a pleasantly scented disinfectant. The only problem with the garbage system so far is that first floor residents will probably have to take the elevator up to the second floor to throw their garbage down the chute; there is no access to the compactor on the first floor.

compactor and electrical room, mechanical room, miscellaneous storage and janitor's rooms.

There are ceramic tile floors in the lobby, entrance and restrooms; carpeting in the corridors, community room and apartments; all windows and exterior glass doors are triple-glazed; each floor will have three or more exits and heating is gas-fired hot water radiation with thermostats in each unit.

Heat will be supplied by five separate boilers as the weather demands. A standby generator will provide electrical service within 30 seconds if the city electrical service fails.

Walls in all the apartments have a white finish and drapery liners are provided. Walls in the corridors have a burlap-type finish.

The entire project will be financed by a $2.4 million low interest loan through HUD.

Glad to have been a part of the Pine River Place Project.

Council approves site plan for 7-11, OKs sign ordinance

by DAVE KNIGHT

Two familiar topics — signs and parking — dominated Monday night's City Council meeting. Council members took steps, albeit cautious ones, toward setting definitive policy in both areas following lively discussion.

Though their most far reaching action was to adopt a new comprehensive sign ordinance, a tougher decision for the council involved one particular sign; that proposed for a new 7-11 store downtown.

At the Oct. 26 meeting, the City Planning Commission endorsed the site plan for the 7-11 store at the location formerly occupied by Muma's Service Station at the corner of Belvedere and Bridge Street. The site plan approval carried with it approval for rear and side yard setbacks which the 7-11 parent firm, Garb-Ko, Inc., of Saginaw, sought because of lot peculiarities.

In approving the 7-11 site plan, the planning commission set the condition that the store's sign be made of wood and conform in size to the sign ordinance. At Monday's council meeting, however, Garb-Ko real estate director John Healey sought to delete the wooden sign requirement.

Said Healey, "I'm here to recommend that we erect our standard sign." The sign proposed by Healey would be plastic, lit from inside and 31½ square feet in area. He maintained that 7-11 "does not have any wooden signs" and that the plastic sign would be important for customer recognition.

Audience member Bruce MacArthur urged the council to stand firm on the wooden sign requirement saying that in a phone conversation with a 7-11 employee earlier that day, he learned the firm had contacted MacDonald's which recently agreed to install a wooden sign on their Bridge Street franchise now under construction.

MacArthur also presented the council with petitions signed by 214 Charlevoix citizens and 162 residents outside the city encouraging wooden signs.

Planning commission member Thomas Duke pressed for the wooden sign saying, "Chains such as 7-11 say they have their image to protect but Charlevoix has its image to protect also." Duke also pointed out that if the council allows 7-11 to have a plastic sign, "it's a slap in the face to all those other businesses in Charlevoix which have cooperated in improving the city's appearance."

On a motion by council member Shirley Roloff, the council voted 5-0 (council member Earl Muma abstained) to approve the 7-11 site plan but without the sign which will be reviewed "at a later date."

As almost an anticlimax, the council then voted 6-0 to approve the new sign ordinance which has been deliberated for over a year and which will go into effect in 30 days.

Taking up the controversial subject of downtown parking, the council heard a strong plea by planning commission members David Strawbridge and Thomas Duke to adopt two recommendations by the commission.

The first would repeal the previous exemption enjoyed by the Central Business District for offstreet parking requirements and the second would set a fee of $2,000 for every additional parking space required by a new or expanding business without sufficient onsite parking. The $2,000 assessments would then be devoted to a special fund to procure more downtown parking.

Duke argued for the two-step plan saying, "In 1972 and '73, local merchants paid for a study to be done on

Apportionment committee sets ground rules

by PEG OHLE

The Charlevoix County Apportionment Committee, which is charged with the duty of dividing the county into districts for representation on the County Board of Commissioners, held a procedural meeting last Monday evening to set up ground rules for doing its job.

An Apportionment Committee convenes every ten years, following release of official census figures, to decide the number of districts the county should be divided into, and the boundary lines of each district.

Presently, Charlevoix County is divided into 15 districts, each of which has a representative on the County Board of Commissioners. The City of Charlevoix and Boyne City each have three districts, and, therefore, three County Commissioners. East Jordan has two districts and two County Commissioners. The fifteen townships are divided into seven districts, each with a County Commissioner.

The Apportionment Committee may decide to keep the number of districts at 15, the maximum number allowed by law for a county the size of Charlevoix, or it may decide to cut the number. Five is the minimum allowed by law, so any number between five and 15 is a possibility.

The Apportionment Committee, as prescribed by statute, is made up of County Prosecutor Scott Beatty, County Clerk Jane Brannon, County Treasurer Anah Potter, County Republican Chairman Don Hufford, and County Democrat Chairman Fritz Allard.

The guidelines under which they will operate are also prescribed by statute:

(1) One man, one vote – every district must be as nearly equal in population as practicable, with the variation not exceeding one percent in any case.

(2) Every district must be contiguous.

(3) Every district must be compact and as nearly square as practicable.

(4) No township or part thereof may be combined with a city or part thereof unless necessary to meet population standards.

(5) Townships, villages, or cities may be divided only if necessary to meet population standards.

(6) County residents in state institutions who cannot vote will not be considered for representation.

(7) Districts cannot be drawn to effect political consideration.

The above guidelines are listed in order of importance, so equal-population-sized districts are the primary factor in apportionment.

Because of greater population growth in the rural areas of the county than in the cities during the last ten years, the present districts are noticeably unequal in size in many instances.

This is illustrated by the preliminary population figures released last summer which put the population of the City of Charlevoix at 3,203; the population of Charlevoix Township at 871; and the population of Hayes Township at 1,310. This means that the three County Commissioners in the City of Charlevoix are representing 3,203 people, or an average of 1,067 people, and the one County Commissioner for Charlevoix and Hayes Townships is representing 2,281 people.

County-wide, 56 percent of the population is now in the rural areas and 44 percent in the cities, as compared with 1970 census figures of 48 percent in the rural areas and 52 percent in the cities.

The Apportionment Committee must complete its work within 60 days, which means that its report is due about the first of the year. After that time, the apportionment may be challenged in the courts by any voter, and the apportionment will not become effective until all appeals have been exhausted and the time for appeals runs out.

In any event, any changes in the present districting will not take effect until the general primary elections next August, when all County Commissioners will be nominated.

Apportionment has been much discussed in county political circles for several months. As far back as last March, the county Republican organization held an open meeting at which ideas for cutting the number of Districts were presented with the argument that fewer districts would make for a more efficient and less costly Board of Commissioners. This argument was challenged by some and applauded by others.

A definite schedule of Apportionment Committee meeting dates was not available at press time. However, all meetings will be open to the public.

Pre-schoolers hold Dad's night

by ANNE KELLY

It was V.I.P. night at nursery school last Tuesday, and Dad was that very important person. An opportunity for the fathers to spend a quality hour with their pre-school youngster, V.I.P. night found dads in the play house, sawing wood, stringing beads and playing clay - - some of the things the kids do every day they go to nursery. The evening has proved to be a great success over the years and this year the turn out appeared to be better than ever.

Charlevoix Co-op Nursery is a non-profit organization dedicated to the education through socialization of the pre-school child. Parents take turns assisting the teacher, Dorothy Miller, and serving on various committees. Located at the Elementary school, Co-op is that happy place where young children learn how to play and to play with others, learn songs and fingerplays, and to explore the world under the direction of a trained pre-school teacher.

There are openings still available in some classes. For further information contact Joanne Curtis at 547-5494.

Chx. women urge participation in 'Mastectomy Update'

by SARA GAY DAMMANN

Four Charlevoix County women, volunteers with Reach to Recovery, urge all area mastectomees to attend the Thursday, November 5th "Mastectomy Update" at Northern Michigan Hospitals in Petoskey.

Recently, Ruth Price, Charlevoix County Coordinator for Reach to Recovery, an organization of women who have had breast surgery, dedicated to helping other mastectomees, met with Bonnie Staffel and Barbara Hollow of Charlevoix and Angela Skrocki of Boyne City, to discuss plans for the all day session, November 5.

Mrs. Price explained that the morning session, from 9:30 to noon, will include speakers, a film and a display of prostheses, bathing suits and negligees.

The afternoon session will be devoted to training prospective Reach to Recovery volunteers. This session is especially important to the four Charlevoix County women who are seeking others in Charlevoix and Emmet Counties to join them as volunteers for Reach to Recovery.

Currently, the Charlevoix women have been visiting breast surgery patients for both counties, in the hospital or at home, to help them through the early days of recovery and adjustment after surgery.

Mrs. Price emphasized that the volunteers with Reach to Recovery offer emphatic support to other mastectomees, but do not become involved in the medical aspects of their recovery.

"Our objective," Mrs. Skrocki observed, "is to reassure other women that this it not the end, that they will lead fulfilled lives."

Thinking back to her own surgery, 20 years ago, Mrs. Skrocki reflected, "I would have given anything to talk to someone who had the same experience."

Prospective volunteers are asked to bring a written statement from their doctor permitting participation in the program. Volunteers are women who had their own surgery at least one year ago. Prospective volunteers are asked to call Deanna Beyer at Northern Michigan Hospitals (348-4000).

The featured speaker for the morning session, to which the general public, as well as all mastectomees are invited, will be Thelma Milgron of Franklin, Michigan, the state co-ordinator of Reach to Recovery.

Deanna Beyer, R.N., House Supervisor at Northern Michigan Hospitals will speak on "The Common Concerns of Mastectomees." A question and answer session will follow.

Reach to Recovery was founded in 1952 by Mrs. Terese Lasser of New York City, after her own surgery. In 1969 the organization became part of the American Cancer Society.

Reach to Recovery volunteers are called by physicians, nurses, friends and family members of patients. The volunteers try to visit patients still hospitalized, offering hope through a demonstration of their own good health and positive spirit.

"We arrive with a lot of information," Mrs. Price explained, as she held up an attractive tote bag. "These bags were made by two women of the Charlevoix Area Hospital Guild, Anabel Webb and Eleanor Squires.

"We bring patients several pamphlets on exercise and breast self-examination. We have a letter to husbands, daughters and sons. Here's information on bathing suits and another on prostheses," the enthusiastic woman continued.

Holding a rope and a ball she explained the two simple items were important for beginning exercises.

"We don't get into medical subjects," Mrs. Price reiterated.

"You go in looking good, working full time, having many outside activities," Mrs. Skrocki continued. "I remember how down I was after surgery. I wondered if I'd ever go back to work. And in a small town everyone knows everything.

"We've had the same experiences. Patients can relate to us. They know we know what we're talking about," Mrs. Skrocki concluded.

Mrs. Staffel added, "You feel so good that you're recovered you're eager to share. There's a tremendous satisfaction in Reach to Recovery."

The morning half of the November 5th gathering is open to anyone interested. The afternoon training for volunteers, from 1:00 to 4:00 p.m., will give new volunteers the certification necessary to work with mastectomees. The training will be conducted by state co-ordinator for Reach to Recovery Mrs. Thelma Milgron.

PLANNING FOR Mastectomy Update are: Angela Skrocki, Bonnie Staffel, Barb Hollow and Ruth Price. The workshop will be held Nov. 5

Rosalyn Goldstick honored

Mrs. Clarence (Rosalyn) Goldstick, executive secretary at the Will-Flow Corp., for the past 22 years, was honored recently at a retirement dinner party at Duffy's of Charlevoix hosted by Will-Flow.

She was presented with many cards and gifts from office and supervisory colleagues and from the corporate office of the company at Belding.

Mrs. Goldstick joined the office staff at Will-Flow when the plant opened its Charlevoix operation in March, 1956 and, with only three years out when her family was young, had continued until this date.

Prior to 1956, she had been employed as a Probate Court Reporter on call for 12 years under Probate Judges Floyd Supp, Downs, and John Makel. At the same time she did public stenographic work and assisted the late Rev. Harold Kohn, widely known author.

Mr. Goldstick earlier had taken an early retirement after 27 years as plant engineer at American Mold Engineering.

The couple has three children, David who is with the U.S. Air Force presently serving in Europe, and Jon and Trudi, both living in Phoenix, Arizona; and two grandchildren.

Even though Mrs. Goldstick is not going to the office every day she will be busy, she said, for she is past president and currently conductress of Veterans of Foreign Wars Auxiliary, secretary of the American Legion Auxiliary, treasurer of Temple B'Nai Israel Sisterhood, a member of the board of directors of Temple B'Nai Israel in Petoskey and a member of Charlevoix Lodge No. 72, Order of the Eastern Star.

She and her husband enjoy many hobbies including traveling, (now we won't have to rush home from vacations! she added) woodworking, gardening, fishing and various types of handicrafts. She added that they are looking forward to the extra time their early retirements will give them.

Recreation forms distributed

Four hundred residents of Charlevoix County have been sent "Recreation Survey" forms by the County Planning Department and the County Youth Activities Program in an effort to update the Charlevoix County Comprehensive Recreation Plan.

The 400 persons receiving the questionnaires were selected from the telephone book by random sampling. They are being asked to indicate the types of recreational activities they engage in (from firearm hunting to skateboarding), and to answer several questions about present recreational facilities and future needs in the County.

An accompanying letter explains that the purpose of the Charlevoix County Recreation Plan is "to effectively anticipate and identify deficiencies in our leisure-time resources, both public and private, and to respond to these problems responsibly.

The letter also notes that "we must realize the pressure placed upon this area, not only by full-time residents, but also by seasonal residents and transients."

Halloween festivities Saturday night included a party for all area children at the Elementary School sponsored by the Parent Advisory Council which featured a Halloween play, above, put on by Mrs. Mary Ann Chew's fourth grade reading class. Winners in the annual Ski & Shore pumpkin decorating contest were,below le't to right, Kate Christensen, Cynthia Boydston, Amber Phillips, Kelly Ileck and Nick Hahn.

Julie Cordano skis Bridge St.

Time to get CC skis out

"It's time to think snow, or at least get prepared," Julie Cordana, Charlevoix's indefatigueable cross country ski promotor declared last week.

Carefully arranging the roller skis in the window at Silent Sports North's winter headquarters, in Patricia's on the Harbor's Bridge Street shop in Charlevoix, she enjoyed the puzzled looks of passers by.

The roller skis were displayed prominently beside the usual accoutrements of cross country skiing – knickers, hats, high socks, trim jackets, gloves.

"Serious racers use these to stay in shape. Actually, I get in cross country condition by jogging. I'm going to start jogging with my ski poles next week."

The cross country skiing enthusiast came to Charlevoix last year to manage Silent Sports North and instruct cross country skiing at Windmill Farms, for Tom Short and Nellie Hiehle.

More than a manager of a business, Julie, 27, is a cross country skiing evangelist. Frequently she can be seen boarding a small plane, headed for Beaver Island, with as large a bundle of cross country skis as she can carry, or scurrying down the Boyne City Road in her red Chevette, skis poking out of windows. She'll teach any group, any age.

She's a true believer and she wants to spread the word – "Cross country skiing is a great way for anyone to get out and enjoy the winter. And it'a fun. It's bringing people out, who'd never tried winter sports before."

She's working with local parents to get the Bill Koch Ski League for young people revived in the area. She offers clinics to school children and adults on Beaver Island. She is organizing race clinics before Charlevoix's Winter Cup Race this coming February 21st at Windmill Farms. And, she is determined to get more people, not just competitive racers out-skiing.

Working with the Charlevoix High School, she has designed a three session ski clinic for Thursdays, November 5, 12, and 19. The introductory clinic will cover everything from types of skis and other equipment to waxing and skiing techniques.

The three sessions will begin at 7:30 p.m., lasting an hour and a half. A fee of $3 is asked to cover costs. Interested participants may register at Silent Sports, at the high school, "or just show up," Julie said.

Julie was recruited by Tom Short and Nellie Hiehle for their shop and ski center complex last year. She had spent the previous two winters as a cross country instructor at Steamboat Springs (Colorado) Ski Touring Center, where she also led guided ski tours up the Rocky Mountain passes. Before that she had been with Ranch Rudolph in Traverse City.

Reaching for a pair of trim racing skis in the racks at Silent Sports North, Julie said, "Hold these."

The long skis were practically weightless.

"It's important to match the kind of skiing you will be doing with the proper ski. You can't go back country skiing on these," she laughed. "That's one of the things we will discuss at the clinics in November."

Julie's quite willing to talk cross country skiing in all its variations virtually any time.

"Look at these. Kuusistos. They are the ultimate in waxless skis. The base is teflon. You can climb anything and still get the glide you'd expect from a waxable ski," Julie continued.

The range of skiing equipment is enough to boggle the mind of any neophyte. Julie doesn't hesitate.

"When you know what you want to do, how you want to ski, if you want to leisurely tour or seriously race, stay on groomed trails or go back country, we can find the right ski for you."

She walked across the room. "And the right boot. Here's a back country boot," she said, picking up a heavy, higher than usual boot. In the other hand she held a racing boot, designed not for warmth but for lightness.

"Waxing has become simpler again, too," she added with emphasis.

"Waxing used to be simple. Then it got complicated with waxes for every variable. Now they have come up with a two wax system – one for cold and dry, one for wetter conditions.

"People don't need to be afraid of waxing any longer," she observed.

As she pakaged a pair of skis, barely three feet long, she smiled at a customer, an eager grandparent "These are great. Your grandson can follow you anywhere now."

"Don't forget to think snow," she reminded.

Knight on the Town

Being grown up not so bad

by Dave Knight

I was going to write a piece this week on the trauma of turning 30, which I experienced Monday. But, as often happens in this business, a better story came along.

I was going to tell you how depressing it was and how long I had dreaded the day.

I was going to reminisce about the wonderful innocence of youth which, when one turns 30, suddenly seems very, very far away.

I was going to rehash that turbulent era during which an entire generation thought it would never age past 22.

I wasn't going to tell you all the dreams and fantasies that never quite materialized, but I was going to admit to having them.

I was going to be bitter about what a rotten time it is to be a grown-up.

But, here I am, sitting in a hospital room about to become a father and, you know what?

Life over the hill ain't going to be so bad after all.

Clockwise

Labor and management at fault

by Bob Clock

When the economy turns sour, as it has in the past few weeks, months or years depending on what business you are in, there is a great deal of finger-pointing in the direction of organized labor as one of the major causes of our economic headaches.

Inflated union wages are blamed for everything from the high cost of automobiles to the sorry state of the construction industry.

"I'll never be able to afford another car," a friend told me the other day, "so long as I'm making $5 an hour and the guy building them is making $20."

And he's probably right.

But organized labor would never have been able to bring the American economy to its knees without a generous assist from — you guessed it — the corporation executives who have allowed themselves to be outbargained at every turn when it comes to drawing up union contracts.

Unless I am badly mistaken, unions were organized not only to secure fair pay for their members but also to improve working conditions and provide a modicum of security through seniority agreements, unemployment benefits and pensions.

As a student of the labor movement ever since the Battle of the Overpass at the Ford Rouge Plant in Dearborn, I can attest to the fact that organized labor has succeeded admirably in all of these areas. And I imagine union leaders themselves are sometimes surprised at how much they have been able to accomplish in such a short time.

From a theoretical standpoint it little matters that they have priced themselves and their products beyond the reach of the average consumer. What does matter is that they have set high goals for themselves and they have achieved them.

The real culprits in this never-ending drama are short-sighted corporation executives who are unable to see beyond the next quarterly statement or their next bonus check. No matter how exorbitant, no matter how inflationary the union demands have been, management generally sees fit to knuckle under rather than risk a strike and lose a single sale to the competition.

The spectacle is one of dog-eat-dog capitalism in its most destructive form.

Furthermore, our corporation executives have not done their homework.

A cursory market sampling, for example, should have told Ford, General Motors and Chrysler three years ago that if their prices went up another penny they would lose automobile customers in droves. You knew it and I knew it and every working man and woman in Northern Michigan had a good idea that the auto companies were riding for a fall unless they did something about prices.

Yet when they sit down at the bargaining table, the Big Three have consistently ignored the long-range interests of their shareholders, their employes, their customers and the nation at large.

Today, the auto industry is a shambles and it is dragging all of Michigan down with it. Chrysler would have gone belly up last year if the federal government had not stepped in with its generous loan guarantees. Ford and GM are still solvent, but GM reported a $500 billion third quarter loss last month and has cancelled plans to construct a new assembly facility in Kansas City.

The auto contracts expire next September and negotiators for both sides are already shuffling the deck and counting their loose change in preparation for their triennial poker game.

It is going to be interesting to see if the current economic climate will have any effect on their deliberations or if management once again will cave in without a fight.

The results, of course, are academic. At last report, Japan and Germany hold all the chips.

Attorney General our friend?

Dear Editor

I wonder just how much of a friend of the workers and residents of Michigan the state's attorney general is?

He has held up construction financing issues of Consumers Power Company and Detroit Edison through court action. He says neither utility should be allowed to sell bonds and issue stock because the money would be used to help complete two nuclear plants. He says the nuclear plants are not needed. In the case of Consumers Power, he says a coal-fired plant would be better.

Well, let's look at what Frank Kelley's efforts to stop completion of the Midland nuclear plant might do to the worker and the average resident of Michigan.

Consumers Power Company's Chairman, John D. Selby, recently compared the effects on jobs and income for Michigan resulting from the nuclear plant and a substitute coal plant such as Mr. Kelley advocates.

"The annual cost of power from the Midland nuclear plant would be $286 million. The annual cost of power from replacement coal units would be $324 million or $38 million more than from Midland."

"Moreover, more than three-quarters of the cost of running the coal units would be spent out of state, while nearly half of the annual cost of running the Midland nuclear units would be spent in Michigan. Thus – in terms of where the dollars are spent – Midland beats coal on both counts: $57 million more spent in Michigan and $95 million less spent outside the state."

Mr. Selby noted that large capital outlays tend to have a snowball effect: money spent creates income, which leads to more money spent, which leads to more income and more money spent. The same is true of job creation, he pointed out.

"Our Midland project can be expected to generate more than 12,500 jobs in Michigan while the coal units would create fewer than 6,900 jobs. Jobs exported from Michigan, created outside the state by the Midland project, will total less than 12,500 while a replacement coal project would export 20,000 jobs. So again, the total impact of the Midland plant is positive, approximately 13,000 jobs," he said.

I'd like to pose the same question that Mr. Selby did and I think the answer is obvious.

"If an industry – any industry – were to announce plans to build a huge new facility in Charlevoix County, would we object to that capital investment? Would we ask that they build something simpler, something that would create fewer jobs, and inject less money into our economy? Would we suggest that they ship their jobs and money elsewhere?"

It seems to me that if there's one thing Michigan needs, it's jobs!

Mr. Selby also pointed out: "Absurd as that notion is, it is precisely the logic of Frank Kelley and others proposing that we replace Midland with a coal plant project."

Friend of the workers? Protector of the pocketbook of the average Michigan resident? Mr. Kelley is neither of these when he tries to scuttle our generating plant projects in Michigan.

And it is about time that Michigan residents around the state wake up to that fact!

Musical Theater says thanks

Dear Dave,

Summer is gone but not forgotten! An old adage, perhaps, but one that reminds me that a sincere "thank you" be sent out to all those people who this summer supported the American Musical Theatre in Petoskey, summer home of the Young Americans.

Their continual support indicates to us on the board of directors that the 150 young people from across the nation are, indeed, welcomed to this area each year. It's also an inspiration to those associated with the Theatre to strive for quality programs each summer. I might add that such is the case for next summer. The Theatre's new managing director, Charles Stephens, along with the Chairman of the Board (and founder of the Young Americans) Milton Anderson, are already working on next summer's programs.

We intend for those programs to be as good if not better than those in the past. We're sure the support will also be as strong.

Again, our thanks.

Review of area property tax assessments

by PEG OHLE

Taxes on a $40,000 house (with a State Equalized Value of $20,000) in Charlevoix County will vary next year from $618.20 in the Vanderbilt School District of Chandler Township to $1,158 in Boyne City.

This information is included in the annual "Township and City Clerks' Report" prepared by Joan Blanchard, County Equalization Director.

The difference in amount of taxes is the result of the difference in the cost of operating the local unit of government (Chandler Township or Boyne City), and to the difference in cost of operating the school systems (Vanderbilt or Boyne City).

The cost of operating Chandler Township is one mill, while the cost of operating Boyne City is 18.05 mills. The cost of operating the Vanderbilt School System is 24.50 mills, while the cost of operating the Boyne City School System is 33.70 mills.

Taxes on a $40,000 house in the City of Charlevoix will be $935 (compared with $910.21 last year). Taxes on the same house in Charlevoix Township will be $725 (compared with $710.21 last year). These figures are based on a city operating cost of 12.5 mills and a township operating cost of two mills. The Charlevoix School System serves both communities at a cost of 28.10 mills.

Operation of County government will cost all taxpayers in the County 4.15 mills. This is down from the 4.55 mills levied last year. Operation of the Char-Em Intermediate School District will cost two mills, an increase over last year's 1.1903 mills due to the recently voted extra millage for Special Education.

In summary, all tax bills are made up of four different cost categories: County, township or city or village, local schools, and intermediate school system.

Property taxes totaling $13,998,080.40 will be levied throughout the County next year. This is a 12.77 percent increase over last year.

Of the taxes collected, $1,391,615.39, or 9.94 percent, will go to support County government (up 1.36 percent from last year); $1,885,497.51, or 13.47 percent, will go to support township, city, or village government (up 11.90 from last year); $10,364, 615.32, or 71.83 percent, will go to support local schools (up 11.78 percent from last year); and $666,352.18, or 4.76 percent, will go to support the intermediate school system (up 85.35 percent from last year).

GIFTS THAT KEEP ON GIVING (Part I)
Colleen Titsworth
Manager

Holiday shopping is a chore for most people, so I thought I'd devote a column to helpful suggestions to simplify your task. Here are a number of popular and fashionable items that are guaranteed great gifts.

For Women:

--Colored stone beads. They're the hottest thing around. In single strands or twists of multiple strands. Just about any color you want is represented by beads of some beautiful gemstone -- silky brown tiger's eye, lustrous pearls in white and pastel colors, bright red garnets and purple amethysts, deep green malachite, rich blue lapis lazuli -- and these are sometimes teamed together and accented with gold beads.

--Large gold earrings or bracelets, metal alone or accented with diamonds. These pieces retain their importance with heavy winter garb, especially this year's wool skirts and sweaters.

For Men:

--Watches to suit all tastes. Everything is available from digital read-outs in stainless steel to analog watches in solid gold with diamonds.

--Elegant accessories. Cigarette lighters for the coffee table or pocket with handsome cases of tortoise shell, onyx or gleaming metal. Pens and pencils in solid gold or gold filled, and slim cases for everything from business cards to cigarettes.

In my next article I'll give you some gift ideas for young people. If you'd like help with gift selection, please consult one of the specialists at our store.

Rayders slam Rogers City

The Charlevoix Rayders flexed their offensive muscle Friday night at the expense of Rogers City as the local gridders breezed to a 42-22 victory.

Coach Don Carey cleared his bench in the second half of the game and 20 of the 26 players on the roster ended up with at least one tackle.

Mark Beaudoin ran for 184 yards to put him over the 1,000-yard mark for the season. He came into the game with 958 yards and now has a total of 1,142 with one more game to go.

Scott Kelly started out the scoring parade at the 8:12 mark of the first quarter when he ran into the end-zone from the six yard line. Mark Morgan added the extra point.

Charlevoix then recovered at fumble at the 40 and proceeded to march again to the six from which Kelly tossed a scoring pass to Dave Buday and Morgan converted again for a 14-0 lead.

Rogers City got off only two plays before Jeff Trimper intercepted and returned the ball to the 20. It only took Beaudoin two carries, the latter from the ten, to up the score to 21-0 with Morgan making the conversion.

Rogers City finally got into the scoring column in the second quarter when Steve Urban hit Eric Hoffman on a 12-yard touchdown pass. The extra point try was no good and the score stood at 21-6 at the half.

In the third period, Rogers City scored again on a 9-yard run by Duane Hampton who also tacked on a two-point conversion to make bring his team within a TD of Charlevoix, 21-14.

Beaudoin put the Rayders back in the driver's seat with a three-yard plunge with 32 seconds left in the quarter to make it 27-14.

In the fourth quarter, Beaudoin scored again from the five and Morgan added the extra point for a 34-14 cushion. Morgan scored a six-pointer on his own, plunging over the goal line from the one and Kelly hit Buday for the two-point conversion to nail the victory down. Rogers City did manage to score once more on a seven-yard run and extra point conversion by Urban to make the final 42-22.

In addition to his 184 yards on offense, Beaudoin led the Rayders in tackles with 12; Mike Loper and Ken Spelgi were not far behind with 10 apiece and Buday and Trimper each had nine. Trimper also snagged two interceptions and Tim Kreuger recovered a fumble for the Rayders.

The win puts Charlevoix at 6-2 overall for the year, 4-1 in Michigan-Huron Shores conference action. The Rayders travel to St. Ignace this week to close out the season.

Mark Morgan bashes through the Rogers City line.

Seniors Mark Beaudoin and Dave Buday walk off Kipke Field for the last time as members of the Rayder football squad.

Cheerleader Patti Cook lends vocal support.

Harriers finish in Top 10

The Charlevoix Rayder Cross Country team, coached by Pete Spieles, climaxed its 1981 season by finishing among the top 10 in the state at the Class C State finals at Waterviet Saturday.

"We are happy with the results" Coach Spieles said following the meet. "We had set our sights on finishing among the top 10 and we made it. The boys worked very hard to attain that goal for there are some fine teams in the state. We are all very happy" he added.

Kalamazoo Christian won the meet with 155 points followed by Stockbridge with 156. St. Louis was third with 182 and Bennie Central next with 187. In fifth place was Muskegon Oakridge with 202.

Charlevoix was ninth with 226. Spieles went on to say that there were only 26 points between fifth and ninth place. "This will give you an idea of how close the finishes were," Spieles added.

Spieles had several other things to say about the meet. He said in all the years he's been coaching, he had never seen the state meet held in weather like Saturday's. "Usually it's cold and wet. Saturday was beautiful and ideal for running." He also said that the facility was excellent and the meet very well managed. Twenty-one teams were entered in the meet.

The state is divided into regions, he went on to explain. The region in which Charlevoix participated was the strongest in the state with three teams from the region, Bennie Central, Muskegon Oakridge and Charlevoix, finishing in the top 10.

Bradshaw of Stockridge posted the top time for the meet, 18:20.2.

Charlevoix's times and where they finished follows: Bill Taylor, 31st with a time of 17:27.5; Todd Russell, 36th, 17:35; Jim Duke, 47th, 17:43.9; Jim Landon, 51st, 17:49.1; John Tunison, 61st, 17:59.4. The Rayders other runners were Matt Peterson who finished 82nd in 18:18.5 and Bill Dohm, 100th, 18:29.6.

The Charlevoix team captured the Michigan-Huron Shores Conference title in Cross Country, finished third in the regional Class C meet at Ludington and ninth in the state to close out the 1981 season.

Seniors on the squad are Duke, Landon, Russell, Tim Louiselle, Dan Sloan and Rici McLenon.

Girls sweep Petoskey, Gaylord last week

The Charlevoix Rayder girls basketball team made it two in a row last week as they defeated Petoskey 47-38 and Gaylord 39-36.

The victories give Charlevoix a 10 win-four loss overall record and a 7-3 league record for the season.

As the current season runs down, Charlevoix will host Cheboygan here Tuesday, travel to Grayling Thursday and be at home with Boyne City on Nov. 10.

In their game with Petoskey, Charlevoix was in foul trouble early with two starters, Laura Kemp and Ann Wagner, on the bench with three fouls each Coach Henry Wagner said. "It was the team's depth that made it possible for us to win this game. It was the kids who came off the bench who won the game for us," he added.

Charlevoix overcame an 11-10 first period deficit to go ahead 20-13 at the half and 34-28 going into the final period. Holly Taber and Kemp had 11 points each and Rhonda Buchanan 10 points for Charlevoix. Kris Ronan had 17 for Petoskey.

Angie McClanaghan had 14 points and Meg Fowler 11 as the Junior Varsity squad won 47-40.

Playing at Gaylord Thursday, the Charlevoix Varsity squad went to the free throw line to account for their victory as they played their hosts to an 8-8 first period tie before edging ahead 19-18 at the half and 28-26 at the three-quarter mark.

Wagner scored 11 points and Taber 10 for Charlevoix which was without the services of Lisa Pischner, a flu victim. Debbie Maxson had 14 points for Gaylord.

Charlevoix had a total of 14 field goals and 11 of 17 at the line while collecting 11 personal fouls. Gaylord had 18 from the floor and four of eight charity shots and eight personal fouls.

The JVs posted a 29-24 victory with Jennifer Joy and McClanaghan sharing scoring honors with 10 points each.

Middle School ends B-ball season

The Charlevoix Middle School girls basketball teams closed out their 1981 schedule Monday night with 7-0 and 6-1 records, respectively, their coaches, Barry Pierce and Stan Martin report.

The seventh graders posted a 29-12 win over Harbor Springs while the eighth grade team dropped its final game to the visitors by a three-point margin, 32-29.

The teams will now go into the Junior High tournamant at Cheboygan Nov. 12 after drawing first round byes.

In their game, the seventh graders took an early lead and headed Harbor 6-2,16-6, and 26-6 by quarters before wrapping up the victory to conclude a perfect season. Amy Pischner had 13 points for Charlevoix and Lisa Brady 10 for Harbor Springs.

The eighth graders posted a slim 7-6 first period lead but lost-it-to a strong Harbor team that took over 16-11 at halftime and 24-19 going into the final period to had the team its first loss of the season.

Sue Miller came through with 16 points for Charlevoix. Jib Babcock and Lisa Phillips shared scoring honors for Harbor with 10 points each.

Soccer playoffs slated Saturday

The Charlevoix youth soccer league will hold a playoff tournament this Saturday, November 7 at Shanahan Field.

The 13 and under league will play on the large field with Mr. Manker's team facing Dr. Stewart's team at 9:30 a.m. and Mr. Bonar's team playing Mr. Sullivan's team at 11 a.m. The two winners will then play at 1 p.m. for the championship.

The nine and under teams will play on the smaller field with Mr. Lanphar's team playing Mr. Knight's team at 10 a.m., Mr. Glass's team playing Mr. Manker's team at

JVs squeek by Rogers City

The Charlevoix junior varsity football squad got a scare from Rogers City Thursday but squeeked by with a 13-10 win.

"They beat us on the field," said Coach Brian Certa, "We won in the score only."

Tim LaBlance started off the Rayder scoring with a five-yard touchdown run in the first quarter after which the extra point try was no good.

Rogers City answered with a five-yard scoring run of its own and a two-point conversion to give them an 8-6 lead.

In the second quarter, Pat Mitchell carried the ball into the endzone from four yards out to put the Rayders back on top 12-8.

The two teams waged a defensive battle the rest of the game with Rogers City pulling dangerously close to Charlevoix in the fourth quarter when they scored a safety to make the score 12-10. But the Rayders managed to hang on for the win.

Coach Certa praised the defensive efforts of Shawn Hartnett, Scott Mervyn, Thad Morgan and Pat Mitchell.

The JV team is now 6-1 for the season and will finish its schedule this Thursday against St. Ignace on the Charlevoix field.

Frosh lose to Gaylord

A final 20-6 loss to Gaylord Wednesday ended the Charlevoix freshman football team's season. The frosh played .500 ball this year ending with a 3-3 record. Said Coach Dave Smith, "It was a good year."

Charlevoix started out last Wednesday as Kyle Smith scored on a 37-yard pass from Brent Cole.

Gaylord came back, however, in the second quarter with a four-yard plunge into the endzone following a Charlevoix fumble. They ran for two points to make the halftime score 8-6.

There was no scoring in the third quarter but Gaylord struck twice in the fourth on a 43-yard pass play and a one-yard run to make the final score 20-6.

School board approves bids, graduation request

By FRAN MARTIN

The Charlevoix Board of Education, Monday, awarded several bids.

Two bids were received for snow removal during the 1981-82 season. The bid was awarded to Arthur Barkley of Hayes Township whose bid was $19.95 per hour with a pick-up and from $23 to $75 per hour for a loader. He has one, three and five-yard loaders that he uses in his operation, Vincent Olach, business manager explained.

Three bids, ranging from $285 to $611 were received for the 1971 school bus which had been driven 97,000 miles and is no longer approved for use as a school bus. The bid of $611 submitted by Dale Boss was accepted.

In an energy-saving move, two doors previously used at the former breezeways which have only small glass panels will be installed to replace existing high school doors. New metal frames must be installed along with new thresholds and tile. The Lynch Construction Company's bid for the work in the amount of $3,300 was accepted.

World History and whether it should be a required subject also was discussed by the school board. It was the consensus of the board that it should be taught and by a teacher who could make it interesting and relate the events of today with past history.

Michael A. Belfy, who had attended the Charlevoix High School until this year when he moved to Brownsville, Tex., with his family, was granted permission to graduate with his former class at the Charlevoix High School. He is presently attending the Homer Hanna High School and taking the subjects required for graduation.

Dennis VanGuilder advised the board that students wishing to take time from school to go deer hunting must bring a letter from parents and their hunting license in order to have an excused absence. Students are advised, he said, that the time would count toward the 16 days that the student is allowed before he loses credit for his classes.

The direction the Middle School should take was discussed briefly. It is felt that the program should be more structured than it is. Further study is required before any action is taken.

The next meeting of the board is scheduled for Nov. 23.

the parking problem. Since then absolutely nothing has been done. At least this is a positive first step toward solving the problem.".

Several downtown merchants in the audience expressed concern that the $2,000 per space fee would discourage people from improving or opening new businesses in the CBD.

The first proposal to eliminate the CBD exemption from offstreet parking requirements, passed by a narrow 4-3 margin with council members Roloff, Muma and Block voting no, council members Timms, Wood and Porter voting yes and Mayor Sam Supernaw breaking the tie.

The second recommendation dealing with the $2,000 fee was tabled for further study.

In other action the council:

•Established a two-hour parking limit on Bridge Street from Antrim to the channel from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through Saturday until parking meters are re-installed next spring.

•Heard a special committee report recommending the investment of $6,500 into the former Erber building to accomodate winter storage of the city fire department's two tankers. No action was taken pending further study.

LOW BACK PAIN

It back pains are a way of life for you, the reasons can be varied and complex. Some may be pathological, but very often the cause is muscles which are either over or under exercised which are producing postural distortion. Vertebrae slip into abnormal positions, resulting in "pinched" and irritated nerves, which cause pain and even loss of function of the affected body part. Poor posture or even emotional tension can be the root cause.

Local print shop has new owners

by PEG OHLE

Donald and Gloria Dibley recently purchased the Charlevoix Graphics Printing Company in Charlevoix. This week the Courier talks with them about the business, and about themselves.

COURIER: Where did you live before moving to Charlevoix?

DIBLEY: In Ypsilanti. I was managing editor of the Ypsilanti Press and Gloria operated a day care center.

COURIER: How did you find out about Charlevoix Graphics?

DIBLEY: Through Dan Iannotti of The Real Estate Place. We had told him we wanted to locate a business in the area.

COURIER: Do you have any printing experience?

DIBLEY: Oh, yes, we worked on several weekly newspapers with their own print shops.

COURIER: Had you ever been in Charlevoix before coming here to look at the business?

DIBLEY: Only on vacations. We visited here several times.

COURIER: Did you grow up in small towns?

DIBLEY: Yes, I grew up in Utica and Gloria grew up in Milford. We wanted to leave the city because of the crime. It's not a good place to raise children.

COURIER: Exactly what kind of printing work do you do?

DIBLEY: We can print almost anything on our offset presses, even over-sized forms. In addition, we have typesetting equipment which can be used for many things. We can turn out letterheads, envelopes, business cards, books, resumes, flyers, labels, wedding invitations and accessories, rubber stamps, and promotional items such as matchbooks and pens.

COURIER: And the final line is "I can order what I don't have"?

DIBLEY: Right.

COURIER: The former owner – Jim Boocher – is he still with you?

DIBLEY: Yes, he's selling for us. In the spring he plans on going back to missionary work.

COURIER: Do you have a family?

DIBLEY: A three-year-old daughter. She goes to nursery school.

COURIER: Do you live right in Charlevoix or out in the country?

DIBLEY: We live in town.

COURIER: What about hobbies – do you have any?

DIBLEY: Not since we've taken over this business. We don't have time for anything else.

COURIER: Anything else you'd like to say?

DIBLEY: Just that we're glad to be in Charlevoix and hope people will stop by, even if it's just to say "hello".

Carol Elliot

TEACHER FEATURE

by ANNE KELLY

Carol Elliot has been the teacher of the Program for the Academically Talented at Charlevoix Elementary School for the past 1½ years. As the result of the cooperative efforts of teachers and the school board, this challanging addition to the curriculum for gifted students came into being as a kind of enrichment program. At present there are 21 students participating in P.A.T. in grades 1-5. They are screened based on five criteria: 1) Math test results; 2) Reading Scores; 3) I.Q. test; 4) parent evaluation; and 5) teacher evaluation.

The curriculum for these students changes monthly. They are exposed to logic, ecology, foreign language and dramatics in addition to their regular classroom day.

A graduate of Mercy College in Detroit, Carol received her B.S. in Elementary Education. She is now in the process of earning her M.A. from Michigan State University in the area of the gifted, talented and creative.

She spent a year each teaching in Detroit, at St. Mary in Charlevoix, and at the Charlevoix Middle School, before joining the staff at the Elementary where whe has been since 1974.

"Many of our high school drop outs fall into the category of the academically talented and are seeking a challange beyond what our schools are offering now," Carol reports. Teaching the P.A.T. each morning in addition to an afternoon of fourth grade math, Carol is hoping to remedy that situation by challanging our academically talented children early.

Tom Thimm, right, of the Medusa Cement Company, presented Charlevoix Area Hospital Board member Max Novak a check recently for $10,000. The money is an annual installment on Medusa's $50,000 pledge to the Hosital Expansion Fund. The expansion was completed this past summer.

Emergency siren warning system mandated

by DAVE KNIGHT

As many as ten siren-public address units will be installed within a five-mile radius of the Big Rock Point nuclear plant following the final refusal by the Nuclear Regulatory Commission to exempt Big Rock from public warning system requirements.

Consumers Power Company, owners of the Big Rock plant, announced Monday that they face a February 1, 1982 deadline to have the system operational. The NRC requires most nuclear generating plants in the country to have public warning systems covering a ten-mile radius but Big Rock is one of four smaller units in operation for which a five-mile radius is required.

Originally, the NRC had set a July 1, 1981 deadline for Big Rock's public warning system but Consumers Power appealed for a variance from the requirement on grounds that the existing emergency plan, based on a telephone call list, provided for adequate warning to people living within five miles of the plant.

According to Consumers Power emergency planner Milton Jury, the company's appeal has been denied and Big Rock will face loss of its NRC license to operate if the sirens are not operational by February 1 of 1982.

Jury met Monday morning with local law enforcement personnel and governmental officials and later with members of the press to explain the ruling.

He said that tentative plans are for a maximum of ten electronic sirens, with public address capability, to be placed in locations so that they can be heard at any point within the five-mile radius of the plant. Though no specific locations for the sirens have been established, the City of Charlevoix, for instance, will probably have two, one on the north side and one on the south.

Each siren unit will consist of 16 speakers in a single column which will rotate 360 degrees atop poles from 35 to 60 feet high. The speakers will be driven by 2,000 watt amplifiers and will create 115 decibels of noise at 100 feet from the poles at peak power. Testing at Consumers' Palisades nuclear plant has indicated that the sirens can be heard up to 10,000 feet away. Though their main power supply will be from existing utility lines, each unit will also have a self-contained power supply which will allow operation for up to 30 minutes after the main power supply is cut off.

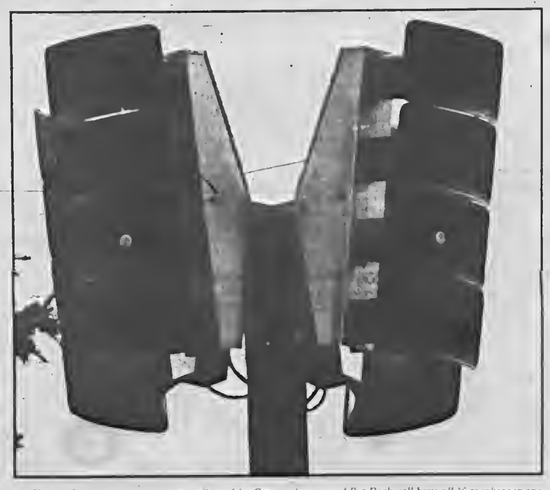
To avoid false alarms, the sirens will be activated by a coded radio signal of six tones in succession which will originate from the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Department which is manned 24 hours a day and has responsibility for triggering the system in the event of an emergency. The units can be activated individually, by sector or all at once.

In addition to warning of a nuclear accident at the Big Rock plant, the sirens will be used to warn people of tornadoes, other hazardous weather, local emergencies or a national attack. The three siren signals are as follows: a continuos tone will mean a nuclear emergency or weather alert; a gradually wavering tonewill mean a national attack; a two-tone back and forth signal will mean a local alert such as a fire.

The siren speakers can also be used to transmit vocal instructions in case of an emergency. They will be tested on the first Saturday of each month with an approximately three-minute routine that includes each of the siren signals.

According to Jury, the cost of installatioq and equipment is estimated at $150,000 and will be born by Consumers Power. He added that the company hopes local government will eventually bear the annual operating expense, estimated by Jury to be around $12,000. Jury suggested that federal funding through the Federal Emergency Management Agency may be available for such an expense.

In addition to the sirens, the warning system will also feature small radio-controlled units for use in areas of high noise level such as factories.



Shown above is a warning siren unit used by Consumers Power near its Palisades nuclear plant at South Haven. The sirens proposed for a five-mile radius around Big Rock will have all 16 speakers in one column which will rotate when activated

Staley, Morris, Timms all winners in election

Charlevoix will have a new mayor in January following last Tuesday's decisive victory by challenger Kenneth Staley over incumbent Samuel Supernaw.

Other city election results included a lopsided yes vote for a charter amendment extending the mayoral term from one to two years and a narrow voter approval of a one mill tax increase for sewer improvement.

In Second and Third ward races for council seats, Joseph Morris and Robert Timms emerged victorious.

Staley's 813-452 victory over Supernaw, who sought his fifth term as mayor, was based on heavy voter turnout in the Second and Third Wards which, as in the primary last August, went strongly for Staley. Supernaw won only his own ward, the First, by a 186-167 margin. The tallies in the Second and Third Wards were 340-123 and 306-143 respectively in Staley's favor.

Kenneth Staley

In the Second Ward council race, Morris edged David Strawbridge 238-210. The two candidates vied for the seat vacated by F. Earl Muma.

Third Ward incumbent Timms defeated challenger F. Ivan Whitley 227-217.

The millage request for sewer improvement found salvation in the First Ward where it passed 201-133 and provided the margin of victory. In the other two wards it was defeated, 229-199 in the Second and 219-213 in the Third. The city total was 613-581 in favor of the millage.

The charter amendment extending the mayoral term passed easily in each ward, 270-71 in the First, 323-120 in the Second and 316-126 in the Third for a 909-317 total. The new two-year mayoral term will not go into effect until January, 1983.

Retiring from board, but not from the cause

Lillian Bergmann never stops caring for others

Lillian Bergmann at the party held in her honor last week.

by PEG OHLE

One of Charlevoix's busiest and most respected ladies "retired" last week.

Lillian Bergmann left her job as Life Consultant – After Care Worker for the Northern Michigan Community Mental Health Services Board. This was the last of a long string of service jobs Lillian has held through a lifetime of caring for people, but somehow those who know her won't believe she is really "retiring".

While Lilian had been with the Health Services Board only four years, her activities before that would fill a book. She was a volunteer board member when she took the job, and at the same time she was serving as police-school liaison officer for the Boyne City Police Department.

That was after Lillian had spent several years as Charlevoix County Juvenile Officer and devoted many other years to the care of handicapped children.

It is Lillian's work with and for handicapped children that she is best known. It is also her encompassing interest.

To start at the beginning: Lilllian was born Lillian Dean in Canada 82 years ago. She grew up in Detroit and received her nurse's training in Framingham, Mass. while serving with the Air Force during World War II. After the war, she came to Charlevoix to work at the old Charlevoix Hospital. Here she met Bob Bergmann – one of the many Charlevoix Bergmanns – and they were married in 1948. Bob was a Western Electric employee and his job took them to Battle Creek for a time but they eventurally came back to Charlevoix, where they've been ever since.

Then began the years when both Lillian and Bob worked with the Boy Scouts and Girl Scouts and taught Sunday School as their own son and daughter were growing up.

A friend of Lillian's was teaching at the Charlevoix Association for Retarded Children and at her persuasion, Lillian went to visit the school. That "visit" lasted for seven years while Lillian worked endlessly to set up a workshop to help make the children more self-sufficient.

Some time ago, Lillian wrote of those early years:

"The time to organize a sheltered workshop had arrived. A two-car garage owned by Mr. and Mrs. Robert Bergmann was renovated...Robert Bergmann, Lillian Bergmann, Robert Cook, and Jack Sutherland assumed the responsibility of training the clients and getting the program off the ground. Freedman couldn't speak a word when he came to live with the Bergmann's and left after five years "a little Chatterbox", as Lillian puts it.

Altogether, there have been "about 27" foster children in the Bergmann's lives, including the last one who is now in college. "They weren't all mentally handicapped, " Lillian explains. "The only ones we were paid for were those placed by agencies on a long-range plan. We kept many police kids just overnight or for a week-end to help them get straightened out. We hear from them all the time."

It seems like an understatement when Lillian says, "I always liked kids. They're honest."

As for their own kids, Lillian and Bob are mighty proud of them. Mary is married to Robert Mol and lived in Manlius, New York with their daughter and two sons. David is married and lives in Aberdeen, North Carolina with their three daughters. "We are so fortunate that both our children married lovely spouses," Lillian says.

The children and lots of other people are going to be seeing Lillian and Robert this winter when they take off for visits in Montreal, North Carolina, Florida, and Houston. They'll be back about the first of April – undoubtedly ready to take up a caring cause.

Artcraft of Charlevoix provided the first two contracts to the Association, and they in turn subcontracted to the workshop....the first jobs were a packaging job and putting levelers in a block of wood."

The workshop was moved in 1967 from the Bergmann garage to Garfield Avenue in Charlevoix, where it remained until larger quarters were secured in the former Charlevoix Chemical Company Building on Martin Road in 1980. Before that, in 1974, the workshop was named the "Lillian F. Bergmann Center" (now just called "Bergmann Center").

The Bergmann Center now has 33 clients who produce many different items for many different contractors. The clients are all past the age of eligibility for Department of Education programs, (the Department of Education took over the responsibility of educating mentally handicapped children in 1965), and the Center is run by a Board of Directors.

The Bergmann Center stands as a physical tribute to the tireless efforts of Lillian Bergmann and her husband, but there are an endless number of people whose lives have been personally touched by these two people.

There is Frankie Goolsby, an autic boy, their first foster child, who

P.A.T.: A special challenge

by ANNE KELLY

P.A.T. is the code-word for a special program offered to challange some students at Charlevoix Elementary School. The initials stand for the Program For the Academically Talented.

Recently, as part of the program during the course of three weeks and six sessions, a small but enthusiastic group of 3rd and fourth grade boys, met for an hour before school began, to discover computers. Perhaps that could be restated to say that they learned to do something with computers other than playing games. As for computer games, they learned the secret of the logic behind the screen.

"Coach" for these sessions was John Friedly, a partner in Systems Management, a company which services computers in the northern Michigan area. Teacher for the P.A.T. program, Carol Elliot, was delighted to have the opportunity to make better use of the school's Radio Shack TSR 80 computer.

I have always been a mite apprehensive of THE COMPUTER. I know about Atari games and have witnessed the discovery of my name and medical history number on a screen at Burns Clinic. But like many novices to the field, I have a hard time imagining what goes on behind the scenes of little monster heads eating up different colored little monster heads to score points.

John and Carol, realizing that the benefit of starting computer training young is to dispel fears and mental barriers to understanding computers, were perhaps not as amazed as I to see how naturally these kids had taken to basic computer skills.

John summarized the skills to which the kids had been exposed in their six mini-sessions, basically "just playing around with the computers." It appeared that they touched on everything from the historical aspect of computers to computer language and from the binary system and the internal workings to basic programming skills. They even made flow charts and, having made up their own programs, learned to key them in.

Computer skills can be related to math and other disciplines and can even introduce children inadvertently to such heavy knowledge as algabraic equations. But perhaps the most beneficial skill acquired is that of logic, that of progressing in an orderly way to a conclusion.

As I bung over the shoulders of the kids as they entered their programs on the coputer, I casually marveled, "Don't you wonder what's inside to make it work?"

"A lot of BITS and BYTES," replied young Web Friedly, and they all chuckled in unison. Bits, in computer languaga are individual memory cells, while Bytes are characters. It takes 8 Bits to make a Byte.

I believe that these students thought no more of their acquired knowledge than if they had just learned the rules for a new game for the first time. They were having fun and knew what they were doing. When they didn't they were asking questions, which after all, is the real joy of teaching.

This poem, whipped up after their last class, was presented to John in appreciation for his time and efforts spent in their behalf:

It was early in the morning when we came from all directions to learn about the keyboard and base two commections.
We liked learning about the flow chart which was a very neat part.
We wiped the sleep away from our eyes to learn about the Radio Shack surprise.
We tried and tried and tried so hard to put it in our brains
All the knowledge that you know so well
We will make sure that all your work was not in vain.

P.A.T. students work with a TRS 80 computer.

Charlevoix Children's House Montessori School opens

Twenty-five Charlevoix area children ages two and a half to six are receiving their first educational experience at the Montessori method Charlevoix Children's House.

The school, which opened last week in a new building on Taylor Road, is under the direction of Heather Woods, a certified Montessori instructor. She has taught at several different levels, including the University of Michigan Early Learning and Child Development Center, Dearborn Campus, first grade in a Montessori method school, and fifth grade in a public school. Since moving to northern Michigan, she has also been a substitute teacher in several area schools.

The Charlevoix Children's House uses the Montessori method exclusively in its classes, according to Mrs. Woods. Thus, each child is helped to develop within himself the foundations for a lifetime of creative learning and living, she explains. To do this, the class becomes a place which constantly seems to discover and meet the basic needs of each child: physical, emotional, social, and intellectual.

"It is actually the 'children's house', for this is a place where their work is viewed as important and their dignity is respected."

The Montessori method permits each child to work at his own pace with material that is appropriate and challenging. A child's "work" is never graded or compared to that of others. The learning approach occurs naturally for each child at the proper moment, giving each individual the chance to fulfill his potential to become an independent, secure, and balanced human being, Montessori literature states.

Heather Woods shows Hannes Frey how to form the letter "M" by drawing it with his finger in a box of ground coffee.

The enthusiasm with which parents of Children's House students have greeted the new school is indicated by the time they have donated laying tile, putting down carpeting, building shelves, painting, and refinishing furniture so that the school could open on time.

Mrs. Woods is assisted by Lilly Donaldson, who is administrative assistant, and Cindy Struer and Kay Beatty, who are aides. They staff the school on an assignment basis from 8:45 a.m. to 4 p.m., five days a week. While most of the children are in school only from 9 a.m. to 11:30 a.m., some stay until 2:30 p.m. in an extended session and others remain until 4 p.m. for day care.

Further information about the Charlevoix Children's House may be obtained by calling the school at 547-5599.

Next apportionment will be public hearing

The second meeting of the Charlevoix County Apportionment Commission, to be held Tuesday evening, November 10, at 7:30 p.m. in the County Building, will be a public hearing.

County Prosecutor Scott Beatty, who has been named chairman of the Commission, said he hopes there will be a good turnout of local citizens to discuss numbers, boundaries, and makeup of County Commission Districts for the next ten years.

There are presently 15 Districts in the County, which send 15 representatives to the County Board of Commissioners. This format was adopted ten years ago following the 1970 census, and at that time the Districts were comparable in size, thus giving each voter comparable representation.

Uneven population growth throughout the County has changed all that, with some County Commissioners now representing twice as many constituents as others. The Apportionment Commission has the job of setting up new Districts that will be near-equal in size and most efficient in number. They may simply realign the present 15 Districts (the maximum allowed by law), or cut them down to five (the minimum allowed by law), or any ther number in between.

Besides the population of each District, the Apportionment Commission must follow other guidelines set by statute. For exampie, the political units making up each Distict must be contiguous, and every District must be as compact and as nearly square as practicable.

The inequalities of representation by the present districting are apparent in the following analysis, based on 1980 census figures:

District No. 1, South Arm Township, population 1,237. Delbert Ingalls, Commissioner.

District No. 2, Norwood, Marion, Peaine, and St. James Townships, population 1,807. Clyde Cunningham, Commissioner.

District No. 3, Charlevoix and Hayes Townships, population 2,267. John Haggard, Commissioner.

District No. 4, Bay and Evangeline Townships, population 1,137. tra L. Davis, Commissioner.

District No. 5, Eveline and Wilson Townships, population 2,260. Martin Biegnowski, Commissioner.

District No. 6, Melrose and Chandler Townships, population 1,079. Larry Matthew, Commissioner.

District No. 7, Boyne Valley and Hudson Townships, population 1,669. Ralph Harmon, Commissioner.

Districts Nos. 8 and 9, East Jordan, population 2,183 (average 1,093 each Commissioner). Tom Breakey and Keith Annear, Commissioners.

District Nos. 10, 11, and 12, Boyne City, population 3,348 (average 1,115 each Commissioner). Casimir Toton, Oral Sutliff, and Marvin Loding, Commissioners.

District Nos. 13, 14, and 15, Charlevoix, population 3,296 (average 1,099 each Commissioner). Donald Meggison, Oscar Ward, and t. Lee Moerland, Commissioners.

Since census figures are not broken down into city wards or County representation areas, there is not yet any way to pinpoint the number of residents within each city District.

If the number of Districts is left at 15, they will have to be realigned so that the population of each is as near 1,327 as possible.

CPR training starts tonight at Charlevoix Area Hospital

CPR (cardio-pulmonary resuscitation) – the life saving technique which any properly trained individual can perform on heart attack, drowning or other victims whose heart has stopped or who cannot breath – will be taugbt at Charlevoix Area Hospital Tuesday November 10 and Wednesday November 11.

To attain CPR Certification, participants must attend both classes. The course will be taught by three certified CPR Instructors from the hospital staff. The course will be free to the public.

Each class will begin at 6 p.m. and last four hours. Participants will receive Basic Cardiac Life Support CPR Certification from the Michigan Heart Association, good for one year, at the end of the course.

Jan Ballard, Charlevoix Area Hospital Respiratory Therapist, one of the course instructors, observed that in Seattle, Washington, where one out of every five adults can perform CPR, the survival rate for heart attack victims has risen to 75 percent as opposed to the national average of a 4C percent survival rate.

The CPR instructor pointed out that the first few minutes are vital for the survival of a beart attack or drowning victim. "Brain death can occur within five minutes. It often takes an ambulance longer than that to get to the scene.

"The more people who know CPR the better the chance someone will respond quickly to help a victim and the better the chances for survival," Mrs. Ballard continued.

Arlene Brady, RN, Supervisor of the coronary - intensive care units and Mary Ann Cox, In-Service Training Coordinator at the hospital, will also be instructors for the sessions.

Knowledge of CPR is especially important, the instructors point out, for people in northern Michigan where many live in rural areas and where water sports are very popular.

The class will be limited to 20 participants. However, if more sign up, additional classes will be scheduled. To register, call Charlevoix Area Hospital switch board (547-4024) by Friday, November 6.

The CPR course is another of the Charlevoix Area Hospital's series of preventive medicine and public education classes offered to the people in Charlevoix and Antrim Counties.

Wreath making workshop

The Barnard Women's Club will sponsor a Christmas wreath making workshop at the Barnard Grange at 8 p.m. Monday.

Mrs. Elmer Lashmit of Petoskey will be the instructor.

Those planning to attend are asked to bring evergreens for the wreath, a metal clothes hanger or other wreath form, wreath wire, wire cutters and pruning shears. There will be a charge of $1.00. For more information call 547-2025 or 4232.

Veterans' Day chili supper planned by V.F.W. and Auxiliary

Charlevoix Post No. 1153, Veterans of Foreign Wars, and its Women's Auxiliary will observe Veterans Day with a chili supper at the post home at 8 p.m. Tuesday for members of the two organizations and their respective spouses.

The V.F.W. will then hold its regular meeting and the Auxiliary members and guests will enjoy a fun and social program.

All members of both organizations are urged to participate in this special event in observance of Veterans Day honoring all veterans.

At the recent meeting of the Auxiliary, plans were also made for the annual Christmas dinner party for members of the V.F.W. and Auxiliary and their respective families to be held at the post home Sunday, Dec. 13. The dinner is scheduled for 1 p.m. and will be followed by a visit from Santa Claus for the children. Mrs. Albert Russell will chair the dinner committee.

Mrs. Dorothy McManus of Grawn, 13th District president, attended and inspected the recent Auxiliary meeting. She critiqued the group's floor work, business procedures, records, etc., and commended the president, Mrs. Joseph Seidel on the ritualistic work. She also reported that District 13 is fifth in the state in the membership drive, having 70.5 percent paid membership as of Oct. 31. Dues for 1981 must be paid by Dec. 31. Only 80 percent of the local auxiliary members have paid their dues it was reported.

Mrs. Seidel and Mrs. Clarence Goldstick reported on the recent Pow-Wow held at Boyne Mountain.

A detailed report on the V.F.W. Children's Home at Eaton Rapids was presented by Dr. J. Wilson who advised the more than 600 members who attended the Pow-Wow that the home, supported by the V.F.W. and its Auxiliaries, was progressing well under the new management. There are presently 105 children at the home where they live in a family oriented atsosphere in cottages sponsored by each state. The sale of V.F.W. National Home seals sent to members for use during the holidays also help support the home. Children live at the home until graduating from a nearby high school. Auxiliaries accept any coupons that are redeemable to support the home. Anyone with Gold Bond, S & H, Plaid, Top Value, and similar stamps and cigarette coupons may contribute the stamps for this use. Mrs. John Gilden is National Home chairman.

Bob Goosen, state commander, also addressed the Auxiliary during the Pow-Wow. Mrs. Kenneth Staley is continuing to collect green cash register tapes from Glen's Market. She said she had redeemed $90 recently for the State Auxiliary Cancer program.

Mrs. Clarence Rahach reported on the recent Special Olympics work in which she is involved. This is the "Year of the Child" and the auxiliary is interested in promoting any program that benefits children.

Mrs. Keith Wagner advised the membership that the profits from the weekly flea markets held at the post grounds had been applied toward the purchase of a new refrigerator for the post home. Mrs. Don White, Mrs. Leland Warner and Mrs. Goldstick served on the project committee.

The next meeting of the Auxiliary is scheduled for Dec. 3.

A clean slate

The people of Charlevoix spoke very clearly in last week's election. By an 813-452 margin, they said they wanted a new mayor and the result is that Ken Staley will take office in January with somewhat of a mandate. As a Charlevoix native and longtime area businessman, Staley should have a good perspective from which to guide the city's progress over the next year. Responsiveness and trust were mentioned often in his campaign, two qualities important to any public official. We congratulate the mayor-elect and wish him well in the coming year. Now that Charlevoix has a new mayor and a new city manager, it will be up to the people to be open minded to change as City Hall starts with a clean slate. For these two officials, as well as the City Council, it will be crucial for the people to communicate just what they want written on that clean slate.

Declaration of Veterans' Day

In an executive declaration in observance of Veterans Day, 1981, Gov. William G. Milliken has said:

Of all the important days we observe during the year, few are of more worthy of special observance than Veterans Day.

Citizens of our nation and state live in freedom today because of the contribution and sacrifice made by the men and women who served in the armed forces when our heritage was challenged. Today, more than a million Michigan veterans continue their dedication to the highest ideals of Americanism to strengthen the fortress of our prized national freedom.

We can never repay our debt to our veterans....but we can show our gratitude for their exemplary deeds.

Therefore, I declare Wednesday, Nov. 11, Veterans Day in Michigan and urge all citizens to remember and be thankful for Michigan's servicemen and servicewomen for the devotion they have shown their community, state and nation.

Donald White, Commander, Charlevoix Post No. 1153, Veterans of Foreign Wars, and Louis McKenzie, Commander, Leslie T. Shapton Post No. 226, American Legion, have joined Governor Milliken in asking that the people of the Charlevoix area observe Veterans Day which honors all those who served this country in all wars.

Clockwise
Pipe dream

by Bob Clock

THE IMPENDING closure of the McLaughlin Co. plant in Petoskey this month comes as bad news to all of Northern Michigan — just when we need it least.

The move means the loss of another 140 jobs, on top of the hundreds already lost throughout the area because of Michigan's sagging economy. Petoskey has been particularly hard hit, with the death of McLaughlin coming in the same year as the sale — and subsequent closing — of the Penn-Dixie Cement Co. plant.

McLaughlin's troubles can be traced directly to the faltering auto industry, since most of its production of fasteners was used by the automakers.

It's a pipe dream, I know, but wouldn't it be nice if the McLaughlin plant could be turned into a small-scale auto assembly plant? I seen the end product being a small, energy-efficient model costing no more than $2,000 and making use of the area's wood products wherever possible.

The next time you wrinkle a fender or quarterpanel, wouldn't you like to be able to bolt a new one in place yourself, using tools from your basement workshop?

I'm not talking about a speed demon — just a comfortable little car that would putt-putt down the highway at 40 mph. Of course, only one model would be produced at a time because of the obvious economies, just like Henry Ford's Model T's, and the parts of one car would be totally interchangeable with those of another.

We could call it something snazzy like the Little Traverse or the L'Abre Croche and the world would beat a path to our doorstep.

I CAPPED OFF a week's vacation over the weekend with an overnight trip to Sault Ste. Marie, Ont. It was supposed to be a business junket, but when you're in the Soo, it's hard not to mix business with pleasure.

We stayed at the Water Tower Inn on Route 17 North. Or rather, I should say we stayed in the pool, whirlpool and sauna of the Water Tower Inn, lolling in the languid waters for hours at a time. I couldn't help but feel sorry for the travel-weary Jesuit missionaries who reached the area 300 years ago without a warm hostelry waiting to welcome them.

JUDY, INCIDENTALLY, thinks both Soos — Michigan and Ontario — should make more of a fuss over the fact that the Soo area is the site of the second oldest permanent settlement in North America, surpassed in longevity only by St. Augustine, Fla.

She thinks the least the townspeople could do is put up a marker at the site of the earliest homes, telling a little about the community. We're not even sure which side of the St. Marys River was settled first. There may be such a marker already, but we've never found it.

OF COURSE, the Canadian economy is a shambles — even worse than our own in many respects. The American dollar is worth almost $1.19 Canadian, and passbook interest is up to 16.75 percent, compared to the statutory 5.25 percent on the American side. Posters in the banks advertise short-term certificates of deposit at rates a little higher and long-term rates a little lower. Canadian bankers apparently don't want to be caught with tons of money tied up for the long haul at 18 or 19 percent — should the bubble ever break.

The kids struck up an acquaintance with a couple of long-distance truck drivers in the pool. One of them told us that Canadian mortgages can still be had for 18 percent, but he was paying 22 percent interest on a car he purchased last summer.

But despite crazy money, business appears brisk. The Station Mall — with the addition of a Zeller's department store — has to be one of the largest malls under one roof in the world. Five years ago, we lost Danny on a trip to the Station Mall. This year, the rest of the family lost me. The complex has reached a size that lends itself to utter confusion.

Knight on the Town
Paradise threatened

by Dave Knight

Reactions have been mixed lately to the news that Charlevoix's city water is tainted by an industrial chemical. According to test results revealed two weeks ago, an industrial degreaser and potential cancer-causing substance known as TCE has been identified in miniscule quantities in the municipal water supply. It is generally agreed that the tiny concentration, 14 to 31 parts per billion, does not constitute a health hazard so nobody has season to panic.

But the news was still somewhat depressing to most city residents. It's our image that has been contaminated.

To most who have seen or heard of "Charlevoix the Beautiful" that title connotes an idyllic, but civilized, outpost in the majestic wilds of Northwest Michigan. It has historically been a mecca for those tired masses from the cities looking for respite from the repressive urban environment. Smoggy air, roaring expressways and, yes, tainted water are all things that people come to Charlevoix to get away from.

This is certainly not to say that they won't be disappointed. You can't taste the TCE and tap water is no less sparkling from it. For all we know so far, it may have been in the water for decades without anyone realizing it.

But it's there now and with its discovery goes just a tiny bit of the Charlevoix mystique.

The hard fact, one that is confirmed by a new discovery of chemical pollution in some part of the country almost every week, is that remoteness is no longer any guarantee of environmental purity. Even lakes in the far reaches of Northern Canada are being systematically poisoned by acid rain, precipitated by industrial smoke stacks thousands of miles away.

We learn more about the finite nature of this planet's environment each time such a startling discovery is made. Hopefully the lessons are not being ignored.

In that light, perhaps it is a good thing that we in Charlevoix the Beautiful now realise that this little corner of heaven is just as susceptible to such earthly maladies as industrial pollution as anywhere else.

Perhaps a better awareness will lead to a stronger sense of stewardship; the quality of life for future generations depends largely on our environmental concern.

At any rate, we can't say "It couldn't happen here" any longer.

Letters: Thanks for the support

Bay Queen had a great year

To the Editor:

Thank you Charlevoix! Indeed you are Charlevoix the Beautiful.

The Bay Queen chose the most enchanting little city to call her home port.

Sunday October 25th was the Bay Queen's last cruise for the 1981 season. As I watched the boat cruise down a fall colored shoreline I took time to reflect upon the last five months of operation.

The season had been successful. The 35,000 contented passengers who had enjoyed bringing family and friends aboard would attest to that.

The wonderful young college students had given the boat a flavor of zest and happiness that carried through to their customers. The Sea-Hawk crew had prepared meals that lived up to their 32 years of reputation. The Queen herself had not once been a disappointment to her experienced team of captains.

But let me share a special secret with you. It was this enchanting community that more than anything else helped in our success. It was your spirit, your friendliness and charm, your many fine business establishments, and your proud citizens who helped make the Bay Queen-Sea Hawk Cruises a truly successful Michigan attraction.

Charlevoix, I feel toward you like a dear old friend that I will miss until I return again in the Spring.

Good decision

To the Editor:

As chairman of the Charlevoix Planning Commission, I would like to applaud Michigan National Bank for a decision I became aware of last week. I had heard that the bank was considering the erection of a billboard on the outskirts of Charlevoix. I telephoned Mr. Bill Day, a vice president of the bank, and was informed that there were presently no plans for a billboard. I am very happy that they have not made these plans as I would certainly much rather see our beautiful countryside.

Dr. David Strawbridge
Chairman, City Planning Commission

Who, over the years,
I'm sure appears
To have gotten much older than I.

• Unless your children were born with a silver spoon in their mouth, they probably don't yet know the feel of a precious metal. This feeling goes beyond the physical to a psychological level. Gold and the other precious metals elevate a person's self image. Nothing makes young people feel more grown up than their first important piece of jewelry.
Here are a few holiday gift suggestions for the little "grown ups" on your list:
For Girls:
--Dainty bracelets with birthstones or colored stone beads linked together.
--A first gold ring set with a colored gemstone, either a birthstone or a favorite color. Most little girls like pearls.
--Her name on a chain. Many girls wear a personalized gold necklchain round the clock. Since it's real gold, they can swim or bathe in it without a care.
For Boys:
--Watches are the all-time favorite. Most boys need a rugged sports watch until high school graduation when their reckless energies get rechanneled into more sublime pursuits.
--Signet rings, with one or more initials engraved or sculpted, run neck-in-neck in popularity with school rings. These look good on either the third finger or the pinkie.
--A tie tack, for those dress-up occasions. Consider one set with a richly colored opaque gemstone such as tiger's eye, melachite, lapis lazuli or jade.

LOW BACK PAIN
If back pains are a way of life for you, the reasons can be varied and complex. Some may be pathological, but very often the cause is muscles which are either over- or under-exercised which are producing spinal distortion. Vertebrae slip into abnormal positions, resulting in "pinched" and irritated nerves, which cause pain and even loss of function of the affected body part. Poor posture or even emotional tension can be the root cause.

Jerry Puhl teaches how to be handy

by ANNE KELLY

Parents who aren't handy around the tool box, or wives whose handy husbands never seem to get around to their "job jar" – take heart. If you have a seventh grade student at Charlevoix Middle School, he or she may be preparing to come to your rescue at this very moment.

Basic shop, under the direction of Industrial Arts teacher Jerry Puhl, is a required one semester course for all seventh grade students, male or female. The alternate semester is spent in Home Economics with Barb Cook. As a result no seventh grader should ever, some day in the future, approach either matrimony or an indepenbent mode of existence crying, "But I can't even boil water!" or "But I can't even hammer in a nail!"

Jerry Puhl explains the curriculum for the seventh grade course.

"The first six weeks we do drawings: blueprint drawings, scale drawings. They learn that drawing is the basis of all shop work. That you have to have a plan for each project."

Next, students learn about the tools of the trades. First the hand tools; planes, saws, files, measuring tools. Then the power tools: lathe, band saw, jug saw and drill press.

Most importantly, along with their training, they not only learn how the machines work but the safety rules involved in their operation as well.

The fun of course is in the projects which are kept simple but are designed to give students the experience of planning and creating a product with their own hands.

If you secretly hope that you will be receiving a stereo cabinet or the plans for a family room addition for Christmas, better scale down your expectations to something more realistice like a basket or a hot dog fork or perhaps a little wooden gadget called a "push pull". But take time to appreciate the fact that the kids have learned the basic skills with tools that might inspire them to go on.

The 8th grade Industrial Arts course, which is an elective, gets more selective. Here students work with woods, metals and mechanical drawing. They design and construct more intricate projects requiring more skill.

Jerry's philosophy in the midst of sawdust, humming motors and hammering nails is one of perfection to the best of their ability. He feels that the project they do should be of better or at least the same caliber quality as that of something they would buy downtown. He hopes to inspire a real pride of craftsmanship in their work.

Jerry Puhl graduated with a degree in Industrial Arts from Moorhead University in Minnesota. He taught in Monroe, Michigan for four years before moving to Charlevoix. Jerry, his wife Sandy and their children have lived in Charelvoix since 1970. He has taught Industrial Arts at the Middle School for the past eleven years. He enjoys Middle School because their interest level is high in this age group.

Extra curriculars for Jerry include coaching Middle School track, teaching drivers education in the summer, and hunting and fishing for pleasure.

Silent auction

The auction was silent, but the gift speaks for itself.

October 29th and 30th, the elementary school staff held a "silent auction", the proceeds to be donated to the cause of the sinking ship, Chip Counselling Center. In a "silent auction", articles are donated and an envelope attached to each one for the deposit of bids. During the auction participants write their bid, or how much they would be willing to pay for the item, on a slip of paper and insert it into the envelope. Bids are examined at the end of the auction with the sale going to the highest bidder.

Organizers of the auction, Mary Ann Chew and Carolyn DeMoor, report that teachers had a great time and had raised $300 for Chip.

Rayders top off 7-2 season with 39-0 romp

In a fitting finale to a great season, the Charlevoix Rayders displayed a little of everything Friday night at St. Ignace that made it such a successful year. In blanking the Saints 39-0, running back Mark Beaudoin, quarterback Scott Kelly, linebacker Mike Loper and receiver Ross Carey all turned in stellar performances that capped excellent individual efforts for the season.

Beaudoin ran for 183 yards in 31 carries and two touchdowns against the Saints bringing his total yardage for the season to 1,305, one of the best performances by a Rayder running back in recent CHS history. Kelly's four touchdown passes Friday upped his tally of scoring passes over the year to 18; in nine games he completed 55 passes in 111 attempts for 919 total yards. His favorite target, Carey, ended the year with 26 receptions, 323 yards and 11 touchdowns.

Defensively, Loper lived up to all expectations for the season accumulating 118 tackles in the 1981 campaign.

In Friday night's game, St. Ignace never threatened. On their first possession, the Rayders scored on a Kelly-to-Carey pass that covered 24 yards. The extra point try failed. Later in the first quarter, Kelly found Carey again in the endzone from six yards out to cap a 50-yard drive; Carey also snared a Kelly pass for a two-point conversion to make it 14-0.

In the second quarter, the Rayders kept rolling as Kelly passed again for a TD, this time to halfback Dave Buday from the one yard line. The extra point was no good. Beaudoin finally got into the scoring act before halftime with a five-yard burst for six more points. Thad Morgan kicked the conversion for a 27-0 halftime lead.

In the second half, the Rayders coasted to the victory with another Kelly tochdown pass and another Beaudoin rushing TD to make the final 39-0.

Loper had 14 tackles to lead the team in defense against St. Ignace while Beaudoin and Morgridge had nine apiece, Ken Speigl seven and Mark Morgan six. Defensive back Jeff Trimper came up with one interception.

The Rayders rolled up 490 total yards in offense, 360 on the ground and 130in passing.

The win gave Charlevoix a solid second place finish in the Michigan-Huron Shores standings with a 6-1 conference record and 7-2 overall mark. To no one's surprise, Cheboygan topped the league again with a 7-0 mark to cop their forth straight title.

The action was constant at Shanahan Field Saturday as the Charlevoix Youth Soccer Leagues held their year-end tournaments. In the 13 and under league, Hagen Manke's team defeated Mike Bonar's team 3-0 in the finals to win the championship of the tourney. In the nine and under league, Dale Evans' team defeated Dave Knight's team 2-1 in the championship bracket. Knight's team advanced to the finals with a 5-4 win over Bruce Lanphar's team which took two overtimes and eventually a shoot-out to decide. All participants in youth soccer, including parents and coaches, are invited to attend a special get-together at 3 p.m. Sunday, November 22 at the Weathervane restaurant for refreshments, a soccer movie featuring Pele and a planning session for next year's program. JV team ends with 7th win

An 18-6 victory over St. Ignace last Thursday at Kipke Field, sparked by three touchdowns by Pat Mitchell, gave the Charlevoix junior varsity football team its seventh win of the season and a stellar finishing record of 7-1 for the year.

"It was a good game and a good season," said Coach Brian Certa, "The guys really pulled together as a team."

In Thursday's game, Mitchell scored his first TD on a 15-yard run in the first quarter. Later in the quarter, the speedy back who has been the JV team's top offensive threat this year took off on a punt return of 62 yards and another six points.

After a scoreless second stanza, Mitchell hit paydirt again in the third quarter on a 33-yard romp. The Saints finally got onto the board later in the third quarter with a 4-yard run to leave the final score 18-6.

Will meet to pack baskets

Members of the American Legion Auxiliary will meet at the post home at 1 p.m. Tuesday, Nov. 20, to pack fruit baskets for the patients at Grandvue Medical Care Facility. Plans for this project were made at a recent meeting of the auxiliary held at the post home.

For many years, the local auxiliary has remembered patients at the medical care facility at Thanksgiving time. "Everyone remembers the patients at Christmas time. We feel the 'remembering' should be at other holidays so we deliver the fruit baskets and visit with the patient during the Thanksgiving season" Mrs. Ray Wood, auxiliary president, said.

Plans were also made for the joint potluck supper with members of the American Legion post at 6:30 p.m. Tuesday, Dec. 1. Everyone is to bring a dish to pass and their own table service. Each organization will then conduct their respective meetings. Cake for the dinner will be furnished.

The membership was also advised that the next Lower 11th District meeting will be held at East Jordan Dec. 6. Members are urged to attend. Further information may be obtained form Mrs. Wood.

Mrs. Clarence Goldstick asked that members pay their dues as soon as possible. She advised members that state dues will be increased effective Nov. 11. Local dues will remain the same for the present.

Plans were also completed for the recent salad casserole luncheon held to raise funds for new drapes. Mrs. William Farkas was in charge of the kitchen and Mrs. Wood the dining room. Assisting at the recent luncheon were Mrs. Gertrude Holt, Mrs. Bertha Sternaman, Mrs. Lillian Hull, Mrs. Glen DeFoe, Mrs. Lester Smith, Jan Medford, Mrs. McKenzie, Mrs. Goldstick and Mrs. Pearsall.

Mrs. Josephine Bindi reported that 15 cards, signed by members, had been sent to shutins and members who were ill. Reports were also given on dinners seved by the group to the Northwest Shriners Club and the Knights of Columbus.

Mrs. Louis McKenzie and Mrs. Harry Pearsall served refreshments at the close of the meeting.

8.65. Interpretation. In the interpretation and application, the provisions of this Ordinance shall be held to be minimum requirements adopted for the promotion of the public health, morals, safety, comfort, convenience or general welfare. It is not intended by this Ordinance to repeal, abrogate, annul or in any way to impair or interfere with any existing provision of law or ordinance other than the above described Sign Ordinance, or with any rules, regulations or permits previously adopted or issued or which shall be adopted or issued pursuant to the law relating to the use of signs provided, however, that where this Ordinance imposes a greater restriction than is required by existing Ordinance or by rules, regulations or permits, the provisions of this Ordinance shall control.

8.66. Vested Right. Nothing in this Ordinance should be interpreted or construed to give rise to any permanent vested rights in the continuation of any particular sign and, they are hereby declared to be subject to subsequent amendment, change or modification as may be necessary for the preservation of public health, safety and welfare.

Fee-in-lieu-of-parking amendment passes

by DAVE KNIGHT

A controversial amendment to Charlevoix's zoning ordinance that will require any new, expanded or intensified downtown business to pay a $2,000 fee for each additional parking space needed, when the neccessary spaces cannot be provided on the premises, was passed Monday night by the City Council.

Mayor Sam Supernaw cast the deciding vote to break a 3-3 deadlock among council members.

Under the new amendment, the $2,000 per space fees will be used to create a parking fund for the city to use in easing a shortage of parking facilities in the central business district.

The "fee in lieu of parking" approach drew criticism from several downtown merchants at a public hearing two weeks ago and was the subject of a November 12 letter to the mayor and council from Jim Mabee, vice-president of the Charlevoix Merchants Association urging the council to postpone action on the amendment.

Wrote Mabee, "The members of our Association, who are downtown, will be directly affected by this proposal. We are concerned that an established business would not expand or a new business would settle out of the central business district rsther than pay the proposed fees for additional parking spaces. This would put a stop to growth in the downtown area and be one of many steps to 'killing' downtown."

Realtor associate and former city manager James Brinker also relayed to the council the concerns of downtown merchants who, he said, generally support the aim of the amendment but are concerned with the amount of "cash up front" that is involved.

City Manager Robert A. Hunt suggested to the council that a pay plan be developed to allow a business owner to pay the fee in $500 (for each space) annual increments. Hunt strongly endorsed the fee-in-lieu-of-parking concept saying in his written analysis to council members, "'Helping' new or expanding businesses by not requiring parking is a myth, because it can only be done at the expense of other businesses which are already depending upon a limited parking supply. I suspect one of the several reasons why downtown businesses have a high failure rate is due to limited access (i.e. limited parking) per business overall. You are not helping, but hurting, businesses by permitting increased parking demand without increased parking supply."

Hunt also proposed that a committee of affected merchants be established to determine the severity of the parking problem once comprehensive planner Ron Nino's master plan is at "an appropriate stage".

Voting in favor of the amendment were council members Shirley Roloff, Jeffrey Porter and Robert Timms. Opposing it were members Ray Wood, Earl Muma and James Block.

The council also approved a $5,300 outlay and $1,000 to $1,500 seasonal operating cost to insulate and heat the former Erber Auto building to house the Charlevoix City Fire Department's two tankers and 1941 vintage pumper. The action came on a recommendation by the re-

Apportionment Commission weighs reduction in number of districts

Only 15 residents of Charlevoix County week to participate in the public hearing held by the Apportionment Commission.

The Commission called the hearing in an effort to obtain input in their task of redistricting the County for seats on the County Board of Commissioners.

Presently, there are 15 Districts, each with a representative on the County Board. The redistricting is necessary to set up Districts of comparable population size based on 1980 census figures, which were recently released.

Because of uneven population growth during the last ten years, some Districts now have populations double the size of others, and many more are lopsided.

The Apportionment Commission may keep the number of Districts at 15 (the maximum allowed by law), reduce the number to five (the minimum allowed by law), or set the number anywhere in between.

Seven of the participants at the meeting were members of the County Board, and in their behalf, Commissioner Casimir Toton presented a resolution passed by the Board recommending that the number of Districts remain at 15. The resolution noted that this number was first set in 1967 and would "allow County government to remain in close touch with its constituents". Several other Commissioners also spoke in favor of keeping the status quo, expressing their beliefs that everything was working well as it is. "If it ain't broke, don't fix it", one Commissioner suggested.

Those favoring a reduction in the number of Districts were represented by former Charlevoix County Prosecutor Roy Hayes, Don Smith of Charlevoix Township, and William Ohle of Horton Bay. They pleaded for fewer Districts and a smaller Board of Commissioners in order to bring about a more efficient, more accountable, and less costly Board of Commissioners.

Speaking of accountability, Hayes said, "I suggest you consider reducing the number as much as possible – the fewer there are, the more accountable and more visible they will be with decision-making. The mere reduction of numbers will make them more accountable."

Having heard these arguments, the Apportionment Commission is now proceeding with its redistricting task.

Seasons change gracefully at Windmill Farm

by ANNE KELLY

Tucked away around a bend on the scenic Boyne City-Charlevoix Road, Windmill Farm Campground stands like a sentinel between seasons. October and November are the quiet months. Except for Ken Swan, local commercial artist, and his family who occupy the farm house and help manage the operation both summer and winter, the fields and woodlands are left much to their own subtle revitalization. Horses no longer hang their heads pensively over the white-washed fence along the driveway. Few, if any, campers or tents can be seen among the apple trees or up on the hill, and it's too early to expect the first snowfall which will bring on the cross country skiers.

So, the curtain falls in shades of yellow maple and red sumac on another summer season.

Windmill Farm is owned by Mr. and Mrs. Stewart Boal who prefer to be referred to as Stewart and Susie. Their story is one of Chicago suburbanites summering on family land across the road on the lake. The death of Stewart's father left him with a legacy of lake front property onto which they chose to move a home from across the road. Known as "Stewart's Folly" one wonders how they accomplished the task. Their private drive winds its way down into the woods and on through a majestic stand of pines to the lake.

A gradual accumulation of acreage on the north side of the Boyne City Road, starting with the 80 acre farm itself, led the Boals to the annexation of adjoining property as it became available over the years. Today Windmill Farm is comprised of 500 acres of meadow and pine, apple orchards and sumac, with a cedar swamp and the proverbial stream thrown in for good measure.

Susie and Stewart Boal

At one time, an attempt was made at farming the land, but soil conditions proved unfavorable to the raising of crops. Subsequent efforts at raising sheep with a tenant farmer managing the farm were eventually abandoned. The land lay fallow for about five years.

When Stewart retired from his position as president and major stockholder of a small manufacturing company in Chicago and Susie from her work with a travel agency, retirement plans led them to consider what Susie refers to as their "golden age" career. It was at that time that the Boals decided that the primary value of their property lay in its natural beauty. A compground seemed to be a way of making it available to the public.

It wasn't an easy project to get started. The buildings were in sad repair, the out buildings cluttered with an accumulation of equipment, junk and debris. Licenses and paperwork often held up progress. There were electric wires to bury in the ground, water lines to dig, two septic systems and a dump station to install, as well as the building of picnic tables and the marking off of campsites.

Through the combined efforts of family and friends, the Boals opened their campground in August of 1971 with 25 campsites and various indoor facilities offered in the barn from shuffleboard and basketball to a friendship room. It was late in the season. There were only 5 campers who found their way to Windmill Farm that year. At this point the Boals probably wondered if their idea, like their house, wasn't folly. But the next year a swimming pool was added to the attractions and gradually, tennis courts and horseback riding until today, Windmill Farm offers 50 campsites in a variety of natural settings. The campground runs on an average of 50 percent full during the season. Local event weekends, as well as accomodating overflows from nearby Young State Park, finds them full on several weekends. Windmill Farm is listed in AAA as well as other leading campground guides.

The Boals maintain that the image of their campground is family oriented, and have turned away questionable concert traffic for this reason. Campers or day visitors will find a variety of activities catering to family recreation. Swimming, horseshoes, tennis, ping-pong, movies for kids in the barn loft, basketball, shuffle board, horseback riding and hiking. These are the activities which make the campground an ideal outing for clubs and groups as well as for patronage by campers and area residents. The friendship room in the barn may be engaged for square dances or wedding receptions with a rustic flavor. New this

These new one year certificates will allow you to exclude the interest from your State of Michigan and federal income tax—up to $2,000.00 on a joint return and $1,000.00 on an individual return. The minimum deposit required on the All-Savers Certificate is $500.00. The interest rate will be 70% of the average investment yield for 52-week U.S. Treasury Bills. The Treasury Bill rate changes every fourth Thursday, and the All-Savers Certificate rate changes on the next Monday following the fourth Thursday. This account is insured to $100,000.00 by the FSLIC.

It's what's left after taxes that counts.

An exact comparison of the tax-free interest rate on All-Savers Certificates with the rate of return on taxable investments, of course, depends upon an individual's complete income tax situation. You may wish to consult your tax advisor for this purpose. However, in general terms it can be said that an All-Savers Certificate paying 10% could have an equivalent taxable rate of as much as 20% for a taxpayer in the 50% tax bracket.

Federal regulations require a substantial interest penalty and loss of interest exclusion in the event of early withdrawal.

IN THE TWINKLING OF A CAT'S EYE

Colleen Tilsworth Manager

A number of gemstones exhibit an interesting effect that looks like the eye of a cat--a good one even appears to open and close--and it's aptly named cat's eye.

The cat's eye phenomenon, also called chatoyancy after the French chat meaning cat, is caused by the reflection of light off minute, parallel tubes which run through the stone. The finer the tubes, the sharper the eye. These fine, oriented tubes are also called silk. If you ever studied a spool of silk thread under a bright light, you'd see a similar reflection running perpendicular to the direction of the threads. In order to exhibit the cat's eye effect, a gem with the proper internal structure must be cut in a dome shape, called a cabochon.

The finest cat's eye occurs in the gem mineral chrysoberyl. A honey yellow color is the most highly prized, with greens, browns and other yellows following. Sri Lanka (Ceylon) is the source of the finest cat's eye. A fine gem should be as transparent as possible considering the silk within the stone. The eye should also be straight and sharp.

The cat's eye phenomenon also occurs in quartz, tourmaline, diopside and apatite--in that order of importance.

This is just one of the wonders of the gem world. There are many more. Reusch Jewelry is a member of the American Gem Society. AGS members are required to study the science of gemology and keep up with the latest developments so they can keep the public informed. We're at your service.

County service to transport welfare recipients to jobs is working

by PEG OHLE

David Straubel

Last June, the Courier reported on a pilot program undertaken by the Charlevoix County Department of Social Services whereby volunteers were being paid to transport recipients of general assistance payments to jobs where they could "work out" their payments.

The Department now reports that the program is an unqualified success. It is so successful, in fact, that it is being used statewide.

According to David Straubel, who is in charge of the program for Social Services, the Department saved over $16,000 during the four months of June, July, August, and September through the Work Relief program.

Through the program, all able-bodied recipients of general assistance are assigned to work sites set up by public agencies or non-profit private angecies. For the work they do, they receive credit at the rate of $3.35 an hour to cover their general assistance checks. Since the average monthly general assistance check in Charlevoix County is $130, each recipient on the Work Relief program works about 40 hours a month.

Many recipients of general assistance do not have automobiles and the work sites are scattered throughout the County, so the Work Relief program was somewhat stymied until the volunteer driving program was instigated.

The "no work – no assistance" approach to able-bodied persons who apply for general assistance in Charlevoix County resulted in 33 persons being refused assistance during the four summer months, 12 persons withdrawing their requests for assistance, and 15 persons taking jobs in private industry.

The Department of Social Services figures that keeping these people off the general assistance rolls saved them (and the taxpayers) $19,853. However, it cost the Department $3,019 for volunteer drivers' mileage to get some of the others to work, so the net saving was $16,836.

Further savings are anticipated by the fact that surveys made statewide indicate approximately 70 percent of these people will still not be on general assistance at the end of six months.

There are now ten public and non-profit private agencies in the County where general assistance recipients are "working out" their payments: Charlevoix Township, Senior Center in East Jordan, Senior Center in Boyne City, Leader Dogs for the Blind, Charlevoix Humane Society, East Jordan Fire Department, Charlevoix County Building, State Liquor Control Commission, Cooperative Extension Service, and the Commission on Aging.

Currently, Social Services is negotiating with the City of East Jordan to add them to the work program.

A new program which Social Services hopes to get under way soon will send general assistance recipients to the homes of senior citizens to assist them with home maintenance chores. Such a program of addressing the needs of senior citizens would be unique in Michigan, according to Straubel.

Local artist Jim Annis can hardly keep up with orders

by SARA GAY DAMMANN

When fish were biting, freelance cabinet maker Jim Annis would be there, whether in Lake Charlevoix, off the pier heads, in Torch Lake or anywhere in between.

Now, the fish aren't biting as much, he says, and he's too busy anyway, keeping up with the demand for his paintings and prints of leaping trout, old railroads, depots, Model T's, inter-urban electric trains and ships.

His new career began in 1971 when he indulged a boyhood hobby and carved a series of miniature game fish for Dr. Wayne Tody, then Director of Fisheries for the Department of Natural Resources. Those carvings led to a commission from Blake Forsuland of Grand Rapids for more fish carvings.

"You might say, I floated right into this," the thin, angular faced man, laughed. "And then it got out of hand." Annis' eyes lit up as he nodded at the paintings and prints scattered his living room.

Today his work is in such demand he works on a self-imposed schedule, trying to keep up with the orders.

By 6 a.m. he's either painting, mainly in acryllics, or down at the Charlevoix pier heads, "airing my brain."

"Yes, if the fish are biting, I may try for a few minutes," he admits.

In 1978, Annis' career got a boost when he finished in the top 10 of the Michigan Trout Stamp competition, sponsored by the DNR. The success of his detailed painting of a lake trout inspired him to submit paintings to the publication Michigan Fisherman. Three of his paintings – brook trout, small mouth bass, and a steelhead trout – were used as covers that year. Then the magazine Fur-Fish-Game used one of his lake trout paintings on the cover of its April 1980 issue.

His reputation growing, Annis turned all his energy to art, forsaking his cabinet making business. A meticulous painter, who often works with a magnifying glass to achieve complete authenticity, Annis maintains a large library on fish, railroads, trolleys and old cars.

When the DNR asked him to submit paintings of whitefish, menominee, lake herring, smelt, muskellunge and brown bull heads for publication in its 1980 Angler's Guide to Michigan's Great Lakes, Jim found himself carefully counting scales and fin spines on fish he caught to achieve "anatomical accuracy" in his paintings.

His attention to detail won him three commissions from the National Wildlife Federation to paint steelhead, lake chub and smelt for their Wildlife Stamp Series, soon to be released.

Meanwhile, the artist persued a life long interest in trains, street cars and old cars.

His father had been associated with the railroad business in Detroit when Annis was a boy. In 1940 the family moved to Chicago. It was the era when street cars, trains and inter-urban trains were still clanging through the city and across the countryside.

"But," Jim laughs, "when I lived in Chicago, nothing came to me in particular about the trains. When I came up here, I found myself sketching and painting them."

The Accent Gallery at Water Tower Place in Chicago was so impressed by his acrylic of a Chicago Western Avenue Street car line entitled "Reflections of Yesteryear," they urged Annis to make prints of the painting. That edition sold out almost immediately, with the Chicago Historical Society, as well as the gallery, offering it.

Census stats out

With the release of official 1980 census figures for Charlevoix County, some interesting statistics about the County have become available:

The County grew in population from 16,541 in 1970 to 19,907 in 1980, an increase of 20.3 percent.

The City of Charlevoix was the only political unit in the County to lose population during the ten-year period. It went from 3,519 to 3,296, a decline of 6.3 percent.

Boyne City is now the largest city in the County, with a population of 3,348, an increase of 12.8 percent since 1970.

Hayes Township is now the largest township in the County, with a population of 1,274, an increase of 80.5 percent since 1970.

Wilson Township had the highest rate of growth of any political unit in the County. It grew 84.5 percent, from 650 to 1,199 during the ten-year period.

The slowest-growing political units were East Jordan at 7.1 percent to bring it up to 2,185, and Boyne Falls at 8.9 percent to bring it up to 378.

There are now 11,117 housing units in Charlevoix County, compared with 7,617 in 1970. This is an increase of 45.9 percent and includes seasonal housing as well as year-around housing.

The greatest increase in housing took place in Hudson Township, which grew from 83 houses in 1970 to 386 houses in 1980, for a growth rate of 365.1 percent. However, the Township's population increased only 56.6 percent, from 219 to 343 (Note there are more houses than people in Hudson Township, due to its large summer "cottage" population.

Chandler Township, another sparsely settled area, had the second largest building boom, increasing from 44 houses to 105 houses, a percentaged growth of 138.6 percent. The year-round population of Chandler Township is 83.

Of the total County population of 19,907, very few are minorities. The largest number in this group is 325 American Indians, followed by 38 Asian and Pacific Islanders, and 15 blacks. Another 18 County residents are listed as "other" races.

There are 76 American Indians in the City of Charlevoix, 61 in East Jordan, 43 in Hayes Township, 33 in Boyne City, 19 in Melrose Township, 18 in St. James Township, eight in Charlevoix Township, seven in Boyne Valley Township, six in Boyne Falls, six in Eveline Township, six in Norwood Township, four in Wilson Township, and one in Hudson Township.

Commentary NUCLEAR POWER?

Reagan's long-awaited statement on nuclear power, released finally on October 8, declared that: "One of the best potential sources of new electrical energy supplies in the coming decades is nuclear power." He blamed a "morass of regulations" for the industry's economic woes, and called for the "streamlining" of the licensing process as one solution.

But as Congressman Toby Moffett's Energy Environment Subcommittee will reveal later this month, most licensing and construction delays are the result of technical, construction foul-ups and financial instability — not NRC licensing proceedings. One need only look as far as the President's home state for proof—the start-up of Diablo Canyon Unit 1 was delayed not by intervenors or demonstrators, but by the utility's own incompetence.

The President's statement also contained strong support for the controversial Clinch River Breeder Reactor. Despite it's "free enterprise" rhetoric, the Administration has championed this wasteful, obsolete and dangerous project that has exceeded its original cost by over 600 percent.

The President also called for some solution to the "the problems associated with management of nuclear waste." In very general terms, he urged the Secretary of Energy, "working closely with industry and state governments," to "proceed swiftly" towards a resolution of the waste situation.

Finally, recognizing that the industry is beset by multiple problems, the President said he will appoint a commission to study the "obstacles" blocking increased use of nuclear power. He called for completion of the study within one year.

Beyond these commitments to the creation of a "healthy" nuclear industry, the statement made one major policy about-face. The ban on commercial reprocessing of spent fuel — separating out bomb material plutonium — will be lifted. Private firms will be encouraged to get involved in reprocessing, and the spent fuel in commercial reactors may be used to manufacture nuclear weapons.

The Administration's generosity on domestic nuclear matters is matched by its full-speed-ahead approach to nuclear exports abroad. Through a number of measures, ranging from shifting responsibility for approving export of nuclear material from the NRC to the State Department, to repealing sanctions against countries using nuclear technology in weapons programs, the Reagan Administration will try to accelerate the international transfer of nuclear technology and materials.

We may well be witnessing an attempt to inaugurate "Atoms for Peace - Part II" as the Administration seeks to resuscitate the beleaguered U.S. nuclear industry through sales abroad. Combined with the present push to produce great stockpiles of plutonium for enlarged weapons programs, these policies will go far to increase the instability and danger in the world political arena by increasing the availability of weapons grade plutonium and thus the likelihood of nuclear terrorism or irresponsibility.

The President's statement, however, while long on rhetoric, does little to change the harsh realities facing the nuclear industry in the decade ahead. Just as calling nuclear power safe and reliable does not make it either, demanding a solution to the waste problem will not magically summon one forth. "Streamlining" the licensing process will almost certainly result in a lesser degree of plant safety, but it will do little to stem the rising tide of plant cancellations and construction halts. And asking the private sector to undertake reprocessing does not alter the fact that reprocessing failed once already in the private sector and simply cannot survive in the marketplace.

The President has called for a study of the "obstacles" to nuclear power, by which he no doubt means "placard carrying demonstrators" and nettlesome regulatory agencies. But public opposition to nuclear power is not that shallow or easily dismissed. Problems such as the dangers of radiation and the safe transportation and storage of highly radioactive wastes have been with us since the beginning of the atomic age, and will not be solved in one short year by a Presidential committee.

Lifting the ban on reprocessing and facilitating nuclear exports may offer temporary relief to the industry, but it is sure to shatter the carefully preserved myth that commercial nuclear power is not linked to nuclear weapons. As public awareness of the dangers of nuclear proliferation increases, the resulting backlash will certainly hurt the industry more that these temporary measures can help it. The October 10th demonstration of 300,000 people in Bonn, West Germany, against NATO deployment of nuclear weapons revealed the growing depth and strength of international opposition to nuclear technology.

And last but certainly not least, the President's statement fails to address the cold, hard economic facts facing the industry here at home. Simply put, when a high prime interest rate makes it impossible to build a new home, utilities are simply unable to build multi-billion dollar nuclear power plants. Safe energy proponents have argued for years that labor-intensive, decentralized energy systems are safer, saner, and in the long run more sustainable that the present enormous centralized systems. Capital-intensive utilities failed to heed the warnings, and today nuclear power is dying of its own economic weight. Unless the Presidents can bring down inflation and interest rates, his wish list for the nuclear industry amounts to little more that wishful thinking.

Knight on the Town

Baby talk

by Dave Knight

Some observations after two weeks of fatherhood:

-When changing baby, one should position himself at a good arm's length from the area of operation and not wear a white shirt.

-A new mother's postpartum blues can be treated most effectively with a cheese and mushroom omelet served in bed. (Important: don't scorch pan and be sure to clean up kitchen!)

-Watching the development of a newborn's personality is like watching an artist's brush gradually dab bits of color onto a blank canvas.

-The same person who developed Rubik's Cube may well have had a hand in designing the configuration of snaps on infant sleepers.

-When relating all the new experiences to other parents, they almost always nod and smile as if to say "Welcome to the club."

-Does baby have mother's eyes or fathers eyes? The question rages. I know I'm not missing mine. I think we ought to concede the fact that she's got her own eyes.

-In the great scheme of things, there are two primary jobs in caring for baby; feeding and changing diapers. If these two responsibilities are divided equally between parents, and the baby is to be breast fed, you know what job the father is left with. No wonder the dramatic increase in numbers of mothers who breast feed.

-Haven't pegged baby's musical tastes quite yet but she seems to have taken a bit of a fancy to Bruce Springsteen.

-Exposure to Richard Simmons on TV did indeed persuade baby to shed some weight - if you count spitting up.

-No classes, no magazine articles, no source I know of can adequately describe the wonder of this whole experience. I see now it is futile for me to even try.

Clockwise

Et tu, Stockman?

by Bob Clock

The week just ended was a disastrous one for Republicans. Not only did David Stockman, President Reagan's navigator on our stormy economic seas, display his lack of confidence in the course the skipper has chosen to take, but Richard Allen, his national security advisor, became caught up in the petty business of accepting a $1,000 honorarium for arranging an interview with the First Lady by a Japanese magazine.

Can the Reagan administration survive another such week?

That's problematical. The damage already has been done and the president muffed his big chance to rescue his good works by refusing to accept Stockman's resignation.

It difficult to say whose judgment is worse: Stockman's or Reagan's.

And what horrible crime did Stockman commit? He simply parroted what such Democratic leaders as Sen. Edward Kennedy and Thomas P. (Tip) O'Neill have been saying all along: That Reagan's tax cuts favor the rich; that the administration's whopping budget cuts were poorly thought out; and that he is having trouble with the whole idea of supply-side economics — the keystone of Reagan's recovery program.

In the days since the interview with the former Michigan congressman appeared in The Atlantic Monthly, Stockman has been hailed in some quarters for his "candor" and for "telling it like it is."

Which is a lot of nonsense. If Stockman feels the way he does about Reagan's economic program, he should have resigned and taken up the attack from the sidelines. It was unconscionable for him to condemn Reagan's reordering of the nation's priorities from the inner sanctums of the administration itself.

Even more preposterous, perhaps, is the fact that when Stockman did offer his resignation, Reagan refused to accept it.

Apparently the president is unaware that a great deal of his own image is linked in the public mind to David Stockman.

I — for one — had the feeling that even if Reagan didn't have a clear grasp of what he was doing, someone in Washington did have a firm hand on the tiller and that someone was probably David Stockman. Although Stockman's betrayal delighted Democrats, it left many Republicans physically ill.

Reagan certainly must realize that the difficulties he has encountered in the past in pushing his reforms through Congress are nothing compared to the stonewall he now faces.

Perhaps part of the problem is that Reagonomics has become sort of a religion for many of us.

We know, deep down, that the nation cannot survive much longer under the profligate spending policies of the Jimmy Carters, the Gerald Ford, the Richard Nixons, the Lyndon Johnsons, the Jack Kennedys, the Dwight Eisenhowers, the Harry Trumans and the Franklin Roosevelts of the world.

The size of the federal government has become an oppressive burden that not only robs us of our livlihood but has crushed the life out of private enterprise through taxation and regulation.

It sickens us year after year to see the fruits of our labor decimated by the ravages of inflation. It is discouraging to send a houseful of kids off to school every morning, knowing full well that they will never be able to complete their educations, or own their own homes, or even buy their own automobiles if the present economic climate persists.

I guess that is why a lot of us embraced Reagan when he promised to breathe new life into the American economy by reducing the size of government, lifting physical and monetary restraints on business and industry and giving the citizens a fighting chance to provide for themselves.

But those dreams died last week.

As for Richard Allen, when and if he tenders his resignation, I hope the president has the good sense to accept it.

New group dedicated to preservation of local beauty

Twenty-five area residents gathered last week to form a new organization named Keep Charlevoix Beautiful (KCB).

At a Friday meeting held in the Charlevoix Public Library, six objectives for KCB were stated by the group. They included the confirmation of the group's name, to support planning for orderly and attractive growth, to maintain the quality of life in Charlevoix,, to promote the idea that beauty is good for business, to increase the citizens' participation in decision making and to protect the environment.

A nominating committee to elect a slate of officers will include Chairman Henry Lerman, Alvin Ranger, Sherry Sheldon, Bruce MacArthur and Bob LaFavor.

According to Sherry Sheldon, who chairs KCB's Special Activities Committee, one of the organization's first major projects being considered is a spring, 1982 Pride Day. The project would include a community-wide clean up and spruce up effort. Involved in the project would be the business community,, youth groups, service organizations and schools.

KCB members will also be offering support to sound civic planning and coordinating with service organizations and other community groups, according to policies formulated at their first meeting.

Those interested in participating in KCB activities are to call interim chairman Bruce MacArthur at 547-5960. Membership applications are available at the Charlvoix Chamber of Commerce office at 408 Bridge St.

Guild makes holiday decorating plans

The Charlevoix Area Hospital will assume a holiday look beginning Dec. 3 when Mrs. Frank Webb and her committee begin the task of bringing Christmas to the patients and staff.

Plans for this were made at a recent meeting of the Charlevoix Area Hospital Guild.

Mrs. Webb has issued a plea for volunteers to assist with the decorating which is scheduled for 1 p.m. Thursday, December 3.

At the same meeting, tentative plans were made for a Christmas party for Guild members to be held at the home of Lucille Ingram, 715 E. Dixon Ave., at 7:30 p.m. Monday, December 14.

At the recent meeting a revision of the by-laws were read and approved by the membership.

It was also announced that the annual pre-Christmas showing at the Guild's Showcase gift shop had grossed $1,176.

At the same meeting the name of the organization was changed to the Charlvix Area Hospital Guild from the Womens Guild of the Charlvix Area Hospital.

Membership in the Guild is open to all residents of the area served by the hospital who are interested in service to the patients and the hospital.

BACK, HIP AND LEG PROBLEMS

Painful problems of the back, hip and leg most frequently are the result of faulty alignment of one or more of the spinal segments in the lower back. The nerves branching out from these vertebrae... control the lower extremities. If one or more of these nerves become "pinched" or irritated, pain, swelling and loss of function may occur. An understanding of these problems can help you avoid suffering and loss.

Simulated camper explosion sets scene for disaster drill

An explosion in a camper at Fisherman's Island State Park, heart attacks to major wounds was the scenario for last Wednesday's disaster drill conducted by the Charlevoix Area Hospital and the Charlevoix Ambulance crews. Scenes of the drill are shown to the left.

Two disaster drills are staged by the hospital each year. Required by the Joint Commission on Hospital Accreditation, these drills test the hospital staff's and ambulance crew's preparedness to handle major emergencies.

Hospital employees, acting as victims, with wound realistically simulated bymakeup, were rescued at Fisherman's Island State Park. When the victims were transported to the hospital emergency room, the on-call physician and nursing staff assessed each victim's condition and simulated appropriate treatment.

Every disaster drill is critiqued by other members of the hospital staff. Their criticisms are studied and suggestions incorporated into the planning for real emergencies.

Cross country trails being readied at Windmill Farms year was the "P.F." trail, a physical fitness 2½ mile jaunt separate from the other trails, providing some 20 stations along the way which instruct participants in a specific exercise. The joy of this trail which may be walked, jogged or run, is in its scenic beauty. Forget the exercises if they keep you from enjoying a beautiful day outdoors. No one is looking!

A projected summer plan is to initiate group picnics or trail rides back into the property as far as Burgess Rd. where vistas on some of the heights are breath-taking especially in autumn.

Campground prices are reasonable with group and club rates available. An additional benefit for locals is a seasonal family rate for day-use of farm facilities.

If the land seems a natural for summer outdoors enthusiasts, let it be known that Windmill Farm is going on its fourth season as a cross country ski area. This part of the operation is owned and operated by Flint skiing enthusiast Tom Short, professor at the General Motors Institute in that city, as well as a representative for a Flint based firm. Tom began his "Silent Sports" enterprise in Flint in 1974 as an outlet for his enthusiasm for skiing and sailing. In fact, his interest in sports "au naturel" (Tom ran a 10 Kilometer race in the Alps back in 1964) led him to recognize cross country skiing as a growing sport and to get in on the ground floor with his business.

It was on a sailing for pleasure excursion up north that Tom learned of the Windmill Farm possibilities. After talking with the Boals and scrutinizing the land himself, it was obvious that Windmill Farm was a natural for a network of cross country ski trails. Already in existence were some 15 miles of old lumbering trails weaving their way through the hills and woodlands of the farm. It remained only for Tom with the help of his friend, Petronella "Nellie" Hiehle to re-open, connect, groom and mark the trails for the purpose of cross country skiing. Tom believes that he and Nellie "really know cross country skiing," both being expert skiers themselves who have skied extensively and are certified ski instructors. They have designed the trails as follows: a) wide and gentle for beginners, b) more primitive in denser wooded areas, and c) "pretty exciting" for the expert or more adventurous skier.

Windmill Farm Skiing offers lessons, groomed and marked trails, night skiing, a warm-up house and ski shop. Their counterpart being Silent Sports North of nearby Charlevoix, Tom and Nellie believe in buying and supplying the very best in rental equipment so that novices and experts alike may feel confident that they are skiing off on the right foot.

Adding a touch of interest to the ski season, Silent Sports and Windmill Farm sponsors two major sporting events for ski enthusiasts during the course of the season. The Great Wooden Ski Rally held in February is an opportunity for nostalgic historians and ski-nuts alike to sport their old timers clothing and equipment and come out for some fun. As part of the Charlevoix Winter Carnival, also held in February each year, Windmill Farm hosts the Winter Cup Cross Country Ski Competition which boasted over 150 entries last year.

"The person who cross country skis, does it to get away from it all," Tom expisined. "Downhill skiing is more of a social sport."

When the curtain rises on the ski season at Windmill Farm, the land will once again fulfill the dream of the Boals – that of sharing their 500 acre parcel which they believe to be "very lovely to enjoy for a recreational purpose."

As in the camping season, Tom, Nellie and manager Ken Swan hope to work with clubs and organizations as well as individual skiers. For those fortunate enough to live in the vicinity, summer or winter, Windmill Farm provides a haven where "you're in a totally different setting, but you don't have to go very far."

Senate candidate Ruppe brings young campaign to Charlevoix

Philip E. Ruppe was the first of the candidates for the United States Senate to campaign in Charlevoix. He stopped by for an informal gathering last Wednesday evening, and approximately 110 men and women turned out to shake hands and hear the candidate discuss his platform..

Charlevoix was the last stop on a long day of campaigning for Ruppe. He started out in Livonia with an appearance before the Chamber of Commerce, flew to Charlevoix, where he left his plane, and drove to Harbor Springs. There he spoke before the Kiwanis Club, later went to the Petoskey High School, where he visited with the government and political science classes, and returned to Harbor Springs for a fund-raising party. Then it was back to Charlevoix.

Campaigning in northern Michigan is campaigning "at home" for Ruppe. He served this area in Congress as a Representative from the 11th Congressional District for 12 years, from 1966 to 1978, when he decided to run for the Senate seat being vacated by Robert Griffin. However, Griffin changed his mind, ran for the office, and was defeated by Democrat Donald W. Riegle.

Since leaving the political scene in 1978, Ruppe has been employed in Washington by Amex, Inc., a multi-ore mining company. His wife, Loret, is head of the Peace Corps and was in Ghana last week when the candidate was in Charlevoix. When asked how often they see each other, Ruppe said, "Oh, about every week or ten days".

Ruppe was engaged in banking in his home town of Houghton in the Upper Peninsula before entering politics. He still maintains a residence there.

While he was in Congress, the U.S. Chamber of Commerce three times named Ruppe "Watchdog of the Treasury" for his votes against increasing federal budgets. The National Federation of Independent Business named him a "Guardian of Small Business". The Coal Strip Mining Control and Reclamation Act, which he authored, was called "the most significant energy-environmental law of the 1970's."

Right now, Ruppe's concerns are the economy of Michigan. He abhors the fact that the State gets back only 67 cents of every tax dollar sent to Washington despite the fact it has endless capabilities for handling defense jobs and research programs.

"We have a tremendous pool of skilled labor," he told his Charlevoix audience. "We need to attract more defense dollars."

Ruppe seems to be reconciled to the establishment of Project Elf in the Upper Peninsula. "I have opposed it because I don't think it is technically a good system," he said. "However, it has been scaled down to 58 miles on government land."

When more budget cuts have to be made, Ruppe believes Congress will have to look harder at defense. "They may have to close down some bases," he suggested, "and look more closely at their housekeeping."

Most of the candidate's efforts these days are being directed toward his campaign in the major population centers, where he is less well known than in his native northern Michigan. "We have to work hard before the primaries to raise our money because August will be too late," he explained to the Charlevois group.

Karen Kirschner

'Workshop Way' is the best way for St. Mary's Karen Kirschner

TEACHER FEATURE

by ANNE KELLY

Karen Kirschner, 2nd grade teacher at St. Mary's School, is young, enthusiastic, and convinced about a program she is using in her classroom and helping to initiate in her school.

Known in parochial schools as the "Workshop Way", this program was developed in Grand Rapids by Grace H. Pilon, S.B.S. It is an enrichment schedule of activities which utilizes the children's free time in a creative and constructive way.

Karen, a 1978 graduate of Hope College, spent a year as reading consultant in Fairview, Michigan before joining the staff at St. Mary's three years ago. It was during her student teaching that she became aware of "Workshop Way" and found it to be a worthwhile supplement to the usual classroom curriculum. The program, Karen explains, involved a schedule of progressively difficult or more challanging tasks which students may undertake independent of teachers whenever they are not in a teaching group.

Most important is the classroom environment which stresses five "freedoms" a) the freedom from fear (of making mistakes as they tackle the tasks on their own, b) freedom of movement with a purpose, c) freedom of position and location for work, d) the freedom of conversation while working, and e) the freedom of choice frequently throughout the day.

Pointing out the Workshop Way materials assembled on one wall of the classroom, Karen demonstrated how children do and complete one task before moving on to the next in the course of the day.

Examples of some of the tasks are suggestions for additional practice of basic skills with words and numbers, puzzles, challenging questions, activities to do with a partner.

It is easy to see that Karen's philosophy of education is very much incorporated in her classroom organization worked around "Workshop Way".

She believes that "the child should feel relaxed and be given the freedom to learn at their own pace. That their learning should be guided with structure if they are to discover, learn and grow."

Karen, along with the first grade teacher at St. Mary are planning to attend a "Workshop Way" seminar in Grand Rapids where they will pool their ideas with other educators around the state as regards this program. She is hopeful that there will be a presentation in our area in the future so that other teachers may become exposed to a method that Karen is convinced "really works."

Council approves fire equipment storage plan

cently formed Fire Safety Committee. It was one of six options listed by City Manager Hunt to solve the problem of where to house the three pieces of equipment during the winter.

Other options included less expensive heating and insulating methods of the Erber building and possible use of the former Norton gas station on the corner of Antrim and State Streets.

Committee member James Elliott urged the council to adopt the committee's recommendation for use of the Erber building saying, "We have to look farther down the road than this winter and see that we really need a new fire engine but if we got one tommorrow, we'd have no place to put it."

The concern that use of the Erber building for fire equipment storage would sidetrack original plans for its use as parking was voiced by downtown merchant Michael Greeley. Said Greeley, "My fear is that once the Fire Department is in there, the Erber building is going to become the fire hall and the parking problem is going to be put on the back burner. By installing space heaters and insulation, the council is committing itself to a new fire hall without addressing the parking situation."

The council eventually voted 5-1 to accept the Fire Safety Committee's recommendation with Porter casting the lone "no" vote.

With plans submitted to them for a proposed wooden sign, the council unanimously approved a sign permit for a 7-11 store to be constructed at the site of the former Muma service station on the corner of Bridge and Belvedere. Garb-Ko, the firm proposing to build the 7-11, agreed last week to go along with a Planning Commission request that they erect a wooden sign instead of their standard interior-lit plastic variety.

Garb-Ko representative John Healey told council members Monday night that, although a finished design has not been completed, his firm has made initial plans to put up a sign 5'6" by 6'6" (35.75 square feet) constructed with wood and using some natural wood coloration, on two posts, lit from the ground, with a height not obstructing motorists' views.

In other action, the council:

-Approved new water and sewer rates for city customers; featured in the rate plan is a monthly water service charge of $2.12 for users with 3/4 inch pipe and smaller (most residences), a commodity charge of $1.30 per 2,000 gallons for the first and second 1,000 gallons, $.90 per 1,000 gallons for the third through fiftieth 1,000 gallons and $.80 per 1,000 gallons for the 51st 1,000 gallons and over; a sewer service charge of $2.73 for the same size pipe and a sewer commodity charge 2.21 times the water commodity charge. Under the new rate plan, there will be no charge for shutoffs of service but there will be a $30 charge to turn on either water or sewer service. The new rates will become effective December 1, 1981.

-Set new user fees for the Mt. McSanbo ski hill consolidating all individual passes (adult, student and child) at a $30 rate and making the child rate the same as the student rate at $2.50 day, $2 night. Approval was also given to complete the clearing of the sled run on the hill.

-Went along with the downtown merchants' proposal that the city put up white Christmas lights in the new trees along Bridge St. if the merchants provide the lights.

Kids' Corner uses volunteer help with 3 and 4 year olds

by ANNE KELLY

Parents of pre-schoolers are fortunate this year to have the choice of three excellent nursery facilities: the Montessori Charlevoix Children's House, the Charlevoix Co-op Nursery at the elementary school and new on the scene this year, Kid's Corner Nursery School, a Christian nursery school sponsored by the First Congregational Church.

Under the direction of Linda Behringer, Kid's Corner is a small but growing enterprise. To date there are 19 children, ages 3 and 4, enrolled in a class which meets each Tuesday and Thursday from 9 - 11:30. In January there will hopefully be two classes, the second to meet on alternate days.

The pre-school is operated on the co-op principle which involves parents participating on a rotating basis as teacher's aides. This concept enables parents to actually take part in their child's educational development. This experience usually proves to be an enriching one for both parent and child alike. Many parents realize for the first time what it means to really listen to and play with their child.

Linda Behringer as teacher has the opportunity to model techniques of play with a purpose and socialization of the children. She explains that she is most concerned with "taking the children as they are, at their own individual level of maturity." She hopes to convey that pre-school is that special place where there is time for children to develop at their own rate with no pressing educational expectations to be met. It is here that the child is encouraged to play, share, communicate and involve himself in the give and take of "getting along" with others.

Kid's Corner kids participate in the usual nursery school activities: free play, projects to make and take home, show and tell, snack time, circle time for stories and songs. But Kid's Corner is also a Christian nursery which places an extra emphasis on loving and sharing as children of God.

Extras for children in the program have been weekly visits from Fran Tollas who brings a special music lesson for them, and field trips to the library, to the Mesquite and to the apple orchard.

A Thanksgiving celebration is planned with children participating in the preparation of the food.

Ms. Behringer, who has three grown children of her own, has taught first grade, Kindergarten and three years of nursery school in Defiance, Ohio before accepting the teaching position with Kid's Corner.

Openings for the Nursery are available. For further information contact Phyllis Hess, 547-4245.

"HASELNUSS-SCHNITTEN" (filbert slices)
Mrs. David Ball (Kay)
Charlevoix

Makes about 22 cookies
Pastry
8 T. (1 quarter-pound stick) unsalted butter, softened
¼ t. sugar
1⅓ cups sifted all-purpose flour
2 hard-cooked eggs
1 egg, lightly beaten
1 t. salt

Preheat the oven to 350°. Cream the butter and sugar together, until light and fluffy. Then beat in the flour, ½ cup at a time. Mash the hard-cooked eggs by rubbing them through a sieve with a wooden spoon, and beat them, the lightly beaten egg and the salt into the mixture, continue to beat until the mixture becomes a slightly stiff dough. Shape the dough into a ball, wrap it in wax paper or plastic wrap and refrigerate for about 2 hours.

Filling:
½ cup whole filbert nuts
1 t. coarse salt
¼ t. allspice

Remove brown skin from filberts. Heat them for 10 minutes in the oven, cool slightly, then rub them between the hands, or towel to remove brown skins. Pulverize them in a nut grinder. (Or blender)

Add the salt and the all spice to the ground nuts. On a lightly floured surface roll the dough into a strip ¼" thick and 6" wide. It should then be about 17 inches long. Sprinkle the nut mixture evenly over it. Press the mixture into the surface of the dough by rolling it lightly with a rolling pin. Turn the pastry lengthwise in front of you and roll it, jelly-roll fashion, into a long, tubular shape. Wrap the roll in wax paper or plastic wrap and refrigerate it for about 45 minutes. With a pastry brush or paper towel lightly butter two 12x15 inch baking sheets. Slice the roll into ¾" slices. Arrange them side by side and bake for 15 minutes. Let cool on the baking sheets.

Annis...

pushing Annis to create more prints of his paintings. This year the gallery is taking several of his prints on a national tour beginning in San Francisco next month.

Some three years ago Annis sought the advice of noted railroad artist Howard Fogg of Boulder, Colorado.

"He found faults here and there. He liked my work but he corrected some mechanics of the engines. After a year he encouraged me to start selling."

Annis' railroad scenes, generally historical, evoke the nostalgia of the era, the heyday of railroading around the country, "when the inter-urbans were still running, before the automobile took over," he observes.

Annis is as exacting about the detail of his railroad and ship paintings as he is of the scales of his fish.

Whether it's the Pere Marquette steam engine 101 pulling the Resort Special through Grand Rapids at night, the sailing schooner Rosabell, about which poet Sara Teasdale wrote from Charlevoix in the early 1920's or a dancing brook trout, glistening as it breaks from the water,

Here it is!

Just in time for company.

On the following pages, the Charlevoix Courier offers its readers one of the most extensive collections of locally favorite dessert recipes ever compiled in this area. Additional recipes also appear on page 7 of this week's Courier.

Some of the best cooks in the Charlevoix County area and points beyond have contributed their expertise to the Holiday Cookbook making it something you'll want to keep in your recipe files for many holiday seasons to come.

The key to any project such as the Holiday Cookbook is participation and there was no lack of that in this case. In less than a month, more than 170 entries were received at the Courier. They came from as far north as Pellston and as far south as Southfield.

The five categories offered were cakes, cookies, pies, breads and candies. Six judges including restaurant chefs, bakers and candy experts screened all the entries to come up with three finalists in each category.

Those 15 individuals were each contacted and asked to prepare their recipe for a final judging session at the Courier office last week. When the judges had observed and tasted all the dishes, they came up with a winner in each category who received a $10 cash prize from the Courier and a $5 gift certificate from Gourmet Port O'Call in Petoskey. The Grand Prize winner received $100 in groceries courtesy of Oiesons and a $50 gift certificate from Gourmet Port O'Call.

This year's grand prize went to JoAnne Rebec of East Jordan for her Banana Split Cake recipe. Winners in the other categories were: Breads — Terri Parsons; Cookies — Ivy Woodcock; Pies — Phyliss Brill; and Candy — Dallann LaPointe.

Mrs. Woodcock was the only repeat winner. She captured first place last year in the Lo-cal Dessert classification.

The attractive corn shuck wreaths in the photos were generously lent for the occasion by Wickerville Station in Charlevoix's Market Mall. Greenleaf Country Gardens provided the bows and flowers for all the finalists.

The Charlevoix Courier extends its gratitude to the panel of judges, all of whom were last reported dieting, to the many area cooks who participated in the contest and to the advertisers who made this Holiday Cookbook possible.

Church Windows

1 13 oz. bag real chocolate chips
4 T. butter or margarine
1 t. vanilla
1 bag multi colored miniature marshmallows.

In double boiler or heavy sauce pan melt chocolate chips and butter. Add vanilla and remove from heat. Allow to cool completely. Gently fold in marshmallows and mix until all marshmallows are coated, taking care not to crush. (If chocolate mixture is too hot, marshmallows will melt.)

Turn onto waxed paper. Using the wax paper press into the shape of a roll, approx. 4 ins. thick and 10-13 ins long. Gently pat & press until you have a tight, compact roll. Transfer to clean waxed paper, if necessary & wrap tightly. Freezer several hours or several weeks. Keeps beautifully for several months. Allow to thaw for an hour or so before slicing into ½ inch thick slices. Chocolate will have surrounded each miniature marshmallow & give the effect of a stained glass window, thus the name of the recipe.

Ten sites proposed for warning sirens

by DAVE KNIGHT

Ten sites within a five-mile radius of the Big Rock Point nuclear plant have been proposed by Consumers Power Company as locations for siren-public address units as part of an emergency warning system targeted for completion by December 11.

Of the ten sites, two are located in the City of Charlevoix on public property and await final approval by the City Council. Three are on public right-of-ways in rural areas and have been approved by the Charlevoix County Road Commission. Five proposed sites are on privately owned property and negotiations are underway this week to secure the required easements.

A recent Nuclear Regulatory Commission ruling directed Consumers Power to have an emergency warning system operational by February 1, 1982. The action rejected an appeal by Consumers Power for a variance from the warning system requirements on grounds that a telephone call list system is sufficient.

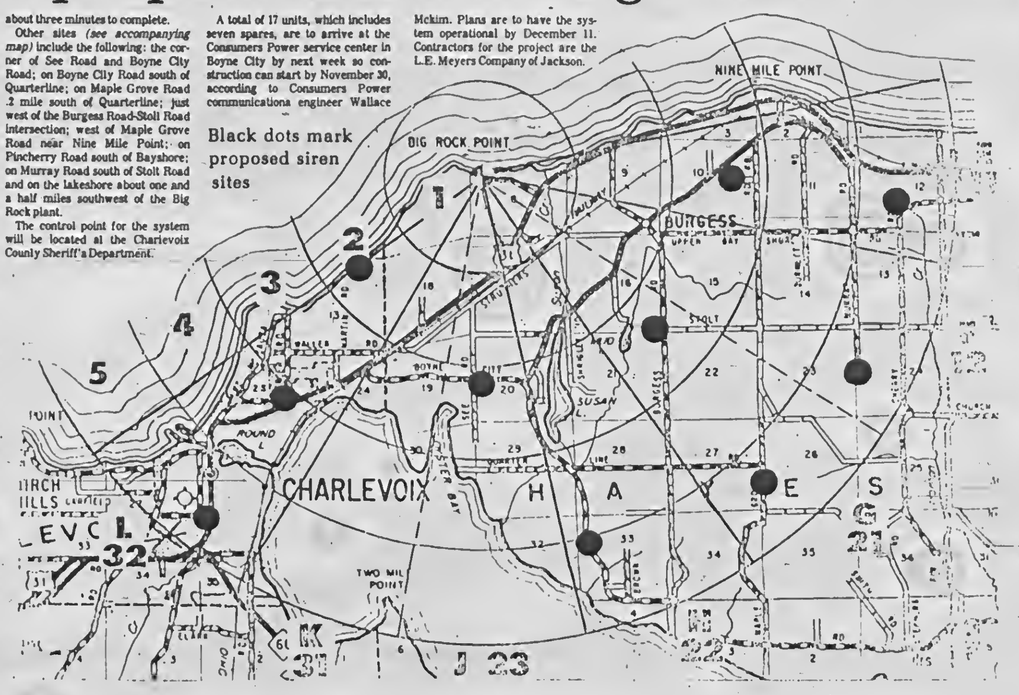
Within the City of Charlevoix, the south side of town will be served by a unit on the north side of Carpenter St., 141 feet east of State St. On the north side, a unit is proposed for the northwest corner of the intersection of Mercer Blvd. and Division St.

Each unit will consist of a bank of 16 speakers mounted vertically atop a 48-foot pole. The speakers will rotate 360 degrees and are designed to be heard almost two miles away. Regular tests will be conducted at noon on the first Saturday of each month. The test will consist of three siren sounds, each one followed by an explanation over the speakers of its meaning. The test routine takes about three minutes to complete.

Other sites (see accompanying map) include the following: the corner of See Road and Boyne City Road; on Boyne City Road south of Quarterline; on Maple Grove Road .2 mile south of Quarterline; just west of the Burgess Road-Stoll Road intersection; west of Maple Grove Road near Nine Mile Point; on Pincherry Road south of Bayshore; on Murray Road south of Stolt Road and on the lakeshore about one and a half miles southwest of the Big Rock plant.

The control point for the system will be located at the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Department.

A total of 17 units, which includes seven spares, are to arrive at the Consumers Power service center in Boyne City by next week so construction can start by November 30, according to Consumers Power communications engineer Wallace Mckim. Plans are to have the system operational by December 11. Contractors for the project are the L.E. Meyers Company of Jackson.



Chinese venture is trip to the past for Giffins

by TOM DAMMANN

"The hordes of people, the huge population of China, which has almost doubled in the 35 years since we were there," dominated the impressions carried home by Rev. and Mrs. Raymond H. Giffin who recently returned from a tour of mainland China.

"There were only 450 million people in China when we left in 1949," the pastor of the First Congregational Church explained in an interview. "Now the population numbers a billion."

The Giffins, noted however, that now people marry later and that married couples are allowed only one child.

The Giffins espressed amazement that despite this doubling of the population, the life and health of the people have improved greatly. Life expectancy has increased to 72 for men andwomen.

"There has been great progress in terms of the standards of living, public cleanliness and health," Giffin said. "There is universal education now."

"We saw no beggars, no children with runny noses, no open sores on people," Mrs. Giffin interjected. "We were very much impressed by the changes. The streets are kept almost spotless, everything is clean."

Rev. Giffin was born in a small Chinese community in a remote part of southern China, son of a Baptist Missionary family. He learned to speak a Chinese dialect, Hakka, before he learned English. He spent his first 15 years in China, except for furlough years in the United States. He and his sister were given the standard American schooling by their mother, using the Calvert correspondence courses.

He attended eighth through 11th grades at the Shanghai American school ("we saw the building and went to the community church there during this last visit," he said), and took his senior year at Duluth, Minn., high school, where his family settled when he was 16.

He no longer speaks the Hakka dialect, having learned Mandarin, the national language. The second and required language, incidentally, in modern China, is English, which is taught in school beginning in third grade, the minister pointed out.

He attended Dennison University, in Ohio, where he met his wife, Jean, whom he married in 1941. He was ordained a Baptist minister but later became a Congregationalist.

After several assignments in the United States, Rev. Giffin went back to China on his own missionary assignment in the fall of 1947. He served in Foochow on the coast opposite Taiwan.

"We left in May, 1949, just ahead of the communists," Rev. Giffin explained.

Rev. and Mrs. Raymond H. Giffin

Biggest problem was dust

The tour, which the Giffins have just completed, was organized by the Baptist Missionaries Encounter Group (his sister Alice is secretary of the Overseas Division of the Baptist World Ministries, headquarted in Valley Forge, Pa.) There were 48 in the group, a number of whom were elderly, but they looked after one another and despite the tightly scheduled, fast moving trip, they survived without any serious complaints.

"Our biggest problem was coughing caused by dust," Mrs. Giffin said.

"Yes, the Chinese don't like grass, for some reason," Rev. Giffin added, with a chuckle. "It's bad, they seem to think, so they don't let it grow, leaving a lot of bare ground as a result."

"They do have beautiful trees planted along their streets however. And almost everybody has his own garden, which he tends after finishing his day's work on the government farms. They can sell their own private produce in the free market, which is where to buy the best vegetables," according to Rev. Giffin, who added that goods sold in the free market as opposed to the government market are taxed.

The tour lasted three weeks, with 19 days spent in China. They flew to Peking from San Francisco via Honolulu and Tokyo. In China they visited Shanghai, Hangchow, Kweilin ("where the scenery is terrific with high mountains") and Canton.

The trip was arranged and controlled by the Chinese national travel service, which supplied them with young English speaking guides.

"But we had no feeling of being watched," Rev. Giffin said, "except once when I was visited by an old friend at our hotel. There we were allowed to sit alone in our hotel room and talk quietly. But this was against the wishes of the local guide who felt that the national guide who accompanied us all over should sit with us. The national guide didn't agree and so we had our privacy. Maybe the local guide who was unused to foreign visitors was uneasy, or maybe she just wanted to impress the guide from national headquarters. We don't know."

"But we had to be invited to go out to dinner," Rev. Giffin recalled. "One time we met a friend on the street and he said we were coming to dinner that night. But we hadn't been told yet. He knew it before we did."

The tour group travelled mostly by jet aircraft, though sometimes by train. The Giffins were impressed, especially by the fact that transportation operated punctually.

Chinese not mechanical

The Giffins and another pair were allowed to break away from the schedule to spend a few days in Foochow. This time they flew by propeller driven plane – the only time this occured. They were met by two shiny new Mercedes Benz cars, one of which broke down.

"Our hotel in Foochow was new with all the modern conveniences," Rev. Giffin recalled. "But that night the ceiling in the bathroom fell into our tub, apparently because of a pipe leak. The maid and carpenter cleaned up the mess and repaired the ceiling, but they didn't get at the cause and the leak continued.

"The people are skillful at artistic things. We saw some great work with lacquers and wood carving, but mostly their toilets are medieval.

"The people are not mechanical, they only put in oil when the machine breaks down."

"However, their top technicians are great. The people who are responsible for oil drilling or rocketry are top notch, for example. But the common plumber doesn't get much education and help," Rev. Giffin said.

Impressed by changes

This may be in part due to the 10 year hiatus in education caused during the Cultural Revolution, during the "rule of the Gang of Four," when young people from high school on up were sent off to work in agriculture and industry, Rev. and Mrs. Giffin think.

Now education is compulsory through high school.

"We were very much impressed by the changes," Mrs. Giffin said. "Things are much better than they were when we were here 34 years ago."

The Giffins noticed that the further south they went the more color they saw in clothing," because there are more goods available.

"The closer you get to the seat of power (Peking in the north) the more rigid things become," Rev. Giffin observed. "But in the south, in Canton, people can get TV shows

Old fashioned cookbook on sale

When Mary Tuhy came to Charlevoix from Czechoslovakia in 1907, she bought a cook book being sold locally called simply, "The Charlevoix Cook Book."

She used that cook book for many years and eventually it was handed down to her daughter, Doris Saunders. Mrs. Saunders also used the book for many years and is now sharing it with members and friends of the Charlevoix Historical Society.

The Society reproduced "The Charlevoix Cook Book" this fall, complete with fingerprint marks and frayed edges. Those who enjoy reading recipes that call for flour by the quart, butter the size of an egg, Indian meal, currant juice, and putting on ice to cool, will like this book, as will others who just like to cook.

Copies of "The Charlevoix Cook Book" may be bought on Friday afternoons from one to four o'clock at the Historical Society headquarters, 103 State Street, or from Mrs. Saunders, phone 547-6656, or "Bun" Kohler, phone 547-2963. Mrs. Saunders and Mrs. Kohler are in charge of sales of the book for the Historical Society's fund-raising efforts.

White Pine Stampede plans announced

What is described as "Michigan's Longest Cross-County Ski Event", the fifth annual White Pine Stampede, will take place on February 6.

The 50-kilometer event will end at Hilton Shanty Creek near Bellaire, and the shorter 20-kilometer race will end at Schuss Mountain. Both races will begin near the Mancelona airport.

This year, the Subaru automobile dealers of Michigan are sponsoring the event, and thre Subaru name will be added to the stampede. As a result of this sponsorship, it is expected that the number of participants will double.

"We're gearing up for around 750 participants," says Jack McKaig of the race committee; "Last year's races featured over 300 entrants.

The first Stampede, in 1977, attracted 90 entrants, 41 of whom completed the race.

Registration forms and additional information may be obtained by writing: Subaru White Pine Stampede, P. O. Box 497, Mancelona, Michigan 49659.

Charlevoix Yesterday

George W. Miller, above, was a pioneer Charlevoix merchant who apparently took a direct approach to things. He was a passenger on the "Champlain" when it caught fire off Fisherman's Island in June, 1887, and is said to have been the first person to jump into the water and thus be saved. A few days later he ran an advertisement in the Charlevoix Journal which read, "My losses in the late Champlain disaster has made it neccessary to collect at once every dollar due me. Those owing me will please call without delay and settle accounts." (Photo courtesy of Bob Miles.)

Chamber to sponsor program on new tax law

The staff of Dinwiddie and McGarry, P.C. will have a presentation and discussion on the Economic Recovery Tax Act of 1981, which will affect businesses, individuals and estates. This program will take place on Tuesday, December 1, 7:30 p.m. at the Grey Gables Inn.

The program, sponsored by the Charlevoix chamber of Commerce, is open to all Chamber members and their guests. For reservations, those interested are asked to call 547-2101. Coffee and dessert will be served.

OF DIAMONDS, OPALS AND KOALA BEARS
What does the cuddly koala bear have in common with two of the world's most coveted gemstones? They're all native to the continent down under, Australia.
Australia has long been known as the primary source for top quality opal. The gemstone possesses a unique phenomenon called play of color. The gem is composed of layer upon layer of silica plates which form a diffraction grating. Light entering the stone creates a display of many vibrant colors, such as red, blue, green, violet and orange. Australia is particularly famous for its dramatic black opal, which is actually a rich blue stone splashed with glorious colors.
Australia has never been known for diamonds – at least not before now. A recent diamond strike there, however, may become very important within the next few years. A large percentage of the diamonds found so far have been of industrial quality, but a significant amount of gem quality stones have also turned up. Diamonds don't need much of an introduction. They're universally loved and admired for their unique beauty and superior hardness.
And what does the koala bear think about all this mining activity? The mellow fellow just sits up in his eucalyptus tree, calmly munching leaves and wondering what these silly humans are up to now.
At Reusch Jewelry we hand pick our fine opals and diamonds, so we can show you some of exceptional quality. Sorry, we don't stock koala bears.

Whitley touring U.S.A. on two-wheeled trek

by FRAN MARTIN

Some people have sand in their shoes and never have the courage to do anything about it. Others admit it, accept the challenge and "take to the road".

Dennis Whitley, 20, son of Ivan and Elaine Whitley, falls in the latter category and is presently on his second "great adventure", traveling around the perimeter of the United States via a 10-speed bicycle.

What brought on the urge to see this country by this mode of travel? His first "great adventure" in 1979-80 was when he flew to the continent "down under", Australia, where he had planned to backpack through the country. The loss of his gear by the airlines, however, necessitated a change of plans and, rather than "scratch" the trip, he purchased an "Aussie pass", good for 60 days of travel, and toured the perimeter and through the middle of the continent by bus. He found the people so out-going and so willing to help and to tell him about their country that, upon his return home, he started planning a similar tour of this country.

But first there was a matter of finances. During the months that followed and working at whatever jobs he could find at a time when jobs were scarce and by living on a tight budget, he saved enough for at least a part of the trip.

By this time he had decided he'd rather travel at his own rate of speed so purchased a 10-speed bike. To get himself in physical shape for the trip, he either ran 10 miles every day or rode his bicycle to Petoskey and back after work every day.

When Spring came, he was ready and, on May 1, he departed on the trip that will take him to San Francisco for the winter.

Traveling an average of 80 miles a day with side trips to places of interest and a 2½ month lay-over in Louisiana to replenish his coffers, he was in Hobbs, N.M., recently where he spent several days with former Charlevoixans, Mel and Joan (LaRae) Holborn.

At that point, his travels had taken him through 12 states including Ohio, West Virginia, Virginia, the Carolinas, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, Texas and New Mexico.

The miles? He hasn't kept track according to his mother who supplied the information for this story.

By mid-August he had made it to New Orleans and was low on funds so sought a job in Houma, La., 60 miles west of New Orleans where he worked in a seafood plant that harvested and processed oysters.

In his telephone calls to his parents, he has recounted many of his experiences like riding through the rain for 10 straight hours while traveling through the Smokey Mountains; a side trip to Myrtle Beach where he met a girl from Mississippi and later making another side trip to the northern part of that state to visit her at her family's home; losing his wallet and traveling for two weeks without identification until his various ID cards including his driver's license and other important cards (luckily his money was elsewhere) could be replaced and purchasing four sets of tires thus far on the trip.

His mother said he never ceases to relate stories of the people he's met along the way...like the hospital administrator he met on a ferry crossing the river at New Orleans, who hearing of his venture, told Dennis he and his wife had returned earlier from a bicycle trip to California, took the day off and took Dennis on a tour of New Orleans; of fellow employees at the plant in Houma who made certain he saw all the places of interest within driving distance of the city and where he was given a trailer in which to stay during his employment; his return trip to New Orleans with a gallon of fresh oysters for the doctor and his wife and to thank them; his trip across the flat lands of Texas which he made in 12 days and which he described as a cyclist's dream because he could make such good time; the young couple who shared their day's catch of fish with him over an outdoor fire at a camp site; the farmers who allowed him to sleep in their hay mows if he didn't find a park and others who offered him a bed in their homes.

"He's in love with the American people. Every time he calls he uses another word to describe them. I guess 'fantastic' is the one he uses most often" his mother said of his experiences with those he's met along the way.

He hopes to arrive in San Francisco to join another Charlevoixan, Brian Wimmer, for the holidays which means he will be crossing the rest of New Mexico, Arizona, possibly through Nevada, depending on the route he takes, and north in California to San Francisco. There he plans to get a job for the winter months.

Present plans call for Brian to join him in the spring for the return trip to Michigan via Oregon, Washington and the northernmost tier of states.

His trip will end at 222 Sherman St. sometime in the summer of 1982, if present plans unfold, after he has traveled through probably half of the states within the boundaries of the continental United States.

In the meantime, his parents are keeping track of his travels on a map at his dad's carpet shop and his mother? "I pray a lot"....

His traveling gear includes his clothes including a down jacket for cold nights and the mountains, a one-man tent, sleeping bag, a one-burner Coleman stove and personal necessities. He also wears a helmet when traveling. The picture was taken at the Mel Holborn home in Hobbs, N.M.

Last Thursday marked the Grand Opening of the Michigan National Bank North Charlevoix branch office on Highway 31 just north of the city limits. To officially open the doors, bank officials cut a ribbon made of dollar bills which were subsequently donated to the CHIP Counseling Center in Charlevoix. On hand for the ribbon cutting were, left to right, Bill Day, vice-president of Michigan National Bank North, Florence Ellison, member of the CHIP Board of Directors, Stafford Smith, MNBN director, Gloria Kirk, MNBN employee, Larry Maddox, MNBN president, Oscar Stroud, Charlevoix Township supervisor, Rod Phillips, MNBN director, Jacquie Merta, executive director of the Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce, Bill Shoskey MNBN director and Roger Duros, MNBN assistant vice-president.

County board schedules hearings

The Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners has scheduled two public hearings for Wednesday, December 9.

The first hearing, to be held at 10 a.m. in the County Building Annex, will be for the purpose of obtaining written and oral comment from the public on the proposed uses of revenue sharing funds in the 1982 budget.

All interested groups, as well as private citizens, are encouraged to attend the hearing and to give written and oral comments and suggestions regarding the use of revenue sharing funds during the coming year. Those wishing to speak at the meeting should contact the Charlevoix County Clerk at 547-9272 to be placed on the agenda.

Revenue sharing funds on hand and anticipated during 1982 add up to $445,982.

The second public hearing on December 9 is scheduled for 2 p.m. in the County Building Annex. It is called for the purpose of considering the 1982 county budget. A copy of the budget will be available for public inspection at that time.

Planning Dept. sets workshop

The County Planning Department is sponsoring a workshop for townships and city zoning administrators on Wednesday, December 16, at 7 p.m. in the meeting room of the Boyne City City Hall.

Zoning problems, especially as they relate to administrators will be discussed.

Winners of the Charlevoix Public Library's Thanksgiving coloring contest were, front row left to right, Becca Chamberlain in the preschool category; Braytoo Pointner, kindergarten-first grade and Joshua Martin, second and third grades. In back are overall winner Joey Miller and David Salmonson, fourth and fifth grades.

Sleepy Hollow Preserve added to Conservancy

Another piece of Charlevoix County will remain in its natural state "in perpetuity" as the result of a gift of land to the Little Traverse Conservancy.

Fifty-five acres in Eveline Township, located between the South Arm of Lake Charlevoix and M.-66 and just north of Phelps Road, were the gift of an anonymous donor.

The tract is described as being a "diverse hardwood-conifer forest...particularly valuable in that it helps maintain the water quality of Lake Charlevoix. A spring-fed stream meanders through the thick woods before flowing into the lake. The rich soils bordering the stream would release polluting nutrients into the stream and lake if disturbed by construction or other activities."

Because the tract lies behind one row of houses on the lake, it could have become a "funnel" development, concentrating excessive pressures on the lake.

Called the Sleepy Hollow Preserve, the area is abundant with yellow lady's slippers, ferns, and jack-in-the-pulpits. A clearing of aspen, sumac, and raspberries provides food for songbirds, deer, and other wildlife.

The Sleepy Hollow Preserve is located seven miles south kof Charlevoix. It can be reached by driving south on M-66 almost to Phelps Road. A winding dirt trail enters the preserve just to the left (north) of Phelps Road.

Knight on the Town

Towers of power

by Dave Knight

Somewhere up there, in that great yacht basin in the sky, the Charlevoix oldtimers are probably having a chuckle or two over the news that a $150,000 emergency warning system, complete with sirens and public address speakers, is to be built within the five-mile radius of Big Rock Point.

They are probably making some friendly wagers up there that "Sarah", the faithful operator down at the phone company years ago, could spread important news, good or bad, faster than any new-fangled system that is only going to scare the chickens once a month.

Times have changed since then, of course. "Sarah" has been replaced by a $2.6 million machine that can handle 50,000 calls an hour - but can't tell you where next week's church circle meeting is. Also, the worst catastrophy that could happen back then was probably a tornado and any darn fool who didn't know enough to head for the cellar when the sky got black deserved a good lesson anyway.

Small cottmunities are noted for the speed with which news can be spread. The grapevine has always been the fastest means though perhaps not the most accurate. By the fifth or sixth retelling, the facts start to bend a bit.

But the community really is not that small any more; there are more people and they are more spread out. It's pretty hard for someone in town to yell over the back fence to somebody living out on Pine Point.

The most important difference between today and the "good old days" is the nature of the emergency we're talking about. Nobody really knows exactly what would happen in the case of a large scale nuclear emergency because it has never actually happened. We know it could happen, though the probability is a matter of debate, and we know it has come close to happening in at least one instance at Three Mile Island.

Whatever the chances, the Nuclear Regulatory Commission has decided we must prepare for the worst.

And that preparation means a warning system capable of booming siren wails and vocal instructions to every hill and dale within five miles of Big Rock Point.

To some, perhaps, the system will provide reassurance and be welcomed.

To others, it will represent typical governmental overreaction and a waste of money.

To those with the most vivid imaginations, these monolithic towers are right out of the prophecies of George Orwell; Big Brother can now speak to us at his whim. How long will it be until he can see and hear us, too?

Clockwise

This year, snow can wait

by Bob Clock

THERE WAS a time when a snowless November such as we have enjoyed this year would have given me fits.

But with the cost of natural gas at an all-time high, a delay in the arrival of winter weather is like money in the bank.

Of course, not all Michiganders are so fortunate. Last week's storm struck just south of Charlevoix and extended into the Detroit area. By the weekend, most of the state was white, with the exception of the tip of the Lower Peninsula and parts of the Upper Peninsula.

This charmed existence won't last forever, I know. There will come a morning when we'll awaken to the sound of snowplows in the streets. But there's nothing to keep us from enjoying these rare days to their fullest. We probably won't have another winter like 1981-'82 until sometime in the 2000's.

NATURALLY, I sympathize with ski resort operators and other segments of the local economy which need a spate of rotten weather to get things moving. But their day will come, all too soon.

SPEAKING OF weather and business, restaurateur Ray Bay in Petoskey tells me he has his best winter days during howling snowstorms. He claims there's something about a good nor'wester that drives people out of their homes and down to Bay's Restaurant on Mitchell Street for lunch.

Resort area businessmen have known for years, of course, that they wait on more big spenders on rainy days than fair days, ostensibly because on fair days everyone plays tennis, swims, golfs or does whatever he likes to do in the sun. On rainy days there is no place to head but downtown.

But Bay is the only businessman I know who looks upon blizzards as a stimulous to increased sales. I, for one, would just as soon sit home next to the stove while a storm is in progress outside.

JIMMY WOODWARD of Charlevoix is incensed — as we all should be — about the mindless vandalism to cars that takes place on a regular basis around town.

You read about it in the paper. An antenna is broken off so-and-so's car. Somebody else has a window busted with a rock. Tires are slashed on another car.

Every incident means that somebody has to go through the hassle of getting estimates on repairing the damage (if the damage is covered by insurance) and then lose the use of his car (or a day or more while the damage is repaired.

Oftentimes the cost of repairs comes in just under the deductible, so the vehicle owner must pay the full shot.

The problem is tied to a lack of respect for private property — which should be taught in the home but apparently isn't in many cases.

I have no solution to the problem. The police are doing all they can with a tight budget. And there doesn't appear to be much point in appealing to the vandals' sense of decency through the pages of a weekly newspaper. If they had any decency at all, they wouldn't be vandals.

But if you have any ideas on how to remedy the situation, pass them along to Jimmy Woodward or me. Maybe if the whole community gets down on vandals, they'll disappear into the woodwork.

Kelly responds to Consumers Power letter campaign

Dear Editor:

In late October, Consumers Power Company began a letters to the editor campaign which can only be described as a major act of deception. Those letters, which you may have seen, appear to be written by local residents who happen to be Consumers Power employees. Actually they were written by Consumers Power. In fact, identical letters have appeared in at least 36 newspapers, all leaving the impression that a local resident was dissatisfied with my position regarding construction of the Midland nuclear electric generating plant and attacking me for my legal efforts to prevent the continued sale of securities to finance the construction of that plant.

The Consumers Power letter argues that construction of the Midland plant creates jobs in Michigan; that it results in additional money being spent in the state; and that any and every construction project is good for the state's economy.

If one followed Consumers Power's "reasoning" to its logical conclusion, the solution to Michigan's economic and unemployment problems become simple–state government, like Michigan's utilities, should embark on a multi-billion dollar construction program; and never mind that taxpayers or ratepayers who cannot afford it will ultimately have to pay for it, and never mind that taxes and rates will be pushed up so high that no business would want to locate or expand in Michigan.

The basic facts concerning Consumers Power's Midland nuclear plant construction program are as follows:

1. Consumers Power originally estimated that the Midland plant would be completed in 1974 at a cost of $256 million. Consumers Power now estimates that the plant will be completed in 1983 at a cost of $3.1 billion, nine years late and 12 times the original cost estimate.

2. If there are no further cost escalations, power from the Midland plant will cost 15 cents per kilowatt hour (kwh) delivered to customers, 3½ times as much as the present cost of electricity.

3. The Midland plant will add about $600 million per year to Consumers Power's fixed costs, thereby increasing the electric rates of Consumers' one million customers by an average of about $600 per customer per year.

4. Consumers Power's rates to industrial customers are already 31 percent above average of all Midwestern investor-owned utilities. In August, the manager of the Goodyear Tire & Rubber plant in Jackson, where Consumers Power is headquarter, publicly stated that Consumers Power's electric rates were 28 percent higher than the average paid by the other seven Goodyear plants throughout the United States, and that if these costs, and others, could not be reduced, the Jackson plant might have to close at a loss of 1500 jobs.

5. Consumers Power already has one large nuclear generating plant, the Palisades plant at South Haven. This plant has the worst operating record of any nuclear generating plant in the United States, except the Three-Mile Island plants in Pennsylvania that experienced the celebrated accident. The Palisades plant has operated less than 40 percent of the time during its nine-year life. In November, 1978, the U.S. Nuclear Regulatory Commission (NRC) levied a fine of $460,000 upon Consumers for safety violations at the Palisades plant, the highest such fine in U.S. history. Thus, Consumers Power has demonstrated that it is incapable of constructing and operating a nuclear generating plant in a safe and satisfactory manner.

During the past three years, scores of nuclear generating plant construction projects have been cancelled or indefinitely deferred throughout the United States, due to runaway costs and lack of need for the plants. For example, within the last few weeks, the State of Washington Public Power Agency voted to halt construction on "WHOOPS" nuclear plants Nos. 4 and 5, even though $2.3 billion had already been spent on these plants. A few weeks before that, Northern Indiana Public Service Commission (NIPSCo) permanently cancelled its Bailly nuclear plant on Lake Michigan, although more than $300 million had already been spent.

In Conclusion, the letter-writing campaign of Consumers Power Company makes it clear that the utility's management views the Midland nuclear construction project as a "make work" program, with its ratepayers playing Santa Claus by providing the billions of dollars necessary to carry it on. Unfortunately, Santa Claus is really you and me and the other citizens and businesses in Consumers Power's territory.

Letters: EJ school system rejecting Indian parent ideas?

Dear Editor:

Alien space ships arrive in great numbers. Their journey has been long. They are tired and hungry. Surprisingly they encounter beings not unlike themselves. "So these are Earth people," the aliens think. "Their skin is a different color and the clothing is unusual. They speak a foreign language but seem friendly, though a little frightened."

The Earth people befriend the Aliens and treat them as honored guests. They feed and shelter them. More and more Aliens arrive and make themselves at home. Soon it is evident that there is'nt enough room, so the Aliens say, "This is now our land because we are a greater number and have superior intelligence. Give us your homes and move on, Earth men!"

"But how will we live without jobs or money?" they reply, "Go or we will kill you! demand the Alien.

The proud Earth men fight to keep what is theirs but they cannot win against the mighty foe. The victorious Aliens take possession of Earth. "You may have this small parcel of land," they say. "It is of little use to us and is far away, but you must no longer live like savages. You must give up your way of life and live the right way, as we do. We know what is best for you because we are superior."

History tells us this happened in 1492. the ramifications are still being felt in 1981.

The Federal Government has given monies to the East Jordan Public School System, under the Indian Education Act, to use for the "Special Educational Needs" of the Indian students. This Grant is called, Title IV, part A. The Rules and Regulations call for a Parent Committee to assess needs; form goals and objectives from this needs and implement and evlauate the overall resulting program.

Our Parent Committee has diligently performed it's duties but the East Jordan Public School System is saying to us, "We will listen to your ideas but you really do not know what is best for your children. We are well education and are great in number, so you just give up your wishes. WE ARE SUPERIOR!"

WE HAVE FOUGHT TO KEEP WHAT IS OURS BUT CONNOT WIN AGAINST THE MIGHT FOE.

Church of the Nazarene welcomes Rev. James Raum

by PEG OHLE

James Raum is the new pastor of the Charlevoix Church of the Nazarene. This week the Courier talks with him about past experiences and his plans for the future.

COURIER: Where was your last pastorate?
RAUM: In Lakeview, Oregon. We started the Church of the Nazarene there.
COURIER: How did that come about?
RAUM: The District Superintendent of the Church came to talk at the Nazarene Bible College f was attending in Colorado Springs. He asked If any of us would go out there to Oregon and build a church from the ground up as mentioned in the New Testament. My wife and f decided to accept the call. When we arrived there, we found six people who wanted a church. We started knocking on doors and introducing ourselves. The church had 49 members when we left after two and a half years. We met in a day care building on Sunday mornings and evenings and Wednesdays. Now the church has over $11,000 in the bank toward putting up a building when the time comes.
COURIER: The church obviously couldn't support you and your family. How did you live?
RAUM: My wife worked as a day care teacher and I was a school bus driver. We just found that the Lord would provide.
COURIER: Was that your first pastorate?
RAUM: No. Before returning to Bible College to get my degree, I had a church in Belle Glade, Florida. The Nazarene Bible College is designed for people over 30. I was 30 when f quit running from God – I had been called when I was eight. I spent three years at the Bible College, going to school mornings and evenings and working full time as well.
COURIER: What had you been doing before you decided to enter the ministry?
RAUM: I was in the Air Force for ten years – worked with dogs as a sentry. I also was a truck driver and a construction worker and a policeman. I just didn't want to answer that call to the ministry. I waited 30 years.
COURIER: Have these various experiences been helpful to you in your church work?
RAUM: Yes. It makes a difference if you have experiences to draw upon in sermons.
COURIER: Isn't the Church of the Nazarene a fairly new denomination?
RAUM: Yes, it really branched off from the Methodist Church. It has a holiness doctrine and is fundalmentalist in nature.
COURIER: We were just looking at the Charlevoix Church directory in the Courier. Aren't there a lot of churches for a city this size?
RAUM: It's not the number of churches, it'a the number of unsaved people. You know there are a lot of them.
COURIER: How do you find the unsaved?
RAUM: I go about knocking on doors looking for them. f don't want to take people from other churches because we are all working toward the same thing, but when I find someone who has no church affiliation, I try to get him to come to our church.
COURIER: Are there other Nazarene churches in the area?
RAUM: Yes, in Boyne City and Alanson.
COURIER: Where did you grow up?
RAUM: In Owosso. I graduated from higb school there.
COURIER: Tell us about your family.
RAUM: My wife, Louise, and I have two daughters. Michelle is a junior in high school and Jamie is a freshman. They love school and have been made to feel right at home. We all love Charlevoix.

Elementary School to hold Book Fair

by ANNE KELLY

What is a Book Fair? Ask children at the elementary school and they will tell you – it's fun! Ask teachers and parents and they'll add that it's a great selection of reading material for children from primary to intermediate to the upper grades. Ask Betty Potter, school librarian, and she will probably tell you that it's an event that takes a great deal of planning and preparation but is well worth the effort for parents and children alike. I suppose you could call a Book Fair a "mini-book mart."

Sponsored by Mrs. Potter and the Parent's Advisory Council, the Book Fair is supplied by E.R.S. (Educational Reading Services). Cartons of books are shipped to the school and are displayed, usually by age level, for browsing and selection. Parent volunteers assist the librarian in the setting up of the display and subsequent book sales. Profits are earmarked for library supplies.

The fun comes when children are allowed to browse through the books and fill out a "wish list" for parents. Parents, who are in the building for conferences during the days of the fair, are free to purchase or order selections if they wish, or merely survey the lot for future reference.

Hopefully the Book Fair, having undergone its second successful year will be an annual event.

Veterans Day was observed Charlevoix V.F.W. Post No 1153 and its Auxiliary with a dinner meeting at the post home.

Guest speakers at the meeting were Larry Stewart of Atlanta, 13th District Commander and Erwin Lanzer of Kalkaska, 13th District Senior Vice Commander.

Cmdr. Stewart spoke on the veterans organizations and what they were doing in behalf of all veterans and on the increasing membership in the V.F.W. He added that he hoped more Korean and Viet Nam veterans would join the service organization which is dedicated to assisting veterans and their families in any way possible. The motto of the organization is "Honor the dead by helping the living". He said that this is the aim of the organization.

The Auxiliary also spends may hours in service and in making needed items for veterans hospitals.

Both groups also enjoy many social activities.

Chaplain Joseph Seldel offered a prayer of hope for peace in the near future and for the safety of all those serving in the armed forces. He also remembered those who sacrificed their lives for their great country.

Steven Wilson, a Viet Nam Veteran, was comed as a member.

Membership in the V.F.W. is open to all veterans of any foreign war. It was recently announced that membership in the Auxiliary had been extended to include foster mothers, foster sisters or foster daughters of veterans. Previous membership was for mothers, wives, daughters, sisters and service women.

Plans were also made for the joint Christmas party scheduled for 1 p.m. Sunday, Dec. 13, at the post home. A pot-luck dinner will be followed by a visit from Santa. A gift exchange for men and women will be held with gifts limited to $2.00. All members of the V.F.W. and Auxiliary and their families and prospective members are urged to attend. Everyone is asked to bring a dish to pass and their own table service.

Mrs. Albert Russell is in charge of the dinner party.

BMX club starts planning for next year

The Charlevoix BMX Association met Tuesday, November 10 to plan for the new year. One action taken at the meeting was a name change for the group from Charlevoix BMX Association to Charlevoix Township BMX Association. This was done to recognize the township as the place for area BMX bikers to race.

The club expressed thanks to the township for constructing what is believed to be one of the best BMX tracks in the state.

The club also thanked all BMX sponsors for 1981 and expressed hope that the same sponsors can be secured for 1982.

With a heavy agenda of tasks to be accomplished next year, committee chairpersons were named at Tuesday's meeting. Committee responsibilities will include sponsor solicitation, schedule drafting, publicity and rider recruitment.

The 1982 racing schedule is tentatively set to begin on Saturday, May 1, 1982 with the first race of the season. Races will then he held on approximately every third Saturday through the summer and hopefully into October.

Plans are now being made for a double point race to held over Venetian Weekend.

Anyone with a son or daughter interested in BMX racing is asked to call Dan Miller at 547-2968. New riders are being sought from the area surrounding Lake Charlevoix including Boyne City and East Jordan. Assistance is also being sought from parents, young adults and civic organizations.

Also being compiled for future publication is a history of BMX racing.

ORDINANCE NO. 393

THE CITY OF CHARLEVOIX ORDAINS that Article VI, entitled Off-Street Parking and Loading Space Requirements, Section 5.212 (B) be amended by the addition of the following provision:

"Where such property owner located in the Central Business District is unable to provide additional parking space on the owner's premises, or provide such required off street parking spaces at a location other than on the owner's premises, because of physical limitations on the owner's premises or unavailability of such off-premise locations, then and in that event, the City Council may allow such property owner to pay into the Charlevoix Parking Fund not less than Two Thousand ($2,000.00) Dollars for each parking space otherwise required."

The purpose of this Amendment is to provide the Charlevoix City Council with authorization to waive certain off-street parking and loading space requirements.

TEACHER FEATURE

Cara Hochhalter: A world of experiences to offer

Cara Hochhalter

by ANNE KELLY

It might surprise you to know that a teacher by the name of Cara Hochhalter is the "senora" with expertise in "Espanol" at the elementary school. Cara's fifth grade classes are frequently serenaded by Spanish folk songs accompanied on the guitar, and a little elementary Spanish thrown in here and there for their enrichment pleasure. For example, her homeroom class takes the lunch count by uno, dos and tres. The Program for the Academically Talented will find Mrs. Hochhalter teaching a two week section in beginning Spanish.

Her story is just one more of the interesting backgrounds of our Charlevoix teachers, which bring students variety and exposure beyond the three R's.

A graduate of the University of Michigan in Elementary Education, Cara decided to accept, with the usual dose of apprehension about going alone to a different country, a teaching position in Bucaramanga, Columbia that year. Employed by the U.S. Information Service, she taught English to young students and adults in the English Language Center based there. It was in Colombia, that Cara was to meet her future husband, Jeff, who was serving with the Peace Corps at that time.

Returning to the States, Cara was a substitute teacher in Albion, Mich. for one semester before embarking on one more excursion. Before settling down in northern Michigan, where Cara had previously summered, she and Jeff traveled extensively in Europe for five months.

Cara joined the elementary staff in 1976, beginning as a teacher's aide in the school's learning center. She has spent 2 1-2 years teaching fifth grade and loving it.

"It's rewarding," Cara explains, "to teach this age level. The kids are able to discuss current events, literature and history." And Cara, in turn, has the opportunity to share with her students her knowledge of the other countries she has visited, especially Colombia.

A successful and enjoyable teaching technique Cara currently employs in her language arts classes, is a method of expanding upon a story read in their literature text. After the story is read, students are rotated by small groups among three "stations" over a period of three days. At one station they involve themselves with a bit of research on the subject matter presented in their story and find magazine articles which expand their knowledge of that subject. At another station, they may do a related kreative writing exercise. At the last station, reading skills are reinforced. The method keeps students busy and hopefully inspires them to read beyond class assignments.

In sharing her ideas, Cara commented that as a teacher she finds that "the kids teach her a lot." But I suspect that the students are learning "a lot" from a teacher who takes the time to listen, care about and share with her class.

City of Charlevoix Council Minutes

November 16, 1981
8:00 P.M.

The Common Council of the City of Charlevoix met on the above date and time with Mayor Supernaw presiding.

Present: Councilmembers Roloff, Wood, Muma, Block, Porter, and Timms.
Absent: None.

The minutes of the October 26, 1981, Special Council meeting were approved as presented in writing and as recorded in the Council Minutes Book.

The City Clerk advised Council that the City Manager had asked for the minutes of the November 2, 1981, Regular Meeting to be amended to include a statement made by John Healy of Garb-Ko, Inc. that the overhang on the face of their proposed Seven-Eleven store would have wood shak a shingles and that the sign on the overhang would conform to the Planning Commission recommendations, i.e., it would have a single "7" on it without the usual accompanying signs on either side. Councilman Porter stated that he thought the motion on November 2, 1981, regarding approval of the Garb-Ko site plan was adequate and excluded approval of all signs at that time. Councilwoman Roloff stated that, in her belief, the sign on the face of the building was approved as part of the site plan with only the standing sign to be reviewed at a later date. Mayor Supernaw polled the Councilmembers for their opinion regarding the intent of the motion with four of the six Councilmembers agreeing that the motion included approval of the sign on the building. Mayor Supernaw advised the City Clerk that the motion of November 2, 1981, regarding approval of a site plan for Garb-Ko, Inc., included approval of a sign on the face of their proposed building, said sign to conform to the recommendations of the Planning Commission and as agreed to by John Healy of Garb-Ko, Inc. at the November 2, 1981, Council meeting. The minutes of the November 2, 1981 were approved as clarified.

Council adjourned to the Board of Appeals.

Following the Board of Appeals meeting roll call of the Council was again taken with all members being present.

The City Manager outlined six alternatives to be considered for housing City fire-fighting equipment. Council and members of the General Public present discussed the pros and cons of each alternative with some reservations being voiced about using the former Erber building for this purpose as it was originally purchased for parking purposes.

Moved by Councilman Wood and supported by Councilman Timms to approve the storing of three City Fire Dept. vehicles in the City-owned building on Clinton St. (formerly the Erber bldg.) and to insulate the ceiling, the rear interior wall, and the side interior wall of the room accessible from Clinton St. for the purpose and to move an existing gas fired overhead heater into another part of the building at a total annual cost of approximately $1500 for capital outlay and operation.

Motion was adopted by the following yea and nay vote.

Yea: Councilmembers Roloff, Wood, Muma, Block, and Timms. Nays: Councilman Porter Absent: None.

Moved by Councilman Timms and supported by Councilman Wood that Walter Hufford be appointed to complete the unexpired term of Joe Morris on the City Planning Commission, effective January 1, 1982.

Motion was adopted by the following yea and nay vote.

Yea: Councilmembers Roloff, Wood, Muma, Block, Porter, and Timms. Nays: None. Absent: None.

Mayor Supernaw read the following results of the November 3, 1981 City General Election:

Kenneth A. Staley having received a sufficient number of votes is elected Mayor.

Deanne Balch having received a sufficient number of votes is elected City Clerk.

Jeffrey L. Porter having received a sufficient number of votes is elected 1st Ward Councilmember.

Robert N. Timms having received a sufficient number of votes is elected 2nd Ward Councilmember.

Joseph G. Morris, Jr. having received a sufficient number of votes is elected 3rd Ward Councilmember.

An Amendment to the City Charter extending the Mayor's term of office to two years, effective with the term commencing January 1, 1983, was passed.

A Millage Proposition for one mill to be used for improvements to the City sewer system was passed.

Councilmembers and members of the General Public present discussed a proposed amendment to the City Zoning Ordinance which would allow Council to permit owners in the Central Business District to pay into a City Parking Fund if they are unable to provide required parking. Those opposed to the plan were generally of the opinion that the proposed amendment would be a deterrent to growth in the city.

The following Amendment to the City Zoning Ordinance was offered and moved for its support by Councilman Porter and supported by Councilman Timms.

ORDINANCE NO. 393

THE CITY OF CHARLEVOIX ORDAINS that Article VI, entitled Off-Street Parking and Loading Space Requirements, Section 5.212 (B) be amended by the addition of the following provision:

"Where such property owner located in the Central Business District is unable to provide additional parking space on the owner's premises, or provide such required off-street parking spaces at a location other than on the owner's premises, because of physical limitations on the owner's premises or unavailability of such off-premise locations, then and in that event, the City Council may allow such property owner to pay into the Charlevoix Parking Fund not less than Two Thousand ($2,000.00) Dollars for each parking space otherwise required."

The purpose of this Amendment is to provide the Charlevoix City Council with authorization to waive certain off-street parking and loading space requirements.

Ordinance was adopted by the following yea and nay vote:

Yea: Councilmembers Roloff, Porter, Timms, and Mayor Supernaw. Nays: Councilmembers Wood, Muma, and Block. Absent: None.

A handmade quilt, different squares embroidered by employees of Charlevoix Area Hospital, will be a main feature at the hospital employee's annual Salad Luncheon and Bake Sale, December 9th at the Charlevoix American Legion hall. Here, the event's organizers Cindy Ruis, Pat Sokolowski and Mary Teryberry display the quilt.

The annual event's proceeds are given by the employees to the hospital for the purchase of important medical equipment.

This year there will be two raffles – one for the quilt, with raffle tickets $1 each, and a second for a Raggedy Ann and Raggedy Andy, made by Mary Ann Cox, RN and Esther Carey, RN and an afghan blanket made by Winifred Green, whose two daughters work at the hospital. All Savers Certificate

Get up to $2,000.00 Tax-Free Interest at Family Federal Savings.

These new one year certificates will allow you to exclude the interest from your State of Michigan and federal income tax—up to $2,000.00 on a joint return and $1,000.00 on an individual return. The minimum deposit required on the All-Savers Certificate is $500.00. The interest rate will be 70% of the average investment yield for 52-week U.S. Treasury Bills. The Treasury Bill rate changes every fourth Thursday, and the All-Savers Certificate rate changes on the next Monday following the fourth Thursday. This account is insured to $100,000.00 by the FSLIC.

It's what's left after taxes that counts.

An exact comparison of the tax-free interest rate on All-Savers Certificates with the rate of return on taxable investments, of course, depends upon an individual's complete income tax situation. You may wish to consult your tax advisor for this purpose. However, in general terms it can be said that an All-Savers Certificate paying 10% could have an equivalent taxable rate of as much as 20% for a taxpayer in the 50% tax bracket.

Federal regulations require a substantial interest penalty and loss of interest exclusion in the event of early withdrawal broadcast from Hong Kong and there is a definite spirit of upward mobility among them. Now new factories are being built beyond the range of Hong Kong TV to avoid its influence."

The Giffins were surprised by the interest in church. There is no ban against religion, they found.

"Christianity has as much chance as Confucianism," Rev. Giffin said. "Attendance at Christian churches is double their capacity. Young people are thronging around church. They are in search of answers."

There are only two kinds of Christianity being taught in China today, however, the Giffins pointed out: Roman Catholicism and non-sectarian Protestantism.

Both are indigenous, according to the Giffins. The Catholics broke away from Rome even before "The Liberation" as the communist take over is called. The Protestants have been indigenous since "The Liberation" and want no help from the outside, "only our prayers."

They are in the process of printing their own Bibles now and Protestant ministers are being educated and will be ordained at the Nanking Theological Seminary.

Drug raid sentences handed down

by PEG OHLE

Twelve Charlevoix residents were among 34 sentenced last week on drug charges resulting from raids conducted throughout the County on August 20.

Circuit Court Judge Martin Breighner handed down decisions that included jail sentences, fines, probation, drug education programs, community service programs to be administered through the Probation Department, and for some of the younger offenders, Youthful Trainee Status, which will wipe the charges from their records if they complete other phases of their sentences.

Most of the original charges resulting from the raids were "manufacture and delivery of a controlled substance".

The Charlevoix residents, with the exception of one, will be required to participate in the drug education program and meet other sentencing requirements as follows:

Charles L. Prevo, 24, (marijuana), one year delayed sentence and $250 fine.

Charles Dorman Robinson, 26, (marijuana) one year's probation, 120 hours of community service, and $1,000 fine.

County board will be cut to six following commission decision

by PEG OHLE

Ever since 1968 when the "one man, one vote" rule for representation in Michigan went into effect, there have been 15 men (briefly 14 men and one woman) on the Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners.

Beginning January 1, 1983, there will be six men and-or women. This change in number of County Commissioners will be brought about by last week's decision of the County Apportionment Commission to divide the County into six Districts, each sending a representative to the County Board.

The Commission was meeting as required by law after the release of 1980 census figures.

Faced again with the "one man, one vote" mandate, a shift in County population, a ruling that there must be as little variance in size of Districts as possible, and a choice of any number from a minimum of five to a maximum of 15, members of the Apportionment Commission went to a computer and came op with six Districts.

County Prosecutor Scott Beatty, who chaired the Commission, repeatedly stressed the legal necessity of making the Districts as near in size as humanly possible, taking into consideration County geography and population centers. At an earlier meeting, the Commission had heard from several County residents who requested a cut in the number of County Commissioners to create a "less costly, more efficient, and more accountable" Board, but in the end it was the "one man, one vote" mandate that was the overriding consideration.

Beatty presented the six-District plan, with a variance (:L08) between the largest and smallest District, to other members of the Commission. Republican County Chairman Don Hufford had worked out a nine-District plan with a variance of 1:L7, but he and other members of the Commission – County Clerk Jane Brannon, County Treasurer Anah Potter, and Democrat County Chairman Fritz Allard – finally agreed that the six-District plan best met all the legal criteria.

Of special interest to Charlevoix residents is the fact that the City will become one District and will have only one seat on the County Board of Commissioners. Presently, the City is divided into three Districts with three representatives. The 1980 population of the City is 3,296.

Charlevoix Township will become part of a District including the western part of Eveline Township (west of Peninsula Road), Marion Township, Norwood Township, St. James Township, and Peaine Township. Total population of this District is 3,166.

On the north side of Lake Charlevoix, Hayes, Bay, Evangeline, and Melrose Townships will form another District with a population of 3,358.

Boyne City will also become one District with only one representative on the Board of Commissioners instead of the present three. The population of Boyne City is 3,348.

Further east in the County, Chandler, Hudson, Boyne Valley, and Wilson Townships, along with the part of Eveline Township east of Peninsula Road, will form a District with a population of 3,166.

South Arm Township and the City of East Jordan will form another District. East Jordan now has two Districts and South Arm is a separate District. The population of this new District is 3,422.

Between now and next August's primaries, the City of Charlevoix' three members on the Board of Commissioners – I. Lee Moerland, Don Meggison, and Oscar Ward – will have to decide if they want to run against each other and any other candidates for the one City seat on the Board of Commissioners.

Nearby township representatives on the Board will also have to realign themselves. John Haggard, who lives in Charlevoix Township and represents both Charlevoix and Hayes Townships on the County Board, will have to decide if he wants to run against Clyde Cunningham, who now represents Marion, Norwood, St. James, and Peaine Townships, and any other candidates. However, Haggard has announced his candidacy for the State senate.

Elsewhere, the District including Hayes, Bay, Evangeline, and Melrose will be up for grabs, since Ira L. Davis, who now represents Bay and Evangeline Townships is not expected to run for re-election. This leaves only one incumbent, Larry Matthew of Melrose Township, who also represents Chandler Township.

Ralph Harmon, who lives in Boyne Valley Township and represednts Boyne Valley and Hudson Townships, will find himself in the same District as Martin Biegnowski, who lives in Wilson Township and represents Wilson and Eveline Townships.

The three Boyne City Commissioners – Oral Sutliff, Marvin Loding, and Casimir Toton – will be faced with the same decisions as the City of Charlevoix Commissioners.

In East Jordan, Commissioners Keith Annear and Tom Breakey could be opposed by Commissioner Delbert Ingalls of South Arm Township in the new District lineup.

County board will be cut to six following commission decision

Local students fare well in State Assessment Tests

By FRAN MARTIN

Charlevoix students scored well in the State Assessment Tests administered in September to fourth, seventh and tenth grade students it has been announced.

Each year shortly after school opens students in these grades throughout the state are tested on reading and math.

The school district summary report, it was explained, presents the percentage of students in each of four catagories of achievement. Catagory IV (the highest) contains the percentage of students who attained approximately 75 percent or more of the objectives; Catsgory III, the percentage of students who attained roughly 50 to 75 percent of the objectives; Catsgory II, the percentage of students who attained 25 to 50 percent of the objectives and Catagory I, 25 percent or less of the objectives.

Only catsgories to show a decrease over the 1980 percentages were in seventh grade reading and tenth grade math.

In seventh grade reading, those not in the top percentile were in the next catagory which means these people might have missed only one question.

The tenth grade math figures were down. In explaining this, it was pointed out that in the ninth grade, students can take general math or branch out into algebra. Thus, when they are in the tenth grade they have not had math, as such, for more than a year and, as a result, might be a little less sharp.

Added to this the tests are given early in the school year when there has been little time for review of work after a long summer vacation. It must also be noted that the results reflect the ability of an entire class regardless of each student's ability.

On the whole, it was felt the Charlevoix students did well on the tests. The results follow:

Fourth Grade

Catagory	Math 1981	Math 1980	Reading 1981	Reading 1980
IV	83.5	73.7	61.4	77.9
III	13.4	21.2	10.3	12.1
II	3.1	5.1	7.2	7.1
I	0.0	0.0	1.0	3.0

Sixth Grade

	Math 1981	Math 1980	Reading 1981	Reading 1980
IV	84.6	83.2	84.6	86.9
III	9.6	9.3	11.9	5.6
II	5.6	6.5	1.4	5.6
I	0.0	0.9	2.1	1.9

Tenth Grade

	Math 1981	Math 1980	Reading 1981	Reading 1980
IV	61.0	63.6	84.6	76.5
III	30.9	22.7	14.6	17.4
II	6.1	11.4	0.6	5.3
I	0.0	2.3	0.0	0.6

Attention is called to those students who fall in Catagory III. It is felt that with a little more effort on their part they could have been in the top catagory. The student is given only three questions. Missing one will drop the student into the next lower catagory. This, added to the fact that the students are given the test with little or no review, accounts for the fact that the scores are as they are.

Parents may expect their students test results to arrive in homes soon. If there are questions regading the results, parents are urged to contact the principal or counselor in the school in which the student is enrolled.

OFFERING THANKS for their many blessings last week were the students of St. Mary's School who each year present gifts of food at a special pre-Thanksgiving Mass held at St. Mary's Church. The children then also participate in the Mass with readings and songs.

Saturday meeting to feature Strawbridge on master plan progress

Saturday's meeting, scheduled for 9 a.m. at Leutheuser's Restaurant, will be the first of a series of monthly KCB breakfast meetings featuring local governmental officials.

Speakers in the coming months will include Charlevoix City Manager Robert Hunt and Mayor-elect Kenneth Staley.

EARN 15% INTEREST IN ADVANCE*

By pre-signing now for a 1982 Family Federal IRA or Keogh account.

Earn interest now, when you need it most.
With Christmas just around the corner, everyone could use a little extra spending money. Now Family Federal Savings can help you get that extra spending money by paying you interest in advance when you pre-sign for a 1982 IRA or Keogh account. When you pre-sign, Family Federal Savings will put your deposit into a high-interest account earning 15% interest. You'll receive the interest in advance — when you open the account. Then, on January 1, Family Federal will automatically transfer the funds into a 1982 IRA or Keogh account.

Good reasons to open an IRA or Keogh account:
- The money in your IRA or Keogh account is sheltered from current income taxes. The money is taxed as it's withdrawn after retirement — when you'll probably be in a lower tax bracket.
- IRA and Keogh accounts are a safe way to save for your retirement. Each account is insured to $100,000 by the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation.

$400 Million In Assets.

Every wage earner can participate.
Thanks to new laws, starting January 1, 1982, every wage earner receiving compensation can participate in an IRA account even if they already now participate in another pension or profit sharing plan where they work. And self-employed people may qualify for a SEP or Keogh account.
Come in to any Family Federal Savings office for all the details. Our counselors will explain everything you need to know about IRA and Keogh accounts. And they'll show you how you can earn interest — in advance — by pre-signing now for your 1982 retirement plan.

Family Federal Savings can help you PLAN FOR THE FUTURE.

Board of Six

by Dave Knight

At first glance, the decision by the Charlevoix County Apportionment Commission to reduce the number of county commissioners from 15 to six seems rather drastic.

After all, the county has been governed by board of 15 for the past 13 years. Before that, when the board was comprised of supervisors, the county fathers numbered 25. One must wonder how they got anything done in those days; either there were some quiet commissioners or meetings must have lasted days at a time.

Radical change in the ways things are done, especially if those ways have been in force for so many years, is never easy. Thus it was not an easy step by any means for the Apportionment Commission to make the decision they had to make. There was pressure from the sitting commissioners to retain the status quo.

At a November 10 meeting, the board passed unanimously a formal resolution recommending that the county be governed by the maximum number of commssioners allowed by law, 15, "so that the close contact of county government with its constituents can be maintained."

Close contact or not, the fact was that constituents were being represented unequally everytime a vote came up. Theoretically, the constituent from District No. 6, for instance, which includes Melrose and Chandler Townships, has more than twice the clout of the constituent from District No. 3, Charlevoix and Hayes Townships. Both districts get one vote apiece on the board but No. 3 has twice the population.

This was the inequity facing the Apportionment Commission when they started their task and, to satisfy the board's wish that 15 commissioners be retained, a delineation of districts would have had to be made in which each had a population as close to 1,327 as possible.

Such a plan was found to be virtually impossible. With the further legal requirements that districts be contiguous, compact and as square as possible, there was simply no way to carve out 15 commissionerships.

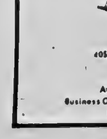
The commission did try to plug in more moderate solutions to the problem. Plans for 12 and nine member boards were floated but could not pass the population equality test which, by law, dictates that the difference in a constituent's voting clout on the board not be greater than 1 to 1.1

When all the calculating and computing was over, only the number six would wash.

Aside from its mathematical correctness, the Board of Six has many advantages. It will promote more efficient county government; it is a simple fact that a business is run more efficiently when management is streamlined. The added prestige of a commissioner representing 3,300 or so rather than 1,300 will make him or her more visible and thus more alured to constituent wishes. Last, but certainly not least in these frugal times, the Board of Six will cost less.

The Apportionment Commission, including County Prosecutor Scott Beatty, County Clerk Jane Brannon, County Treasurer Anah Potter, Republican Chairman Don Hufford and Democratic Chairman Fritz Allard, has made a wise decision.

Such drastic change never comes easily and it took no small amount of courage for the members of the commission to rule as they did. They are to be congratulated.



Clockwise

Reminder of darker times

by Bob Clock

The Vietnam War lasted so long and claimed so many American lives that its painful memories will be with us for many years to come, regardless of how hard we try to forget.

Public Service Television reminded us on Veterans Day of the continuing mental aberrations many veterans still suffer as a result of their duty in Vietnam. Of course, members of their families — and they are legion — suffer right along with them.

Movies such as "Deer Hunter" also serve to keep the horror of Vietnam alive, along with an irresistible inclination on the part of the news media to identify society's malefactors as "Vietnam veterans," regardless of how pertinent such identification may be.

Although the war has been over more than six years, the nation is still living under the shadow of Vietnam, with almost daily reminders of the deep wounds the war left on the American psyche.

Some of us realized right from the start the folly of taking sides in a peasant uprising on Asian soil. Not only had the United States chosen the wrong side, but we tried to fight with one arm tied behind our back. We found ourselves embroiled in a no-win war that was a futile as it was immoral.

Yet when protesters raised their voices against the bloodshed, official Washington not only refused to listen but branded dissidents as un-American. Sometimes they were placed under police surveillance.

In Michigan, the tedious task of compiling dossiers on Vietnam protesters fell to the State Police. One of the subjects they kept under fairly constant scrutiny during the early years of the war was Rev. Austin W. Regier, pastor of the Lacota and Casco Methodist churches in southwestern Michigan.

Regier, who subsequently served as pastor of the First Methodist Church in Charlevoix and now is employed at Harbor Industries in Charlevoix, was informed last year that the so-called "Red Squad" file on his anti-war activities was being closed but that a copy of the classified file would be made available to him if he wanted to see it. Regier told the police he would like a copy.

The file was hand-delivered to his home two weeks ago by Detective Dean Rye of the Michigan State Police Post at Petoskey.

The pastor, who is on a year's leave of absence from the church, has perused the report many times since then with mixed reactions.

"Sometimes I want to laugh," he says. "Other times I am outraged that the state every had the authority to collect such information."

Regier is referred to on several pages on a "suspected communist," which is not and never has been a crime, but it is ostensibly why he was kept under surveillance. The dossier includes such irrelevant information as a photo copy of a newsstory which appeared in the Decatur (Mich.) Republican dated Feb. 12, 1959, detailing Regier's wedding to the former Hinako Ishii. There is also a notation that the pastor's car was spotted outside South Haven High School on a February evening in 1962 while a Peace Rally was being held inside under the auspices of Axel Nielsen, another suspected communist.

Regier says most of the information is fairly accurate, which I suppose could be considered a left-handed compliment to the State Police. But he is chagrined at the very idea that the state saw fit to keep such detailed records on him.

No one will ever know how much it cost the State of Michigan to compile Regier's dossier. Nor do we have any idea on what — if anything — the police intended to do with their information. And we suspect no one else has either.

If there is any satisfaction to come from the bizarre "Red Squad" episode in Michigan history, I suppose it will have to be in the knowledge that the "squad" has been disbanded and the files are in the process of being destroyed. We should all take a solemn vow that we will never again allow our government to make such an unconscionable assault on the privacy of American citizens.

I wonder what course history would have taken — and how many American and Asian lives would have been saved — if more of us had been as outspoken in our condemnation of the Vietnam War as Austin Regier was in the early 1960's?

Letters: Energy, mental health takeover, sentences

Days of cheap resources are gone

To the Editor:

When the first white settlers came to Northern Michigan, there was no thought of conserving one of our area's greatest natural resources—wood. In some cases trees were felled and skidded into the center of a clearing and burned to make room for the planting of crops. The timber dealers had a field day—the choicest stands of pine and oak and maple were slashed down to meet the increasing demand for lumber in a growing population. But all that has changed, our natural resources are dwindling, the easy ride is over and if there is to be anything left for future generations, there must be conservation.

And so it is with the utilities. Until recently it was assumed that our sources of energy were without limit and that demand would continue to grow by leaps and bounds. It was even thought that electricity would become too cheap to meter. But such is not the case; we know now that our planet's supply of fossil fuels is fast being depleted. And unfortunately, it is the cost of energy which is increasing by leaps and bounds while the demand has been slackening, partly because population growth has been leveling off and because people are becoming conservation-minded.

Caught between the pincers of skyrocketing costs of power plant construction and the declining growth of demand, the utilities are in trouble; investment funds are drying up, interest rates are the highest in history, and nuclear power which was once considered to be a promising solution to the energy problem is turning out to be neither cheap, clean nor safe.

Much of the blame for the big push for nuclear energy can be laid at the door of the Federal Government. One of the by-products of the industry is plutonium, an essential ingredient for nuclear weapons. In order to have access to an ample supple of this man-made element, taxpayer funds have been used to promote and to subsideze nuclear power while at the same time, not only the costs but the dangers have been down-played. However, finally on Aug. 4, 1981 in the Federal Register, the Nuclear Regulatory Commission admitted that there have been and will continue to be cancer deaths caused by N-Plant emissions.

Among those encouraged to go nuclear and now caught in the utility bind is Northern Electric Cooperatives of which Top O Michigan is a part. Having negotiated an open-ended contract with Detroit Edison to buy and maintain an 11 percent ownership in Fermi 2, it is now being called upon to help pay for huge cost overruns which will result in the likelihood of a doubling or tripling of our REA rates within a few years.

Can anything be done in this situation? There is no point in blaming those who negotiated the contract for a decision based on the information which was then available. But there is also no point in refusing to face the problem squarely. Co-op members who are the rate-payers are entitled to know how much in borrowed funds have already been invested in Fermi 2 and how much more may be needed? Also were all the prescribed environmental impact studies made and was any pertinent information withheld by Detroit Edison? Were the health hazards taken into consideration?

It may be that there is a legal way to abrogate the contract and retrieve the funds already invested. If not, the course being taken by the city of Austin, Texas might be considered. There, a Nov. 3 referendum calls for the disposing of a 16 percent interest in a N-Power plant rather than continuing to throw in good money after bad.

Only by exploring these and other possible options can a wise judgement be made by the Co-op members through their elected board members.

Why no restitution in sentences?

Dear Editor:

I would like to take this opportunity to praise and give thanks to the many law enforcement officers of Charlevoix County involved in the apprehension of the subjects involved in the recent drug bust in our county. Also to the undercover officer who risked his life day after day to try to get drugs off our streets and get our young people back on the right road.

After attending the first day of sentencing of these subjects in Circuit Court, I was shocked to see so many leaving the court room - smiling - thinking their money is building a new library! The Judge conveniently designated that all fines be paid to the library fund. There was no mention for restitution for court appointed attorneys and no mention for restitution to pay back to our County the funds that were used by the undercover officer to purchase the drugs. Funds that cannot be retrieved without restitution.

I would ask the Charlevoix County tax payers to contact their court system to find out when the next sentencing dates on these subjects are and to attend and support our law enforcement officers and County prosecutor in upholding our laws.

Thonks for EJ sports support

To the East Jordan Sports Boosters:

I would like to take this opportunity to thank all the people who have made our cross country, football, and girls basketball seasons a success.

The ticket takers, the concession stand workers, the announcers, the people who mowed and lined the field, the clean-up crews, those who drove the cheerleaders and athletes to the games, and the ambulance crew all deserve a big thank you from the fans, the parents and the student participants. Without you East Jordan would not have a sports program.

Again, thank you.

Applouds opportionment decision

To the Editor:

I would like to commend the Charlevoix County Apportionment Committee in their decision to reduce the number of county commissioners. The citizens of Charlevoix County will benefit in many ways from this reduction.

Fewer commissioners will mean greater visibility and accountability in county government. Objective decisions and a fair apportionment process should replace the political maneuvering that has surrounded our present county board of commissioners. Monetarily, the smaller board will result in a quarter of a million dollars in savings to the taxpayers during the next decade.

If school boards, city councils and township boards operate efficiently with five to seven members, there's no reason a county board won't function effectively with six members.

I appreciate the fairness, insight and responsibility the Apportionment Committee has shown in their deliberation and decision.

Don Smith

Opposes takeover of centers

To the Editor:

I have recently learned that a politically appointed group, known as Northern Michigan Community Mental Health Board (NMCMHB), has unilaterally decided to take over the management of a fine private non-profit mental health organization. The citizens who serve without pay on the board of directors are opposed to this takeover and I believe they are absolutely correct to object.

Over thirty years ago private citizens founded the Petoskey Area Child Guidance Clinic. Private money was raised and state assistance was secured. Over the years a building was purchased, professional staff were hired, and services were expanded to cover Charlevoix, Cheboygan, and Otsego counties as well as Emmet County. Today this private non-profit agency operates the Petoskey Area Counseling Center, Otsego Center, East Jordan Area Conseling Center and a small group home under the umbrella of Northern Mental Health Centers, Inc. The organization is the only Blue Cross designated psychiatric out-patient clinic in Northern Michigan. The agency is involved with United Way agencies from Petoskey, Gaylord, Cheboygan, East Jordan, and Boyne City. Its financial records are audited annually.

Northern Mental Health Centers, Inc. works closely with Traverse City State Hospital, area hospitals, and service organizations in the four county area. In short, a highly efficient reputable private agency which takes pride in its thirty year history is threatened by extinction.

Citizens should ask themselves why the County Board of Commissioners who appoint the paid members of NMCMHB, are allowing three of these members to ramrod through this takeover. W. Richard Smith was quoted as saying, "Direct control of services is a modern trend and we have been under pressure from our regional office to do this." This is not a modern trend. Grand Rapids runs none of its mental health services directly and has no plans to move in this direction. President Reagan is urging the nation to cut back on governmental bureaucracy and to do as much as possible through the private sector.

Pauline Mengebier, another political appointee to NMCMHB, is quoted as saying "We need a tighter control over our operation. This way we will have a direct line of responsibility that will streamline the process." The County Board of Commissioners should question how more public bureaucracy can be equated with streamlining and how replacing private board members who work for free with political board members who work for pay is saving the taxpayers money.

A more important question is why should a political body with no experience in direct psychiatric administration replace a private body with a history of thirty years of such administration.

If you are concerned with quality mental health services, the preservation of private agencies and opposed to growth of government bureaucracy, contact your county commissioner and put a stop to this gigantic mistake.

Visitor from England has good first impressions of Charlevoix

by ANNE KELLY

What's it like to be 17 and seeing America for the first time? Pretty darn exciting.

Young John Kennedy of Liverpool, England, visited in Charlevoix last week with his aunt at the home of W. Lincoln Street resident, (John) Glenn McCafferty. Liverpool, one of the larger cities in England, is the home of the Beatles, John is quick to point out. This fact, of course, seemed to establish a common ground from which I hoped to glean some contrasts.

Wondering about his initial reaction to America, having arrived in New York City the end of October, I asked John about his preconceived notions about the States versus the reality of the actual thing.

"Skyscrapers and yellow cabs," he began. Apparently twenty stories is tops in Liverpool.

"And the traffic lights, you know, are over the streets here." In England, as in other European countries, they're on poles on the corner of the intersections of streets in which the traffic flows on the left as opposed to the right.

But other than the fact that England is not yet overrun by neon-lighted fast food concessions, teenagers in Liverpool engage in many of the same activities as American youth, with some cultural variations on the theme. There are amusement centers and discos, movies and sports. When you become of age at 18, there are the pubs in which one might quaff a brew while enjoying a lively dart game with some other chap.

John Kennedy, right, with his aunt Nora Platzner and Glenn McCafferty.

Computer games, so prevalent in the States, are really just starting there, and incomprehensible as it may sound, John hadn't heard about Izods or Calvin Klein. But deck shoes, on the other hand, have crossed the Atlantic to Liverpool, just as Fish n' Chips have found their way to Charlevoix.

We had taken John to a girl's basketball tournament game in Kalkaska and were anticipating an exciting weekend on T.V. of Blue and Gold vs. Scarlett and Grey. All this led to a discussion of sports. Once we realized that John thought that we were getting up for a big soccer match instead of a football game, we were able to set things straight. "Football" is soccer in England, which when you think about it really does make more sense. It's just a matter of semantics, keeping your football and rugbya and soccers in order. Basketball is not a major sport in England, but then neither is the English summer sport of Cricket of consequence here.

American television was unusual to John since in England he has a choice of only three channels.

I noticed that he wore jeans and Western boots which are, of course, American closet staples at this writing. But, John as it turns out, is not necessarily following British fashion. He just happens to be a country western music enthusiast (in England!) and an individualist who doesn't look for name brands. His main interest, and one that has reached great popularity in England is exercise and body building, probably due to the fact thin winters are mild and winter outdoor sports are not numerous. John worked as a pool attendant in a health complex in Liverpool, where in fact he earned his plane fare to the States.

"The people have been very friendly, and you know, people are the same in Liverpool – very friendly, not cold as you may have heard," John wanted us to know. His parents will be joining him at the home of his aunt in Toledo, Ohio next July. That leaves about 8 months for him to check out America.

Well, to Glenn McCafferty, who left his home on Beaver Island at the ripe old age of 15, to begin a career spent on the freighters of the Great Lakes, John's trip is perhaps not so remarkable. But for many 17 year old Charlevoixans and those of us who are no longer near 17 but have never been abroad, the opportunity young Mr. Kennedy has secured is enviable.

City and county road funds down

The City of Charlevoix will receive $88,877 as their share of state tax revenues for road maintenance in fiscal year 1980-81 according to the Michigan Department of Transportation.

The sum represents a decrease of almost $6,000 from the $94,636 Charlevoix got from revenues in the 1979-80 fiscal year.

Charlevoix County will receive $78,794 less this year in shared transportation revenues; for fiscal year 1980-81 the county will receive $958,413 compared to $1,037,207 received in 1979-80.

Statewide, collections from fuel taxes, license plate fees and other sources produced $682,908,879 for the Michigan Transportation Fund in the fiscal year ended September 30, down 7.5 percent from the previous year.

State Transportation Director John P. Woodford attributes the decline in revenues to the smaller cars with better mileage that are more prevalent on Michigan roads.

THE DECEMBER GEMS
Colleen Tilsworth
Manager
If you were born in December, your official birthstones are turquoise and zircon.
Turquoise is one of America's great resources. As a matter of fact, the American Southwest is the world's major source of this lovely stone.
An even, slightly greenish-blue is the favored color. However, some people prefer more greenish stones or those that possess the interesting "spider web" matrix (dark veins of the host rock running through the stone.)
You should let your taste be your guide for the most part in choosing this stone, but you need a knowledgeable jeweler's help in pointing out the most durable stones. Turquoise varies in porosity, and the denser stones are more resistant to breakage and straining and take a better polish. Turquoise was once considered a protection against injurious falls and the Evil Eye.
Zircon is available in many colors, the blue probably being the best known. Before sophisticated diamond substitutes appeared on the market, colorless zircon was a reasonable alternative. The use of zircon can be traced to buried civilizations. The ancients believed it would protect them against plagues and injuries and bring wealth and acceptance.
If you're shopping for a gift for a December birthday, you might consider a piece of jewelry set with one of these. At Reusch Jewelry we can provide you with a free pamphlet on the December birthstones to enclose with your gift. This will make it even more special.

Benzie Central ends Rayder girls BB season

The Charlevoix Girls Basketball team went down to defeat by a score of 61 to 42 at the hands of a strong, well disciplined Benzie Central team in the finals of the Class C District tournament at Kalkaska Wednesday night.

Coach Henry Wagner said of the game "We lost to a good team. They are good ball handlers, very well disciplined and have a good fast break. They were a team that pressed and our young players couldn't handle it. They should do well in the Regional tournament."

Of his own team he said "they had too many critical turnovers. To their credit they never quit. Laure Kemp, who had 26 points for the game, had her best game of the season."

Charlevoix trailed Benzie throughout the game 14-6 at the quarter and 30-21 at the half although they had trimmed the margin to 24-20 just before the half. Going into the final period Benzie had a 10 point 44-34 lead and in the final eight minutes outscored Charlevoix 17-8 for the win.

Benzie had 26 field goals and 9 of 14 charity shots. The team committed 13 personal fouls. Charlevoix had 17 field goals, 8 of 14 free throws and 16 personal fouls.

Benzie had four players in double figures, Bonnie Schimp with 19, Dawn Cady with 14, Rae Ann Shepard with 12 and Quinn LaFleur with 10.

Kemp had 26 points, the only Charlevoix player in double figures.

Seniors on the Charlevoix team are Holly Taber, Lisa Pischner and Margo Smith.

Bridget Noirot guards the ball.

Ann Wagner drives to the basket.

Handel's 'Messiah' to be performed at high school gym

The presentation of the oratorio, Handel's "Messiah", at the Charlevoix High School gymnasium at 8 p.m. Sunday, Dec. 13, will officially launch the holiday season in Charlevoix.

Miss Ellen Addington, director of the production, said that four soloists; Helen Moerland of Charlevoix, soprano Susan Matthews of Ann Arbor, contralto; Mark Puchala of Traverse City, and tenor, Jay Thompson of Interlochen, bass; a choir of 65 voices and a 16 piece orchestra will appear in the traditional holiday presentation.

Elizabeth Humphrey, pianist, is the accompanist.

Patrons are being sought to support the production. Interested persons are asked to contact Miss Addington.

The production will be presented at the high school gymnasium to allow more people to hear this production holiday oratorio.

OFFERING A 'VIAL OF LIFE' to Mr. and Mrs. Ed Lewand is Charlevoix Township fireman Don Smith. The "Vial of Life" is a plastic vial made from recycled Coca Cola bottles into which is put a sheet of paper with vital medical information. The "Vial of Life" program is sponsored by the TelephonePioneers of America; the vials are being distributed throughout Charlevoix Township by the volunteer firemen. Said Smith, "Even if one life is saved by this program, it will be worth it." Those interested in participating can contact Smith.

"Sugar Babe", a doll designed to help juvenile diabetics learn how to give themselves insulin injections, was presented to Charlevoix Area Hospital by the local chapter of the Telephone Pioneers of America.

Clem Olach, President of the local chapter, presented the "Sugar Babe" to R.N. Kathy Boss, Manager of Patient Services at Charlevoix Area Hospital. Mrs. Boss observed that the hospital is involved in a continuing program of teaching for its diabetic patients and "Sugar Babe" is an important addition.

"Sugar Babe" has insulin injection points marked on its arms, thighs, and abdomen. Patients as young as six can learn to treat their diabetes using the doll as a guide.

Olach pointed out that the Telephone Pioneers have a "tradition of caring." The organization supports projects for handicapped persons, senior citizens, talking books for the blind, and the Special Olympics.

Jim Greer in training.

Skiing competition in Greer's future

James Greer, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jed Greer of Charlevoix, Michigan, is attending the Mountain House School, a private school for winter athletes, in Lake Placid. Jim, an alpine skier, chose the Mountain House School because, he says, "There is a good balance between academics and athletics here. I get great coaching and I learn what it takes to achieve. At the same time I get to attend a college prep school and just plain learn. I get the best of both worlds." Currently, Jim is enduring the rigors of three hours a day dryland training workouts to prepare himself for the winter skiing competitions.

Speaking of first year students like Jim, the athletic director at the school said, "They come here with starry-eyed notions about making the U.S. Ski Team and setting the world ablaze. There is no magic, though. It takes hard work determination, creative coaching and racing, and a little luck to make it. Most must learn to go slow before they go fast, but they all end up going fast. Some will eventually end up setting the world ill ablaze. One thing is certain, they'll all get a good education."

Jim was "discovered" last year at Jerry Stanek's Christmas Racing Camp at Sugar Loaf Village. "I spotted him on video tape the first day I was at the camp," said Robert Zimmerman, headmaster of the school, who was in Northern Michigan on vacation and gave a presentation at the camp. "His skiing was a little raw, but he demonstrated great balance and athletic ability. We expect training four hours a day on Whiteface Mountain in Lake Placid will help polish his rough edge. He is definitely a talented prospect."

At school, Jim rises at 6:15 a.m. to take a quick 3½ mile run around Mirror Lake, or run through an injury prevention routine with another student, or bike a quick 10 or 15 miles. Breakfast follows at 7:00, and then it's on to school. Classes begin at 8:14. Jim is a junior, and takes English, Algebra, Chemistry, American History, and Spanish. He'll need 20 credits to graduate. After school, at 3:00, the day's real training session begins. It may take the form of weight training, or running up and down one of the surrounding mountains, or running through a stomach routine and bleacher routine at the Olympic Arena. Whatever the form, it is demanding, and generally lasts 2½ hours. Close on the heels of training is dinner, and then evening study hall. Study hall is required for only 1½ hours, but most, including Jim, spend three hours with their noses in books.

Snowflakes are beginning to fly in the village now, so dry-land training will soon come to a close. When Whiteface Mountain opens, the school schedule will flip-flop with training, and Jim will spend four hours every morning skiing under the watchful guidance of Dave Wenn and Chris Jones.

Fall Commencement was held November 21 at Michigan Technological University in Houghton and among degree recipients were, from Charlevoix, ROBERT RAJEWSKI, II, who received a B.S. in electrical engineering and a B.S. in computer science and JOHN H. RYBICKI, who received a B.S. in geological engineering.

City will look into Belle River investment

by DAVE KNIGHT

Charlevoix will participate in a study by the Michigan Public Power Agency, (MPPA), following action by the City Council Monday night, that may pave the way for another investment by the city in a downstate electrical generating plant.

As recommended by City Manager Robert Hunt, the council unanimously approved a three-part resolution requesting the city's inclusion in an MPPA project study of the Detroit Edison Belle River Plant #1, specified the capacity to be sought as 3 to 4 megawatts and authorized Hunt to approach Charlevoix and Marion Townships concerning the future of their electric service franchise agreement with the city.

Currently the city owns two megawatts of power from the Consumers Power Campbell Unit #3 plant. The city's total electrical capacity, according to a 1979 study by the Grand Rapids firm of Daverman Associates, should be eight megawatts by 1990. Hunt told the council that demand for electricity peaked locally in 1979 at over seven megawatts but that an unstable economy, among other factors, has lowered demand since then to just over six megawatts.

The cost for the MPPA project study, according to Hunt, will be approximately $5,000 per megawatt, or, $20,000 for four additional megawatts. This amount, he reminded the council, involves only the paperwork that precedes the actual "signing on the bottom line."

Investment in the Belle River plant, according to a recent study for MPPA by the H.W. Beck consultant firm, would be cheaper for the city in the long run than buying power wholesale from Consumers Power.

On another matter involving electricity, though only in a seasonal sense, the council went along with a request by the Charlevoix Merchants Association to provide the materials and labor for wiring Christmas lights on the newly planted trees downtown.

At an earlier meeting, the council had given its blessing to the lighting of the trees but the mechanics of wiring each tree for power had been overlooked by the Merchants Association. The association thus requested that the $900 material expense of additional lights and neccessary overhead wiring be shared equally by the association, the Chamber of Commerce and the city, each contributing $300. The city will also provide the labor, estimated to cost about $1,000, as it has in past years when decorations were mounted on street lamp poles.

The council approved the request unanimously. By the end of this week, each of the 35 downtown trees will be strung with four strings of miniature white lights which will be wired from lines strung temporarily overhead.

In other action, the council:

-Approved a variance for the Pine River Place sign which, under the sign ordinance, is oversized for a residential zone.

-Approved the appointment by Mayor Sam Supernaw of Joe Etienne, Jr. to the Housing Commission to fill the term of Ralph Shapton who recently resigned; the term of Ralph McRae, who has also resigned, was left unfilled by Supernaw who indicated that he will leave the appointment to be made by mayor-elect Kenneth Staley when he takes office in January.

-Approved the reappointment of Toni Felter to the Recreation Commission.

Council hears plans for 82-unit motel, conference center

City council members were advised at their meeting Monday night of preliminary planning under way for an 82-unit luxury motel and conference center at the site of the Archway Motel on Highway 31 near the southern entrance to the city. Though details of the project are still being developed, according to Archway Motel owner Craig Wise, initial indications are that all existing buildings on the site will be demolished and construction of the project completed by next summer's tourist season.

Features of the project, as told to council members, include a three-story atrium, (one story below ground level), with a swimming pool, tropically landscaped patios and bar under glass skylights. Conference rooms and health-exercise facilities are also being considered.

The project will be presented Monday, December 14 to the City Planning Commission at an informational meeting. Barring complications, the Planning Commission could then make a final review and a recommendation at their December 28 meeting which would bring it to the City Council for their consideration on January 4.

EDC gives go-ahead to Ferry Avenue project

The proposed convenience sto, restaurant-motel facility at Ferry Avenue and Stover Road received the blessing of the Charlevoix County Economic Development Corporation (EDC) last week.

The EDC passed an inducement resolution encouraging the project, called the Charlevoix Commercial Center, and agreeing to "issue limited obligation economic development bonds or notes in an amount presently estimated not to exceed Three Hundred Fifty Thousand Dollars ($350,000)."

However, the newly-formed EDC did not fully agree on the project and approved it by a narrow five to four vote. According to an EDC spokesman, there is a difference of opinion among members about using the EDC to encourage commercial and retail operations which would be in competition with existing operations. There was some question that this might be the case with the Charlevoix Commercial Center.

The project, as described by developer Michael Barnard, would feature a three-story building. The garden level of the building, a walk-out basement of 2,800 square feet, would serve as a convenience store and delicatessen. There would also be a single lodging unit.

The ground level, or main level of the building, would be occupied by a restaurant-lounge. It would be separated from the garden level by an extending deck to provide privacy.

The top floor would consist of five lodging units with entrances from the opposite side of the building from the restaurant and store areas.

Citing the need for such a facility in Charlevoix, Barnard noted that there are no other convenience stores in the area of the proposed facility. The 434 boat slips of the Irish Boat Shop and North West Marine are therefore isolated from all sources of food and supplies in the area unless an automobile is used.

"A convenience store in the area would be trafficked by those who do not have access to, or do not wish to employ, a vehicle. There is a need for such a facility in the area," Barnard says.

"The restaurant would cater to those who want a mid-priced meal and drink in an attractive and comfortable atmosphere, according to Barnard. Those who dock their boats in the marinas and desire a meal without additional travel would find the restaurant particularly convenient.

Patrons of the motel could include families and guests of marina patrons, boaters who are refurbishing their crafts, hunters, fishermen, skiers, and tourists "just passing through".

Specific benefits to the Charlevoix area, as outlined by Barnard, include 20 to 30 jobs for local residents and efficient use of now vacant property by an attractive building and a site plan that conserves the area's natural beauty.

Richard Barnard is a former resident of the Charlevoix area. He is co-owner of the Charlevoix Industrial Center and a co-partner in the Lansing development firm of Larry A. Reeves and Associates. Barnard is a graduate of General Motors Institute with an engineering degree. He is the sole investor in the proposed Charlevoix Commercial Center, and with his wife, Susan, plans to become the full time proprietor of the project.

The total project plan must still be approved by the Charlevoix Planning Commission and the City Council. Also, several more steps are necessary before all EDC requirements are met.

However, Barnard hopes to have the Center well under way by next summer.

Charlevoix Yesterday

If the banks of the Pine River Channel look a bit ragged in this picture; if the trees look scraggly; and if something seems to be missing, you're right. The picture was taken bout 100 years ago - long before the channel was encased in concrete and the banks groomed to create settings for houses, hotels and restaurants. Send holiday mail early Charlevoix postmaster Joe Schwartzfisher is urging local residents to get their Christmas packages and cards in the mail as soon as possible so they will reach their destinallons on time.

"It helps us out, and it helps our customers, too," Schwartzfisher says.

He is particularly pleased with Charlevoix air mail service, which he describes as "exceptionally good". Air mail processed in Charlevoix is sent to Gaylord and from there to Saginaw or Lansing for plane connections. This avoids the possibility of it being tied up in northern Michigan airports because of bad weather, Schwartzfisher points out.

Those who like "Charlevoix" cancellations on their mail can still have them by putting their cards and letters in the box marked "Charlevoix Only" in the post office lobby.

Ralph McRae honored by city, commission

With his recent resignation Ralph A. McRae ended a 5½ year associallon with the commission and leaves behind a major accomplishment in the form of Pine River Place, Charlevoix's recently completed senior housing complex.

As a result of his efforts, McRae, is the recipient of two recent commendations; one from the City of Charlevoix and another from the Housing Commission.

A framed Certificate of Appreciation from the city was presented to McRae last week by Mayor Sam Supernaw. The document praises McRae, "for his outstanding contribullon of effort on behalf of the city" and for his "devotion to duty in service to fellow citizens."

At its November 19 meeting, the Housing Commission passed a resolution of appreciallon to McRae which reads, in part, "Ralph has always served willingly throughout his tenure on the Commission and in his former capacity as City Councilman was instrumental in the formation of the Charlevoix Housing Commission. His tenacity and the many, many hours of personal service without thought of compensallon resulted in the construction of Pine River Place. His deep concern for the elderly citizens of the community was evident in all his actions."

McRae's involvement with the commission dates back to January, 1974 when he first called attenllon to the need for senior housing in Charlevoix while campaigning for the City Council.

The campaign being successful, McRae worked as a council member to create, by ordinance, the Housing Commission. In 1978, he was appointed to the commission and became chairman a year later.

His four years as chairman were marked by a lireless effort to see a senior housing complex built. It began with over 20 out of town meetings, most in the HUD office in Grand Rapids. McRae developed a close working relationship with several 'governmental offiials in the process and was eventually able to win valuable support for the project from U.S. Senator Donald Riegle and Congressman Roberl Davis.

Following the appropriation by HUD of sufficient funding and the reorganization of the commission to accomodate federal requests, construcllon finally began in August, 1980, and the dedication ceremonies held this past October 11.

Said McRae, "I do hope that this coslly project with its ample community room will be made a center of activity for the retired people of our city."

Mayor Sam Supernaw presents a Certificate of Appreciation to Ralph McRae.

Santa's coming!

Word has been received from the North Pole via the Charlevoix City Fire Department that Santa Claus will arrive Saturday, December 19 in Charlvoix for a pre-Christmas visit.Santa will arrive by firetruck at the foot of Clinton St. at 1 p.m. on the 19th and will bring boxes of candy to hand out to area youngsters.

Stroud elected

Oscar Stroud, supervisor of Charlevoix Township, was elected president of the Charlevoix County Chapter of the Michigan Townships Association 'at its annual meeting last week in Boyne City.

Others elected were Eric Beishlag, clerk of Eveline Township, vice-president; Linda Nelson, clerk of Wilson Township, secretary-treasurer; and Leah Green, trustee of Ilayes Township.

New program will help hospital meet future needs

Charlevoix Area Hospital has initiated a long term development program to meet the future growth needs of the hospital.

Since 1978 when a major fund raising campaign resulted in the donallons and pledges for three and five years, enabling the renovallons and construction of the new wing, the hospital directors have been looking for other means of planning for the future.

Recently, letters were sent to area donors who had completed their three year pledges, as well as others in the area, asking them "to consider making giving to Charlevoix Area Hospital a habit," in Development Committee Chairman Tom Carey's words.

The development goals are to establish funds which will meet continuing equipment and personnel needs as well as accumulate capital for physical changes to the hospital plant, which may be necessitated by future population growth and increasing demands for the hospital's service.

The directors feit that the Christmas season was an especially good time to remind people of the continuing needs of the hospital and to point out the tax advantages in contributing before the end of 1981.

"Because of the nel effect of the changes in tax brackets for 1982, a contribution will have a greater effect on your personal taxes this year than next," Board President Louis Hollow explained.

Hollow amplified that the tax reductions in 1982 have meant that many taxpayers are deferring as much income as possible until 1982, while giving as much as possible this year. He pointed out that under the law, taxpayers may even charge charitable donations to their charge cards, enjoy the tax benefits of the donation this year, but actually pay the charge bill in 1982.

Charlevoix Area Hospital's solicitation for donations this year is part of a continuing program.

The hospital anticipates no major physical changes in the hospital at this time. Rather, the board is concentralling on keeping equipment replacement on a regular and economic schedule, and continuing its general programs to the community, such as the preventive medicine lectures for the public and patient education within the hospital.

The hospital board is working on a five year master plan focussing on long term needs for the hospital. Most immediate are equipment replacements for laboratory and possibly the coronary care and intensive care units.

One of the problems all hospitals face is that with current budget cuts in Medicare and Medicaid, hospitals are not receiving full reimbursement for services. The difference between cost and reimbursement is being absorbed by the hospital.

While Charlevoix Area Hospital is a not-for-profit institution, it still must show a positive balance at the end of the year to keep up with changing technology and personnel requirements.

The not-for-profit status enables donations to be tax deductible.

In launching the development drive, the hospital directors have opened three funds to which donations may be 'earmarked: scholarships, equipment and development.

They are hoping their timing - Christmas and the tax season - will start their supporters thinking.

For several years he has sung the tenor roles in the Handel Festival in Traverse City and the Messiah at Central Methodist Church. During the Lenten season, he performed the "Seven Last Words of Christ" by Dubois in Petoskey and Charlevix.

A graduate of Central Michigan University, he has been choral director at Traverse Clty High Scool for fouryears. Currenlly, he is on leave while working on his Master's degree in voice performance at the university of Michiga. His teacher is Prof. Rosemary Russell. He plans to return to Traverse City in January.

Everyone in the Charlevoix area is invited to enjoy the beautiful and moving experience the "Messiah" will offer to its listners when it is presented Sunday at the Charlevoix High School gymnasium.

Sixth grade band opens door to world of music

by ANNE KELLY

It takes a while for all the squeaks and honks to work their way "round and round, down and out, until it comes out here", but by Dec. 17 the sixth grade band hopes to be ready for their "premiere" performance. From cacophony and ineptitude miraculously evolves a musical facility - and from this, a musical experience, which is what the program is all about.

In Charlevoix, band inillally begins at the end of fifth grade when prospective students are given a written test which somewhat measures their musical apptitude. Then, after preliminary testing, they are able to try various instruments. Eventually they will decide on a favorite instrument.

In September of sixth grade, instruments are selected and lessons begin. Classes meet every day for 45 min. But the real work takes place at home where students must practive faithfully if they are to master their instrument. A parent's meeting is called at the outset to explain the program as well as to convey the expectations of the band instructors. An instrument may amount to an investment for parents of over $300.00, a consideration not to be taken lighlly. The program therefore involves a joint committment on the pari of instructors, students and parents.

Learning to play an instrument, students soon learn, means dedicallon to this committment. For once the novelty of the shiny new instrument wears off, what remains is the reality of the responsibility of putting in practice time, at least ½ hour per day. The rewards, of course, are great for the musician who perserveres. Musicians have learned a skill which will entertain and delight themselves and others in their leisure time throughout life. They will have learned an understanding of what goes into the making of music, both the inspiration and the perspirallon.

About 55 sixth graders are presently involved in the band program at Charlevoix Middle School. Instructors are Evelyn Wujcik and Steve Stargardt.

A Christmas Conceri is planned in order to build up the student's confidence and to provide an extra motivation for the hours of practice put in thus far. Another conceri is scheduled for the spring.

If you should happen upon a sixth grader this holiday season, toting an instrument case or tooting a tune, take a minute to listen. You may be pleasantly surprised!

Knight on the Town
Of all the nerve

by Dave Knight

Four calling birds, three french hens, two turtle doves and a partridge in a pear sauce.

Such was the exotic fare offered to the staffs of the News-Review and Courier at their annual Christmas party held over the weekend. Actually, we didn't really eat all the poultry mentioned above but the buffet table was filled with so many elegant dishes that a sauteed calling bird or two could have easily been slipped onto the hors d'oeuvre tray without much notice.

Formal dining is always fun when you don't have to pay for it.

One becomes much more adventurous in his tastes and downright cavalier along a buffet, hoisting a spoonful of this and a dollop of that onto his plate which usually resembles a dog's breakfast by the end of the table. Dexterity pays off for those desiring soup, salad, and other fixings that do not warrant precious space on the main dinner plate.

I recall a proud moment some years ago when, on a high school prom night, my dinner date was visibly impressed when I returned from the buffet with three courses in hand - and a crescent roll under my arm. Some people, I'm sure she thought, are born with class.

Among the culinary delights offered at our party Saturday night were some lightly breaded meatball-sized morsels nestled coyly on the buffet table between the broccoli and sliced apples. I treated myself to a generous helping.

So did Jerry Rosevear and Denny Chase who sat at the same table. As is natural for a couple of sportswriters, Jerry and Denny immediately started to evaluate items on their plates, rating winners and losers and negotiating possible trades. ("Roast beef and tomato wedge for a future desert?")

The discussion turned to the mystery morsels.

"These potato things are great," said Jerry.

"Yeah, but they're fish," said Denny.

"No," said I, "Those are frittera."

Being basically meat and potato men, I reasoned, sportswriters are rarely exposed to such gourmet side dishes and cannot be blamed for their ignorance. But I had to agree with their endorsement; the fritters were delicious and f wolfed my way through a second helping.

At just about that point, my wife made a quiet announcement. "These aren't potatoes or fish or fritters. They're cauliflower."

The table went silent. I looked at Jerry and Denny and they looked at me. Without saying a word, we all knew the horrible truth. Cauliflower. Dreaded in our youth as the ghoulishly white, mushy, awful tasting vegetable mothers learned never to serve, it had been foisted upon us by a cunning chef.

Dismayed at being deked by a deep fat frier, Jerry shook his head. "First time I've ever eaten the stuff."

Denny just frowned.

"You guys were loving it a minute ago," said my wife incredulously. "You mean just because you now know it's cauliflower, you don't like it anymore?"

"Taste has nothing to do with it," I said, "It's the principle of the thing."

Deep fried cauliflower. Indeed.

Next they'll be smuggling lima beans into my spaghetti sauce.

Clockwise
Second look at Mich Con spinoff

by Bob Clock

THANKS TO the intervention Attorney General Frank Kelley, the spinoff of Michigan Consolidated Gas Co. by American Natural Resources (ANR) on Dec. 31 won't have as much affect on gas company rates as originally feared.

The problem, it seems, is that ANR is — or would like to be — a growth company continually on the lookout for new opportunities in the gas production, gas storage, coal and transportation industries to enhance the value of its stock.

However, Michigan Con — an old, mature company whose investors are more interested in dividends — has proven to be a millstone around the neck of ANR.

Furthermore, the rates charged by Michigan Con are subject to approval by the state Public Service Commission — based on the performance record not of Michigan Con alone but of the entire ANR corporation.

This means that even when Michigan Con's performance is not up to snuff, rate increases are whittled down or denied on grounds that the ANR as a whole is doing well. Under such conditions, it is difficult to whip up a great deal of investor interest.

Separation will mean that Michigan Con hereafter will stand on its own, and if rate increases are called for, so be it.

Kelley's intervention means that the divestiture won't be as sweeping as ANR would have liked, ANR and Michigan Con will share certain gas storage facilities, which should be to Michigan Con's advantage.

You may be sure that gas rates will go up after divestiture. But the rises won't be as sharp as they would have been under ANR's original spinoff scheme.

Divestiture will mean that a new holding company — Primark Corp. — will come into being Jan. 1. Present owners of ANR stock will receive one share of Primark for every four shares of ANR they now hold. The new company apparently also will control properties jointly held by the two firms.

SPEAKING OF the gas company, have you noticed that heating with wood is no longer a fad? It's a way of life.

When the Clocks first installed a wood stove in the living room six years ago, heating with wood was virtually unheard of in town. And even at that, we just used our stove to "top-off" our heating needs. The stove boosted the living room to 75 or 80 degrees, while the upstairs and other more distant rooms remained at 55 or 60.

Today, we are still part-time wood burners, but others in town apparently are using wood exclusively, judging from the size of woodpiles around town.

An old rule of thumb has it that you need a pile of wood the size of your house to provide your winter heat in Northern Michigan. And some woodpiles are almost that big.

There also seems to be a move afoot toward increased use of kerosene and electric space heaters to provide heat where it is needed when it is needed.

Such heaters, of course, demand extra precautions in their care and feeding — but they are proving to be an important — and economical — source of supplemental heat for many. After all, you shouldn't have to heat a 15-room house just to warm up the bathroom for a shower.

Reapportionment will mean juggling

by PEG OHLE

The question now is: "How can the Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners operate with only six members as opposed to the 15 they have had since 1968?"

The question is being asked as the result of the recent re-apportionment required by law following the 1980 census and the shift in County population.

The answer has to begin with a review of what the 15 Commissioners now do. After several years of observing the County Board of Commissioners, this Courier reporter submits the following report:

The 15-man County Board operates on the committee system, with each committee bringing matters under its jurisdiction to the full Board of Commissioners.

Each of the 15 members has a committee assignment with a special responsibility on that committee. When a matter is brought to the attention of the Board, it is usually in written form, signed by all members of the committee (usually three or four). In some rare cases, not all committee members agree and all do not sign the memo (or resolution).

In addition to assignment on committees of the Board of Commissioners, members are often assigned to represent the County Board on local or regional commissions or boards.

For their Commissioner duties, each Board member receives a base salary of $1,800. This has not been raised for several years. He also receives $35 per diem for attending committee meetings or meetings of outside commissions or boards, and 20 cents a mile for travel to those meetings. In addition, he is eligible for hospital and health insurance coverage for himself and his family, plus retirement benefits. This adds up to an average of $3,600 per year without the insurance and retirement benefits.

The two meetings a month are a daytime meeting convening at 9:30 and a night-time meeting convening at 7:30. The daytime meeting usually ends sometime between 4 and 5 o'clock, and the evening meeting sometime between 10:30 and midnight.

There is usually an hour and a half "recess" during the daytime meeting for "lunch and committee work". However, food usually takes precedence over County business during that time. Other recesses may be called from time to time during the day for committee work, but it is seldom that all 15 commissioners have committee work to do, so those who don't bide their time — 15, 30, 45 minutes, perhaps an hour — waiting to be called back into session. It's a frustrating time for them.

The same is true during the evening sessions except there isn't the standard lunch break.

It is a matter of conjecture as to whether these meetings can be "tightened up" to allow for more efficient use of time. In addition to recesses, discussions of matters at hand often become irrelevant and lengthier than necessary. With a smaller Board of Commissioners, there won't be as many people to do the committee work, but neither will there be so many people to carry on unnecessary debates.

Herewith follows an overview of present assignments to each member of the County Board of Commissioners. Only they know how much time and effort they put into their jobs.

Delbert Ingalls represents District 1, made up of South Arm Township. He is a member of the Ways and Means Committee of the Board with special responsibilities for Welfare, Child Guidance, and Personnel. He is also a member of the Statutory Finance Committee, which meets on the Thursday following each daytime meeting of the Board to okay expenditures and conduct other business assigned to it. He is on the Health, Welfare, and Planning Committee of the Board with special responsibilities for County Parks, Conservation, Agriculture, and Veterans Affairs. As a member of this committee, he is assigned to the Sanitary Board of Appeals, which has held only one meeting this year due to the slowdown in building. He is also expected to attend meetings of the Veterans Affairs Committee, which meets three times a year.

Martin Biegnowski represents District 5, Wilson and Eveline Townships. He serves on the Equalization Committee of the Board with special responsibilities for Rejected and Charged Back Taxes and Township and City Clerks' Reports. He has no outside assignments.

Larry D. Matthew represents District 6, Melrose and Chandler Townships. He is a member of the Public Safety and Property Committee of the Board with special responsibilities for the Sheriff's Department, Law Enforcement, Claims, and the Sheriff's Department union contract. Matthew represents the County at the Criminal Justice Planning meetings held occasionally in Traverse City. He is also a member of the County Construction Board of Appeals, which has had only five appeals in its six years of existence.

Ralph E. Harmon represents District 7, Boyne Valley and Hudson Townships. He is a member of the Public Safety and Property Committee of the Board with special responsibilities for the County Road Commission, Ironton Ferry, and Airports (the County has none). He, like Matthew, is a member of the County Construction Board of Appeals, and in addition is expected to attend the monthly meetings of the County Road Commission.

Thomas Breakey represents District 8, part of East Jordan. He is a member of the Public Safety and Property Committee of the Board with special responsibilities for Emergency Services. He is also a member of the CETA Committee, which is presently inoperative.

Keith R. Annear represents District 9, part of East Jordan. He is a member of the Equalization Committee of the Board with special responsibilities for Equalization, and is also in charge of drafting resolutions or the Board. He serves as the County Board's representative to the Northern Michigan Health Agency.

Casimir Toton represents District 10, part of Boyne City. He is a member of the Ways and Means Committee with special responsibilities for Elected Officials. Toton is Charlevoix County's representative to the Northern Counties Association and a member of the newly-formed Charlevoix County Economic Development Corportion. He is also an alternate representive to the Manpower Consortium and an alternate to the Northwest Michigan Regional Planning and Development Commission, both in Traverse City.

Oral E. Sutliff represents District 11, part of Boyne City. He is a member of the Ways and Means Committee with special responsibilities for Appropriations and Unanticipated Revenue. He is also a member of the Statutory Finance Committee, with whom he meets once a month, and in addition is a member of the Parks and Recreation Commission, which meets three or four times a year.

Marvin E. Loding represents District 12, part of Boyne City. He is a member of the Health, Welfare, and Planning Committee with special responsibilities for the Commission on Aging and the District Health Department. In this capacity, he is a member of the Commission on Aging, which meets monthly, and of the Sanitary Board of Appeals.

Donald B. Meggison represents District 13, the first ward of Charlevoix, and serves as vice-chairman of the Board. He is on the Public Safety and Property Committee with special responsibilities for County Buildings and Grounds. He is also a member of the inoperative CETA Committee and an alternate on the Criminal Justice Planning Committee.

Oscar W. Ward represents District 14, the second ward in Charlevoix. He is a member of the Equalization Committee with special responsibilities for Apportionment. He is a member of the County Parks and Recreation Commission, the Economic Development Corporation, and the Solid Waste Planning Committee. The latter two groups were formed within the past year. Ward is also an alternate representative to the Act 258 (Mental Health) Board.

I. Lee Moerland represents District 15, the third ward in Charlevoix. He is a member of the Health, Welfare, and Planning Committee with special responsibilities for the County Planning Department and the Department of Building Inspection. He is the County's representative to the 10-County Manpower Consortium which meets in Traverse City when CETA is operating and to the Northwest Michigan Planning and Development Commission, also in Traverse City. In addition, he is a member of the Sanitary Board of Appeals, the Economic Development Corporation, the Solid Waste Planning Committee, and the local CETA committee.

As noted, some County Commissioners have more assignments than others. This is because some committees — such as Ways and Means, Public Safety, and Equalization — require more meetings than others. Also, some Commissioners have more time, more expertise, more interest, and are more willing than others to accept assignments.

Letters: Quest for peace

To the Editor,

—There has been a great upsurge in the quest for world peace. In Europe hundreds of thousands, among them church leaders are demanding that the super powers take their nuclear weapons and go home. In the USSR which lost more then twenty million, including civilians, in World War II, people are fearful that even greater losses are in store. In the USA anti-war sentiment is growing, especially among church people. Many of them see it as a moral issue: does any government have the right to take the lives of innocent bystanders? The radioactive poisoning of the atmosphere after a nuclear exchange would respect no national boundaries, sparing neither the young nor the old nor the sick. If would leave much of our planet uninhabitable.

In this country, among the churchmen speaking out on the subject is the Rev. Robert Davidson, newly elected head of the Presbyterian Church who favors a nuclear freeze, saying in mid-November, "Peacemaking is an issue where we can mobilize the churches." The Rev. Billy Graham has taken a strong stand against "the immorality of the current arms bull-up" and "the madness of nuclear escalation." Jewish and Christian groups are planning a Peace Sabbath on the 1982 Memorial Day weekend. The president of the Catholic Council of Bishops has denounced nuclear weapons; Bishop Matthiesen has called the Arms Race suicidal; Bishop Rodiner calls it "a sin against mankind" and one which "robs the poor" because while military appropriations are being increased, social programs are being cut.

Extremely dangerous is the current Pentagon thinking which seeks to portray the cruise missile as a usuable tactical weapon in a "limited war". But once a nuclear weapon is used by either side, in all probability there would be a chain reaction—on all-out nuclear exchange, leaving our planet "a contaminated, smoking ruin." As Father McCormick of Georgetown University said in regard to the new breed of weapons,"....if you use them, history is over."

Speaking in Petoskey Dec. 12 on the Arms Race in general and Project ELF in particular, are Father Peter Daugherty and Steve Meyers from E. Lansing at an open meeting at 2:00 p.m. on the lower level of the public library. After the meeting they will lead a Candlelight Procession for Peace to Pennsylvania Park where local clergymen have been invited to say a few words and peace songs will be sung. All those wishing to participate are welcome.

'Tis the season

Nancy Fowler and Carolyn Christiansen (R to L) put finishing touches on the Christmas decorations on the altar at the far end of the Charlevoix Area Hospital solarium. The hospital Guild annually decorates the hospital for the Christmas season. Every patient room will have minature wreaths on the door, all the halls will be decked with garlands and ribbons. Two ficus trees will be lit with Christmas lights. Every newborn during the season will have a baby-sized Christmas stocking to wear home. Annabelle Webb, Chairman of the Guild's decoration committee, traveled to Detroit to buy the decorations wholesale.

Financial aid for college-bound to be discussed at CHS program

The Charlevoix High School will conduct a program on financial aid for potential college students at the high school cafeteria at 7 p.m. Monday, Dec. 14, at the high school cafeteria. Purpose of the meeting is to acquaint parents and their junior or senior daughters-sons with the concepts and programs for the 1982-83 school year.

In announcing the financial aid program for college-bound students, Charles Bentley who heads the counseling center at the Charlevoix High School, said that the recession, especially in the state of Michigan, inflation, deficit spending, high interest rates, etc., combined with the economically troublesome times have increased the cost of attending college as much as they have everything else. As a result, parents of college-age students are finding themselves faced with the problem of financing their students' education.

A "reasonable estimate is that public four-year colleges for the 1981-82 school year will cost approximately $5,400 Bentley said, adding that private schools generally run $2,000 to $3,000 more per year.

Even though the underlying assumption for all financial aid programs is that the parents have the first responsibility to pay for a college education, most parents cannot afford the total cost.

The financial aid program schedule for Monday is designed to tell parents the options they might have and how much they might expect in the way of assistance if that assistance is available.

Cliff Denay, Financial Aid Counselor at North Central Michigan College, Mrs. Gayle Gennett and Bentley, counselors at the Charlevoix High School, will present the program devoted to local, state and financial aid programs available to students.

College and scholarship programs, it was explained, require that financial aid be based on 1981 income. Consequently, financial aid program applications cannot be completed until parents have completed their 1981 income figures.

Combining the computer with an established example of need analysis from the College Scholarship Services, Kenneth Barkley, mathematics teacher at the high school, and Bentley have developed a computer program to help parents determine what their anticipated contribution toward their student's education might be.

Fifteen pieces of information need to be supplied in order to estimate the parent's contribution. These include the number of parents in the home and the number working, their income-incomes, other income, the number of family members, the number attending college, medical and dental expenses, home and real estate equities, the net value of farm or business, value of cash, checking or savings accounts, value of stocks, bonds and other investments and age of older parent.

With this information, parents can receive a listing of available income, total assets, asset protection allowance, remaining assets, income supplements from assets, adjusted available income and parents estimated expected contribution.

If parents would like to obtain an estimate of what their anticipated contribution to their child's education might be, they are encouraged to bring the information listed above to the program or contact Mr. Bentley at the Counseling Center at the high school at 547-2811. In all cases confidentiality is assured.

This will be the only financial aid program held this school year so parents and their junior-senior students planning to attend college are urged to attend.

Monica Kozlowski

by PEG OHLE

She is the type of young woman with whom you'd just like to sit down and talk. She is vivacious, a good listener, and obviously interested in what's being said. And that's the way it should be because Monica Kozlowski is a Clinical Psychologist with the East Jordan Family Counseling Service, an affiliate of the East Jordan Family Health Center. She's been there almost two years now, listening to young and old tell about their broken dreams, their pains and fears, their despairs, and even their hopes.

Miss Kozlowski listens to family members with marital problems, parents with discipline problems, older people with just plain living problems, and others in all age groups who are having trouble coping with transitional living, unemployment, illness, and any number of other deterrents to happy living.

"I don't give advice," Miss Kozlowski says, "I try to help people come up with their own solutions. If people discover by themselves it is more meaningful – finding out who they are. It is best to approach life in a positive light – what one can do, not what one can't do. I see a lot of 'everyday' people and just listen to them and help them talk things through.

Miss Kozlowski sees her clients about once a week, some for short terms and others for longer terms. They come to her in many different ways. Some simply call and make an appointment; others are referred by a social worker, a court, a school, a medical doctor, almost anybody.

The cost of counseling sessions with Miss Kozlowski at the East Jordan Family Counseling Center are based on the client's ability to pay, also the number of children in the family. She hopes that eventually some kind of barter of services can be worked out for those of little means.

The East Jordan Family Health Center has been a community project ever since the community banded together to raise funds for a building a few years back. The building was necessary before a doctor could be supplied by National Health Services. The building is now a well equipped facility with medical and X-ray laboratories, offices for two doctors, offices for a public health nurse, a dental program, and counseling quarters.

Dr. Mitchell Carey and Dr. Bruce Lindsay "man" the medical department. They are both employed by National Health Services. Miss Kozlowski's salary also comes from federal funds, from Rural Health Services, created to get services out into rural areas. Her associate in the office is Lucia Kadzielski, a social worker.

The East Jordan Family Counseling Service takes clients from all of Charlevoix County, northern Antrim County, and southern Emmet County. Miss Kozlowski can be reached by calling 536-2240 or 536-2249.

Miss Kozlowski came to East Jordan from East Tawas, where she was associted with the Mental Health Association for four years. She grew up in East Chicago, Indiana, and graduated from Hammond, Indiana High School. She holds a bachelor of arts degree from Marian College in Indianapolis and a master's degree from Central Michigan University.

Miss Kozlowski lives in Charlevoix. When not working, she likes to play tennis, ski, and sail (which she learned just last summer).

"I enjoy the outdoors," she says. "That's why I'm here."

Father Jack Fulford, recovered alcoholic, to speak at St. Mary's on problem drinking

Fr. Jack Fulford

The Rev. Fr. Jack Fulford, Redemptorist priest of Detroit and a recovered alcoholic, has accepted an invitation extended by St. Mary's parish, to speak on alcoholism and his encounter with it as Masses at St. Mary's church Saturday and Sunday. Adulst and teenagers in the community are issued an invitation to hear Fr. Jack, as he is known, discuss alcoholism at meetings to be held at St. Mary's school hall at 8 p.m. Monday and Tuesday.

At the first meeting at 8 p.m. Monday to which the public is invited Fr. Jack will discuss the causes of alcoholism and at the second meeting at the same time Tuesday programs available to help the alcoholic and the families involved.

Fr. Jack believes that people must be educated to view alcohol as potentially dangerous to many people who can become addicted to it.

He also feels that reeducation is needed to change the widespread myth that the use of alcohol by teenagers is relatively harmless for the young drinker can cross the lie rather quickly into compulsive drinking.

In the first of the two meetings, Fr. Jack will deal with what alcoholism is; what brings it about and what it does to a person including the symptoms that mark the progression to the acute and chronic condition of alcoholism.

The second meeting will deal with the God-given means of arresting this disease before it destroys; helping the family members who are hurt inexpressibly when the disease strikes and getting help to a person who desperately needs help, but fiercely denies the need for help.

Members of AA and Al-Anon Groups are issued a special invitation to come and hear Fr. Jack discuss this subject by Rev. R. Dale Magoon, pastor of St. Mary's Church. The public is invited to attend the meetings at St. Mary's school hall at 8 p.m. Monday and Tuesday.

All-State teams name four Rayders

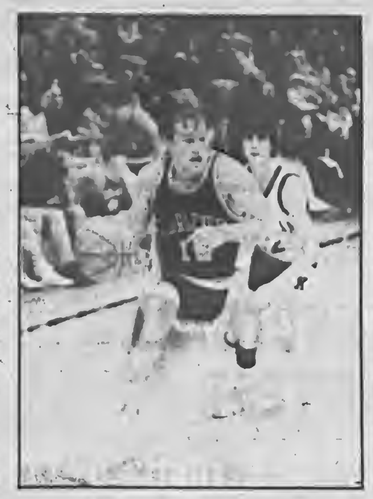
The Charlevoix Rayders are well represented on three all-state football teams named recently. Four players from the 1981 squad figure prominently on the prestigious all-state listings made public over the past two weeks.

Senior running back Mark Beaudoin was named to the first team offense on the Associated Press Class C All-State team and received honorable mention from both the Detroit News and the Detroit Free Press. Beaudoin accumulated 1,225 yards rushing in 208 carries for a stellar 8.8 yards per carry average. Beaudoin, at 6'2", 207, scored 15 touchdowns for the Rayders' surprising offense this season.

Senior end Ross Carey was another key part of the Rayders' successful 7-2 season and was rewarded this week with first team recognition on the Detroit Free Press Class C All State team. Carey, a 6'5", 205 pound wide receiver snared 23 catches for 323 yards and 11 touchdowns. Carey also received honorable mention on the AP and Detroit News all-state teams.

Defensive stalwart Mike Loper who has led the Rayder defense in tackles for the past three years received honorable mention, one for both offense and defense, on all three all-state listings, AP, Detroit News and Free Press. In the Free Press listings released Sunday, Loper was named as an All-State linebacker on defense and an All-State tackle on offense. Loper recorded 118 tackles over the 1981 campaign to bring his career total over 300.

Senior Quarterback Scott Kelly was the fourth Rayder to receive post-season honors having also appeared on all three all-state honorable mention listings. Kelly engineered the Rayder offense with a passing accuracy of 55 completions in 111 attempts for 919 yards and 18 touchdowns.



Jim Buchanan wheels toward the basket.

Cagers get off to flying start

Charlevoix High School's 1981-82 edition of the basketball Rayders got off to a flying start Friday night with a convincing home opener victory over Kalkaska.

Guard Jim Buchanan, seemingly unaffected by a knee injury that kept him out of action last season, poured in 28 points to spur the Rayders to a 81-46 non-conference decision.

Charlevoix controlled the game all the way, though they did not run away with it until the fourth quarter.

Buchanan was hot from the starting tipoff scoring eight points in the initial period after which Charlevoix led Kalkaska 17-14.

By halftime, the Rayders had extended their lead to 29-22. In the third quarter, Kalkaska hung on gamely actually outscoring the Rayders 14-12 and trailing by only five, 41-36, when the period ended. But it was not enough to get them back into the game.

Charlevoix came on strong in the final stanza scoring 20 points to Kalkaska's 10 for a final score of 81-46.

Other Rayder scoring came from Mike Loper with 12, Gary Drury, 10, Craig Klooster, 5 and Ross Carey, Dave Buday and Jeff Greene with 2 each. Kalkaska was led by Tim Seyerance and Doug Spencer who both had 12 points.

In the junior varsity matchup, Charlevoix also prevailed by a 39-28 margin. The Rayders' Tim LaBlance was the game's top scorer with 17 points.

This week the Rayders will face their first two conference foes of the young season when Boyne City visits on Tuesday night and Charlevoix travels to Petoskey on Friday night; JV tipoff is at 6:30 p.m. both nights.

Wrestlers win three out of four...

The Charlevoix Rayder wrestlers had their first successful weekend of the young season, posting wins over three of their four opponents in a team tournament hosted by Glen Lake.

Coach Greg Bryan said the success by his young players have done much to give them confidence.

The Rayders lost to a strong Benzie Central team, one of eight in the tournament, by score of 54-18 and won over Glen Lake 78-0; Elk Rapids, 52-19 and Traverse City 66-12.

In the match with Benzie Central, Charlevoix had four winners. They were Pat Curtis (105) won by an 11-1 decision; Gregg Whitley (145) by a pin in 3:32; Scott Kelly (158) by 7-7 criteria and Alan Bergmann (167) by a 7-0 decision.

The Rayders swept the match with Glen Lake with pins by every participant. Jim Herriman (98) by a pin in 3:47; Curtis by forfeit; Tim Young (112), in 3:45; Mike Steele (119) in :54; Chuck Klooster (126) in 1:17; Rick Gallant (132) in 5:18; Jo Murphy (138) in 1:17; Whitley in 1:50; Kelly in 1:49; Bergmann by forfeit; Scott Mervyn (185) in 5:10; Darrin Podskainy (191) in 139; Shannon Reynolds (hvy, wt) in :52.

In the match with Elk Rapids Curtis won by a pin in 3:05; Bergmann by a 12-2 decision and Reynolds by a pin in 3:37. Herriman, Young, Steele, Klooster, Murphy and Whitley won by forfeit.

The match with Traverse City saw Steele win by a pin in :09; Klooster in :46 Gallant in 1:48; Whitley in :23; Kelly in :31; Bergmann in :19; Mervyn in 3:16. Herriman, Curtis, Young and Podskainy won by forfeit.

Charlevoix will host Gaylord here Thursday and travel to Onaway Monday.

...After dropping season opener to more experienced Petoskey team

The Charlevoix Rayder mattmen, in their first meet of the season, lost to Petoskey, 51-18.

The young Rayder team has a busy week ahead of it, traveling to Gaylord for a dual meet Thursday, to the Manistee Catholic Central Invitational meet Saturday and to Onaway for a triangular meet with Oscoda Monday.

Of their first meet Coach Greg Bryan said he felt the team looked good and that the meet turned out well for such a young inexperienced group. "This was the very first meet for most of my team. They did alright" Bryan added.

The meet results follow: Jim Herriman (98) lost to T. Harrington by a 5-4 decision; Pat Curtis (105) was pinned by R. Walker in 31 seconds; Tim DeYoung (112) was pinned by J. Chess enthusiast Heimbecker looking for local interest in forming club

Chess anyone? Asking is Skip Heimbecker of rural Charlevoix who has plenty of chess sets but nobody to use them with.

Heimbecker is an avowed "chess-a-holic" whose interest in the game goes back about 20 years to when he first learned to play in Troy, Michigan, his former home. Lately, Skip has had trouble finding opponents and would like to establish an informal group of chess players to get together on a regular basis.

Some years ago, Heimbecker and his wife Rose Ann got into the habit of looking for interesting chess sets while on vacation trips across the country.

The result of that habit is a collection of nine chess sets ranging from one featuring pieces carved from Mexican onyx to one with delicate, hand-carved wooden figures. Sets have been brought home from such places as Aspen, Colorado, New Hampshire and Vermont.

The Heimbeckers have even tried their hands at making chess sets themselves; Rose Ann made a ceramic set for Skip recently and he has since made a jumbo-sized ceramic set himself with pieces about eight to ten inches high. Still in the workshop is the board for the giant set which will eventually be as big as a dining room table.

But with nobody to play chess with, Skip Heimbecker is getting impatient.

"I know there have got to be several people in the area who enjoy playing chess," he said. "I think it would be fun to get together, say, every week somewhere in town to have a few games and share our interest."

Heimbecker also said that he would be willing to work with beginners wanting to learn more about the game.

Anyone interested in forming a chess group is to call Heimbecker at 547-6992.

If he gets enough inquiries, says Heimbecker, he will then set up a regular time and meeting place for the group.

Here we dough again!

This year marks the eighth consecutive year that the Charlevoix Co-op nursery has been hosted by the Grey Gables Inn during the holiday season. It all started when Brian Phillips, son of former GG owners Dave and Gail Phillips, invited the class down to the kitchen to bake Christmas cookies. Today, the Grey Gables is under new management, Mr. and Mrs. Pete Pace, but nursery students continue to roll out dough and frost their cookies. At left, Dave Phillipsshows the ropes to Mandy Gilmore and, above, the class raises their rolling pins.

Holiday eating for diabetics will be topic of next community education program

Visions of sugar plums dancing does not have to be a nightmare for diabetics.

"Holiday Eating Tactics for Diabetics" will be the subject of a free community education program at Charlevoix Area Hospital, December 15, at 7 p.m.

All area diabetics are urged to take advantage of the free session, which will focus on the season's special problems, temptations and solutions, for diabetics.

Led by Charlevoix Area Hospital Dietician Dianne Charlebois and In-Service director Mary Ann Cox R.N., the one hour meeting will cover topics from preparing oneself psychologically to how and what to eat.

Dr. James Gels, Charlevoix Area Hospital staff internist will also be on hand to discuss specifics of medication and answer medical questions.

"Everyone likes to eat during the holidays," Mrs. cox observed. "The question is how to control one's diabetes without having to stay at home.

"Diabetics can go out, go to parties and enjoy themselves.

"It's important to remember that the long term complications often associated with diabetes can be minimized through proper diet," the RN concluded.

On the same theme, Ms. Charlebois said, "The holidays are a time to celebrate and be merry but not to gorge. A diabetic diet is a healthful diet," she emphasized.

Among the specifics Ms. Charlebois will discuss are hors d'ouevres, dips, eating out, alcohol and exercise.

On alcohol, the dietician said, "Mineral water, such as Perrier, is a good drink. Wine spritzers can be fun. A diabetic should mix his or her own drink because hosts tend to make strong drinks and it is wise to sip the one drink all evening," she added.

The dietician also urges diabetics to burn off excess calories during a party by helping the host pass hors d'ouevres, set the table or serve drinks.

Cookbooks featuring festive yet safe recipes will be on hand during the session. Among the recipes Ms. Charlebois will present are roast turkey, dressing, soups, nogs, relishes, punches, dips, cheeses, breads, salads and deserts.

This pre-Christmas survival course for diabetics is a prelude to a series of diabetic training courses Charlevoix Area Hospital will offer this April and again in November. The April course, which will meet once a week for five weeks, will cover all aspects of diabetes from insulin therapy to skin and foot care to diet.

Mrs. Cox commented that with improved early detection many new diabetic cases have come to light. She added that there is considerable literature, much free, available to diabetics.

The December 15, Hospital's new class evening session will be room at the lower level held in Charlevoix Area of the new wing.

Her world is sixth grade band

by ANNE KELLY

Evelyn Wujcik

"Try to imagine life without music," Evelyn Wujcik, sixth grade band instructor proposes to her students. All agree it would be pretty grim. You probably would be hard pressed to think of a single person who did not enjoy music in some capacity. Yet, we really have to understand music in order to make it or to enjoy it to the fullest, or to even make discriminating choices in music selection.

The continuance of music as an art is the purpose of a school music or band program.

Evelyn Wujcik is originally from Charlevoix and attended Northern Michigan University where she earned a B.A. in Music Education and a B.S. in Elementary Education. Her professional experience began in the Detroit area where for the five years after graduation she taught music and band in elementary and jr. high as well as high school jazz band. During that time, she enjoyed performing with the Flint Civic Orchestra and the Redford Civic Symphony on trumpet.

She spent eleven years teaching the summer band program here and in 1970 returned as a full-time resident to assume a fifth grade teaching position in Charlevix. Evelyn has been teaching 8th grade band in Charlevoix since 1972. For her own enrichment and enjoyment, she has participated in the orchestra of several Little Traverse Civic Players' musicals playing trumpet, as well as giving private lessons for trumpet and guitar.

What are her expectations for sixth graders as they embark on their musical endeavor?

"That they can read music, feel comfortable about playing their instrument and achieve a sense of accomplishment in having overcome some of the problems of learning to play an instrument. And one more thing," adds Evelyn. "That they feel a sense of belonging and of being an important part of the group."

Watching the sixth graders tackle their music in earnest, one can't help but feel that they are well on their way to meeting the expectations of the band program.

GEMS OF THE MONTH
The reasons why particular gemstones were assigned as birthstones to each month of the year remain a mystery. There may not be any satisfying explanation. One conjecture is that whoever was responsible for the assignments wanted everyone covered by adequate talismanic powers (as I discussed in my last two articles). If a gem was short on power, a second was added. Therefore, some months carried more than one birthstone.
A number of birthstone lists sprang up over the centuries, so to eliminate the confusion the National Association of Jewelers drew up an official list in 1912. Over the past 25 years the Jewelry Industry Council, Jewelers of America and the American Gem Society have modified the list. The following is the current official list recognized by these top jewelry trade associations:
January-garnet, February-amethyst, March-bloodstone or aquamarine, April-diamond, May-emerald, June-pearl, moonstone or alexandrite, July-ruby, August-peridot or sardonyx, September-sapphire, October-opal or tourmaline, November-topaz or citrine, December-turquoise or zircon.
If you would like to know more about any of these gemstones, our store passes out brochures on them free of charge. These brochures are published by the American Gem Society for increased consumer knowledge.

Big-Little Brothers-Sisters: A Gift Of Friend Ship Counts!!

CALL JIM MARSHALL: 616-547-6314

What is a Little Brother or Little Sister?

A Little Brother or Little Sister is a child needing friendship, affection, advice, and guidance. He or she may have problems at home or school, and may be deprived of one or both parents.

A Little Brother or Little Sister is a child whose life would be richer and happier if he or she had a special adult friend to whom to turn.

A Little Brother or Little Sister is between the ages of 8 and 17.

Little Brothers and Sisters are referred by their families, schools, social service agencies, clergymen, relatives and courts.

A Little Brother or Little Sister is a child waiting to return a Gift of Friendship.

He stooped to help one small boy

Snow swirled along the sidewalks, spinning against the gutters as Irwin Westheimer glanced out the window of his Cincinnati office building.

If was February; 1903 had just begun its second month.

Westheimer would have turned once more to the stack of papers on his desk in the offices of the family liquor business, except his attention was caught by a small figure. Looking closer, Westheimer could see it was a child and a small dog being battered by chill winds.

The child seemed unaware of the storm around him as he lifted the lid of a garbage can and peered into the container.

Westheimer watched as the child began rummaging through the garbage can, pawing at the refuse eagerly. He chose some bits and pieces carefully, rejecting others.

When Westheimer could stand it no longer, he wrapped himself in his topcoat, pulling his muffler snuggly around his neck and dashed into the street.

The child looked startled to see the man in the flapping coat sail toward him. He stopped his garbage can treasure hunt and seemed poised for flight as Westheimer drew near.

Before the child could run, Westheimer called to him.

"Hey, you, what are you doing there?

"Nothing, sir. Only trying to find something to eat," came the reply. The child, a boy, could have been eight years-old but his eyes made him appear much older.

Westheimer's hand, placed gently on the youth's shoulder, could feel the bones beneath the tattered coat.

"Would you like a bowl of soup, my boy?" asked Westheimer.

They trudged to a nearby restaurant and settled themselves into a quiet corner. The meal the lad ordered could have satisfied a field hand. Not a crumb remained when he finally leaned back in his chair, a smile beginning to bloom.

That was Westheimer's first meeting with his young friend, but it was not his last. Before long, Westheimer, then age 23, and several of his friends began to meet regularly with young men who needed friendship and support. That's how the first chapter of Big Brothers was formed.

In 1908, the first Big Sisters organization was formed in New York City. The two organizations merged in 1977 and were chartered by Congress.

Today, 385 agencies, including Big Brothers and Big Sisters of Charlevoix County, Inc., serve more than 130,000 youngsters.

Working with school-age boys and girls, the Big Brothers and Big Sisters provide friendship and support at a time when it is most needed.

The goal of the organization is to encourage positive inner and outer changes in young people, including a strengthened sense of self-worth and improved relations and performance at home, in school and in the community.

And the benefits to the volunteer adults are as rewarding as to the children.

But what of Irwin Westheimer? What became of him?

He still lives in Cincinnati and celebrated his 101st birthday September 19. On that day, a plaque was placed in the heart of Cincinnati on the Skywalk overlooking Fountain Plaza. On it is Westheimer's personal philosophy:

"No man ever stands so straight as when he stoops to help a boy."

This Big Brother Never Forgot His Special Protege

Match-making is the name of the game when it comes to love, and even Dolly Levi (of Hello, Dolly!) would be proud to have been responsible for the Big Brothers-Big Sisters match of the year award presented to Will Weigandt Thursday, September 24 at Leuthruser's of Charlevoix.

Weigandt, formerly of Bellaire and presently of Shephard Mich., graciously accepted the award which had been suggested as a form of recognition for his 10 years of successful association and friendship with a recent graduate of Boyne City High School, Jeff Troats. Jeff's mother suggested that recognition be given to Weigandt as a tribute to the match which had been made when her son was only nine years old.

Will made the Big Brother commitment to Jeff at that time, to visit and become a reliable friend and counselor every week. Will would travel the 25-30 miles from Bellaire to Boyne City to be with Jeff and live up to that commitment. He gave unselfishly of his time, helping Jeff through the often rough, often enjoyable times associated with growing up. Always Will encouraged him to strive for good grades, a healthy self image, and good citizenship. Rather than a chore, the pledge of loyalty to Jeff became a source of enjoyment, pride and personal fulfillment which Will still treasures today.

Referring to the beauty of the relationship illustrated by Will Weigandt and Jeff Troats, Marshall commented that "this is really what we're all about." It is finding matches of willing persons for needing youngsters, the qualities of the former which must include compassion, consistency, companionship and the loyalty of "being there" when needed.

Special recognition was given to local businesses and patrons who have donated of their time, dollars and facilities over the years on behalf of the Big Brothers-Big Sisters Organization. A special thanks goes out to Edwards IGA of Boyne City and Charlevoix, Oleson's Country Star Market of Boyne City, Taylor's IGA, Paul Bunyan Lanes, The American Legion of Charlevoix and Boyne City, Boyne City Lanes, Boyne City and Bob and Jeans Supermarket.

Also to Bill Miller, former volunteer case worker, who worked selflessly and diligently over the years before the present Mr. Marshall continued his position.

At the present there is a waiting list of young people desperately needing Big Brothers or Big Sisters. Mr. Marshall cited that at least 20 could be placed right now in each Boyne City, East Jordan and Charlevoix. There are about 12 viable matches in existence at this time. Volunteers are especially needed in the East Jordan area.

Referrals come through the schools, from Probate Court and from concerned parents. Applicants are screened and matched carefully. These situations regarding children in need of an adult helping hand, require top notch people who want to do something out of love and kindness and are most importantly, willing to give of their time.

What is a Big Brother or Big Sister?

A Big Brother or Sister is an average person who thinks he or she can be a friend and guide to a child seeking help.

A Big Brother or Sister has friendship and companionship to offer.

A Big Brother or Sister is a volunteer.

A Big Brother or Sister is a person, over 18, who understands and appreciates the art of friendship.

Friendship Has Many Faces

When Joey was eight and his sister Anne, five, their father was sent to prison. Both children had been victims of abuse. While their mother worked full time, their alcoholic father lost job after job, taking his frustrations and anger out on the child. He was eventually arrested for robbery.

Joey and Anne were referred to Big Brothers/Big Sisters by the Charlevoix County Health Department.

Joey's Big Brother was a young man who worked an early shift, so he met Joey after school. In the winter they bowled, talked, went to games, or worked on Joey's school problems. Summers they spent their time together pursuing the Big Brother's favorite sports -- fishing and motor boating.

They were Big Brother - Little Brother for nearly ten years. Today they are still close friends.

Joey is a junior at Michigan State University, studying biology -- an interest he credits to his Big Brother and the summers they spent on the water.

Anne's Big Sister is an older woman who still finds time to call at least once a week to chat with her Little Sister. She has helped Anne obtain a number of part-time jobs and has listened sympathetically as Anne talked of her problems growing up.

Today Anne is in high school, doing well, and considering a career as an executive secretary.

The Board of Directors is actively seeking members from the Boyne City and East Jordan and Charlevoix areas. To be a member of the Board of Directors one need not necessarily be a Big Brother or Big Sister. People interested in serving on the Board of Directors should call or write Big Brothers/Big Sisters, Charlevoix --547-6314.

Ask Santa to Bring a Big Brother

Jim, a friendly, bright nine year old, hopes Santa Claus will bring him a Big Brother. His own father died when he was nine months old.

Jim's mother, too, hopes a Big Brother will come along for him. She is an older woman who finds that the age difference between her son and herself makes communication increasingly difficult. She knows he is somewhat coddled by not having a man with whom he can roughhouse, play and learn.

Jim needs a patient and kind Big Brother.

Test drillings heighten TCE threat

by DAVE KNIGHT

Four test wells drilled near the City of Charlevoix pumphouse have further localized the source of trichloroethylene (TCE) contamination of the city's water supply and indicate a potential for higher, more dangerous levels of the suspected cancer-causing chemical.

City manager Robert Hunt has thus recommended that the process of locating a new city water supply begin immediately.

The presence of TCE in the city water supply was first confirmed in October by Department of Health tests.

Test wells recently drilled around the city's pumphouse in the Lake Michigan Beach park have revealed that the TCE is definitely coming from a groundwater source which may have as much as twice the concentration of the chemical as has been found so far in city water.

Of the four wells drilled, the highest TCE concentration was found at test well number two located near the gate to the pumphouse where a reading of 36 parts per billion (ppb) was taken. Test wells drilled on the beach and at a point southeast of the pumphouse turned up no traces of TCE while one drilled at the far north end of the parking lot showed 3 ppb.

In a report to City Council members, city manager Hunt said that the 36 ppb reading at test well number two may indicate only the edge of a plume of groundwater contamination.

"There is some reason to believe," wrote Hunt, "that none of the test wells are tapping the highest concentration of TCE to be found in the area groundwater. In fact, we believe that there may be areas on one side of well number two or the other which are much more contaminated."

One important finding revealed through comparison of water hardness near the lake and further inland is that 45 percent of Charlevoix's water comes from Lake Michigan and 55 percent from groundwater.

This indicates that the TCE from the groundwater is being diluted in the city well and that actual concentrations in the groundwater source may be much higher. With consistent readings from the city well at 18 to 33 ppb of TCE and the 45 percent dilution of lake water which is known to be pure, there is a possibility for groundwater contamination of from 32 to 60 ppb.

Informal federal guidelines set 75 ppb of TCE as a dangerous level on the basis of toxicity alone, regardless of its possible link to cancer about which little is known.

Hunt expressed concern that the percentage of contaminated groundwater in the city supply may increase dramatically and with little notice in times of heavy usage. He termed the current city water supply as "highly vulnerable" and "potentially volatile".

In asking for further direction from the council, Hunt estimated costs for locating an alternative water supply at "tens of thousands of dollars". He also suggested that the cooperation of Charlevoix Township be sought in the effort.

Among options listed were a single well field in a different location, several wells throughout the city or a deeper well at the present site.

Boundary Commission to rule this week on city-township merger

Whether the City of Charlevoix and Charlevoix Township shall be allowed to continue studying a possible consolidation will be decided Thursday by the State Boundary Commission in Lansing.

Commission members have three options available to them. They may allow the long process of consolidation to continue, they may deny the petition to consolidate or they may approve of a consolidation with adjusted boundaries.

Petitions for consolidation were filed on behalf of the city in February, 1980 and a public hearing on the issue was held in August of that year.

According to Boundary Commission administrator James Hyde, the situation is particularly unique because of the urban-rural contrast between the city and township. In its 13 year history, said Hyde, the Boundary Commission has never before been petitioned for such a consolidation.

Hyde pointed out emphatically that approval of the petition is only the first step in a long process.

City and township residents have 45 days, if the commission thinks a merger is feasible, to file for a referendum vote. If such a vote is held and either the township or the city votes independently against consolidation, the matter is closed.

If no referendum is held or if both units vote in favor of the idea, a nine-member charter commission is formed and has two years or two attempts to develop a charter agreeable to both units.

The Boundary Commission decision is scheduled to be announced at a 2 p.m. meeting in Lansing.

Stability reigns at Hoskins where women outnumber men 60 to one

by SARA GAY DAMMANN

At Hoskins Manufacturing there's more than the usual Christmas spirit in the air.

One reason is that while the unemployement in Charlevoix County is the highest in the state – 17.3 – Hoskins is running three full shifts plus overtime, producing wire for the appliance industry.

The 54 women and 7 men are not gloating. They share the feelings of Kay Bartz, "You can't imagine what it means. There isn't a girl in this shop who doesn't wonder if unemployment will hit us."

Hoskins, which produces wire of all dimensions from 21 gauge to wire eob-web fine, for such manufacturers as G.E., Amana, Hot Watt, Maytag and even the Apollo space program, is one of seven plants, all subsidiaries of Armada Corporation of Detroit.

The Charlevoix plant has other distinctions. Women out number men 60 to 1, a fact many employees think accounts for a difference in management style and plant atmosphere.

No bells ring, no whistles blow. While there's the usual time clock to punch, family considerations are enough to permit a worker to call that she'll be late or leave her job for an hour to take a sick child to the doctor.

Most of the women are married. For years, according to Kay Bartz, who has been at Hoskins for 9 years, with seven years off in the middle for her children, the majority of workers were farm wives. Their jobs at Hoskins provided the extra income farmers always seem to be looking for.

"Now our income is a necessity," the young mother observed, as she made an adjustment on a long machine that bunches and strands 19 fine wires into one for thermocouples.

Today many of the women's husbands are laid off from lagging local construction and auto related industries of northern Michigan.

"Working", says Julie Christiansen, "is going to mean a brighter Christmas. Look at all the other places, down to zippo. Anyone with a job should be grateful."

While complex machines whirl wire through diamond cutting heads, some stretching wire to barely visible sizes, and annealing machines glow with intense heat as wire is treated for thermocouples, the day shift women walk between their machines, comparing progress with colleagues nearby, keeping an eye on automatic machines tended by the night shift or bend in serious concentration over the annoying kinks in finer wires.

Architect Jack Begrow's sketch of the atrium area in the proposed project.

Plans told for Atrium conference center

City Planning Commission members got their first look Monday at the plans for an 82-unit motel-conference center proposed to be built on the present site of the Archway Motel this winter.

Craig Wise, owner of the Archway Motel, has cited lack of motel units and need for more year-round meeting facilities in Charlevoix as the major reasons for the project.

Plans for the "Atrium Motel and Conference Center", designed by Charlevoix architect Jack Begrow, include 82 motel units clustered around a central, sunlit atrium with a swimming pool, bar, tropical trees and plants, a hot tub and adjacent rooms that could be used for health club-type facilities.

The structure is comprised of two stories above ground and one below so that the maximum 35-foot height dictated by the proximity of the airport is not surpassed. All existing structures on the property, which extends east of Highway 31 all the way to the school bus garage, will be taken down.

Said Wise, "It was especially obvious last summer that Charlevoix does not have sufficient facilities to accomodate the number of people coming to town." Wise pointed to the overwhelming success of the Bay Queen-Seahawk dinner cruises as the major factor responsible for the influx of out-of-town visitors. He also said that he will study the possibility of running a shuttle service from the Atrium location to the Bay Queen dock downtown.

Monday's presentation to the Planning Commission was for informational purposes only; the commission is scheduled to take action on the site plan at its December 28 meeting. If a recommendation is made at that time, the site plan will then be on the City Council agenda for approval at its January 4 meeting. Wise has indicated that he hopes to complete the project for the 1982 tourist season.

Building permits plummet

The coming of winter added to the woes of the hard-hit construction industry in Charlevoix County last month. The Department of Building Inspection issued only 20 permits during November, and, of these, only four were for new structures – three houses and a small commercial building.

The remaining building permits covered nine residential additions and remodeling jobs, and three garages. There were also two demolitions and two mobile home placements.

Through November, the Charlevoix County Department of Building Inspection had issued 479 permits covering construction amounting to $8,238,447. The busiest month for the Department was September, when 76 permits were issued.

Veterans office to be closed

The Charlevoix County Office of Veterans Affairs located in the county building will be closed for vacation from 5 p.m. December 18 through January 12, Ronald Geer, Veterans Counselor, has announced.

The office will be open December 18 and will then be closed until Friday, January 15 when it will re-open. Office hours will be from 9 a.m. to 12 noon and 1 until 5 p.m., Tuesdays and Fridays.

Effective January 15, work will begin on Homestead Property Tax Forms Geer said.

Pensioners are also advised that Pension Questionaire cards must be at the Veterans Administration Special Processing unit in Philadelphia no later than December 31, 1981. You are advised to mail them early because of the jam up in large post offices at holiday time. If the card is not in Philadelphia by December 31 you will be informed by letter that your benefits have been suspended and you will not receive you check in February.

If a veteran should have an emergency during the vacation period mentioned above, he or she may contact Robert Muma at 547-2271.

Hoskins Manufacturing...

"Hoskins is the type of place you either work in for two days or twenty years," Patty Gillespie, an employee of 8½ years observed.

"If something comes up you can leave for awhile. If you call in, as I did with a flat tire yesterday, that's okay. You can request to make up your time if you want," Wilma Sitzema, a 14 year employee added.

"Trust" is the word Elgie Weisler, a seven year employee chose to describe management policy. "My initials go on each spool of this thermocouple wiring, along with my test data," Mrs. Weisler was passing wires through a testing machine, carefully watching digital read outs. "The customer wants to know exactly what this wire can stand up against. I love the challange. I requested this job."

Plant manager of four years Barbara Skeel, was one of the first employees hired when Hoskins opened in Charlevoix 20 years ago.

"We've always done things this way," Mrs. Skeel said, surprised that someone might think management policies unusual. "We want to be humanitarian."

Mrs. Bartz characterized the policy: "We each have total responsibility for what we do. We work closely with fellow workers and we take a concern about how things come out.

"Every three months we are given the company's financial report. Staying informed about the business helps us all," she continued.

"Rules here are only for the abusers. Management is very lenient with us. After all, they are women, too," she laughed.

Without invoking feminist rhetoric, many employees indicated that there is an unusual sense of involvement between management and workers.

Several production and waste charts line the walls of the company lunch room. Employees are interested in the direction the graphs take as an indicator of the size of the annual "extra compensation" each employee receives after a year's employment.

Base salary is $6.43 an hour. Top salary in production is $6.72. Virtually all employees are on the same wage scale, and all learn most phases of production. The end of the year bonus, a profit sharing device, ranged from $200 to $2000 last year, depending on seniority.

Many employees specifically request work in a particular end of production, like Elgie Weisler did for testing. Some seek the challenge of fine wire, others prefer working with heavier, less fragile wire.

"Some people shudder at working with wire this fine," Donna Easterwood laughed as she arranged spools of wire destined for resisters. "To me it's a challange."

As a recent visitor toured the plant, workers stopped to discuss their particular phase of production. Speaking of annealing processes, thermocouples, resisters, electro-motive forces or the range of alloys (nickel to platinum) with which they work, they lost their listener in a morass of scientific and technical information.

The workers who were with Hoskins 10 years ago take particular pride in having produced one of the first objects to touch the moon when astronaut Neal Armstrong went for his famous walk.

"We produced wire yarn, softer than nylon, that was used in astronauts clothing and on the bottom of their boots," Mrs. Skeel explained. After the tragic fire when three astronauts were killed, we were asked to produce a wire thread for their clothing that would act as a heat shield.

"I dreamed about that wire," Evelyn Selph, who's been with the plant 19 years, remembering with a slight grimace.

A non-union shop, employees work out annual contracts through a bargaining committee. In addition to the schedule of "extra compensation" and a raise in base salary expected next August, employees will add dental benefits to their benefits of life insurance, full Blue Cross, retirement, semi-annual eye exams, the week of Christmas - New Years off, a long Thanksgiving weekend, two weeks vacation for employees of eight years or under, three weeks for employees with over eight years.

Not surprisingly, there's a sign on the plant's front door: "We are not accepting any applications for employment."

County budget up 4.8 percent

by PEG OHLE

Despite a wage increase of seven percent to most of its employees, Charlevoix County's budget for 1982 shows an increase of only 4.8 percent over 1981.

The County Board of Commissioners has appropriated $2,510,424 to run the County for the coming year. Property taxes amounting to $1,391,615 will provide most of the operating budget. Other sources of sizeable amounts are Federal Revenue Sharing, $278,660; State Revenue Sharing, $100,000; District Court Costs and Fees, $98,000; Interest on Invested Money, $60,000; Industrial Facilities Tax, $56,000; and Single Business Tax, $50,000

Commissioner Oral Sutliff, who presented the budget to the County Board, pointed out that it is possible Revenue Sharing Funds will be cut during 1982, in which case they would have to be replaced by funds from the County's Contingency Account as needed.

All County departments show an increase in operating expenses, ranging from $45,667 for the Judicial offices to $8,052 for the Health Department.

A summary of 1982 budget figures is presented below along with comparable figures for 1981.

High school counselors are on students' side

by ANNE KELLY

"We are the only student advocates in the school." Charles Bentley, Charlevoix High School guidance counselor began to describe his role as part of a team which has been serving the high school and its students for eight years. "Gayle and I are the only persons hired specifically for the students per se." Bentley was referring to counselor Gail Gennett who had been hired at the same time in an effort to revitalize a very important department in the high school. High school counselors are "middle persons" of sorts, forming a liason between the students and their parents and teachers. Their roles are as various as the students who find themselves at the open door of an extremely casual and accessible office. They may find themselves involved in a one-on-one counseling session with a student having problems at home, and perhaps in the next breath find themselves passing along academic information for the college bound student who has stopped in to browse through college catalogues. As counselors, Bentley and Gennett are involved in educational and vocational guidance, testing, the setting up of classroom programs, and assisting the staff and parents as well as their individual counseling duties. They work in conjunction with other community support groups such as Chip Counseling Center, The Dept. of Social Services, the Char-Em Intermediate School District and the Department of Mental Health in Petoskey. Often they find themselves involved with the city police, the sheriff, probate court and district court. In short, as Gayle paused to summarize her role and her duties, "Sometimes I feel like an information booth, where students and parents may come to find both information and help."

Gayle Gennett is a vivacious and concerned young woman. If she had to describe her duties as a counselor, she would say that she seems to work more with the non-college bound student who comes to here with either personal concerns or is in need of vocational guidance. "I am an advisor, a listener, and an intercommunicator between the student and other factions like teachers, parents, the administration and other schools or colleges," Gayle explains. "It's hard to describe what I am, as a counselor, but I can tell you what I do." And what she does in the course of any single day, defines a multi-faceted and diverse role within her profession.

I wondered about Gayle's maintaining a sense of equilibrium in the midst of dealing with student problems and parent-teacher concerns, all loaded and emotionally charged issues for a counselor. Gayle has learned to effectively cope with stress and attempts to place the problems she encounters in her job in proper perspective within a total life which includes a husband and two small children.

Knight on the Town

Success story

by Dave Knight

One last chance.

Physically handicapped, emotionally confused and ready to give up on life completely on that Thursday in April three years ago, Nancy LaCroix did not really think that a visit to CHIP Counseling Center would make things any better.

But it was one last chance - a chance she owed herself after the 20 years of struggle that had been her life until then.

Nancy, of East Jordan, was born with spina bifida, a disease that occurs in the developing fetus between the sixth and eighth week of pregnancy. It is, literally, an opening in the spine. Its severity depends upon where the opening is located. When near the neck or tailbone, the effects are usually less crippling.

When in the beltline area, however, such as in Nancy's case, it is most severe causing almost total paralysis, sometimes mental retardation and often death. This was the prognosis given to Nancy's parents who were told by specialists in Ann Arbor two weeks after she was born that the best thing they could do was take her home and make her comfortable. The implication was that she did not have long to live.

Thus her struggle began.

Paralyzed and deformed from her shoulders down, she underwent major surgery at the age of four and was fitted for her first wheelchair at five. As physically afflicted as she was, Nancy showed no signs of mental slowness and was enrolled in the East Jordan public schools kindergarten class along with all the other local children her age.

"My only remembrance of that time was looking forward to when I would be able to walk just like all the other children," says Nancy.

As the years went by, that hope grew dim and by the time she reached seventh grade, Nancy fully realized that she was going to be different for the rest of her life.

"From seventh to ninth grade was the worst time of my life. The other kids were just then getting into dating and forming peer groups. I did not have any close friends and was not included in any of the fun activities that went on. It was as if I was on the outside looking in."

High school was not much different but by then Nancy had become used to the ostracism. Only occasionally did she feel anger and even then it was suppressed.

"Am I invisible?" she thought, "Doesn't anybody see me? Why can't I interact?"

The answer to her questions lay in the attitude so many able-bodied people have toward the handicapped.

"It's fear," says Nancy, "When people see me they are horrified at what could have happened to them. I remind people of their own vulnerability. It's a shame because that fear prevents them from really getting to know me."

Nancy first sought counseling in high school. As a junior she realized she had problems she could not handle by herself and, perhaps more importantly, that she had no desire to handle by herself.

She saw two counselors through the school but their help was not enough.

At age 19, one year out of high school and becoming more and more confused about her life, Nancy was referred to another counseling service. The results were almost disastrous.

"She (the counselor), without even listening to me for more than five minutes, said that I was expecting too much out of life; that I was selfish; that I was just going to have to lace life as it was and not try to make it any better. When she left, my mind was swimming. I didn't know which end was up."

"That was the closest I've ever come to just saying 'That's all. I give up!'".

But she had one last chance.

Some members of her family had had some experience with CHIP Counseling Center in Charlevoix. Distraught and frustrated as she was, Nancy decided she owed herself that last chance even if it was a long shot.

Even as she sat in the CHIP waiting room, she was apprehensive. Terry Smith had just joined the staff a week earlier as a new counselor. Nancy had wanted to see clinical director Oren Schroeder because of the high recommendations given him by her family. But he was booked solidly. What, she thought, could a complete stranger like Terry Smith do for me that three counselors had not been able to.

She found out in short order.

"The minute I went into the room with Terry, I knew I could find a better way. I'll never forget the first thing he said to me. He said, 'Nancy, I don't have any answers for you...but I will help you find your own answers; I will accompany you on the journey.' I now know how important that concept is."

Nancy and Terry's "journey" has continued steadily since that first encounter in 1978. They meet weekly for an hour session at the CHIP office. Their relationship is not, she is quick to point out, that of counselor-patient.

"We work as a team. The bond between us is friendship. Together we have defined my feelings for the first time in my life. I am a new person, a stronger person.. There are still times when I cannot deal with my feelings but just the assurance that CHIP is there to help carries me through."

At 23, Nancy has accumulated 18 credit hours at North Central Michigan College in Petoskey. Her aspirations are to finish requirements at NCMC for an Associate degree and go on to Central Michigan University for a Bachelors degree in - what else - counseling.

Doctors tell her that spina bifida patients do not usually live longer than 40 or 50 years. But then, doctors did not expect her to make it home from the hospital when she was born.

"It's not the length of time one lives that matters at all," says Nancy, "It is the quality of life that matters. CHIP Counseling Center has made this realization possible for me."

"Once you settle for life the way it is and not try to make it better, you ultimately die. You die a death much worse than death itself."

Clockwise

Lights at the end of the tunnel

by Rob Clock

ALTHOUGH THE state and national economies are in a state of turmoil, Charlevoix area developers are looking toward a bright future.

And with the Charlevoix County's unemployment rate leading the state at 17.3 percnt, we can use all the bright news we can find.

I can't recall a time when so many big projects have either been on the drawing board — or under way — at the same time.

The new McDonald's Restaurant on South Bridge Street, for example, is under cover, permitting interior work to proceed over the winter in preparation for a spring opening. Although some blue-bloods look askance at the blossoming of a "fast food" chain restaurant in a town known for high-dining amid fancy surroundings, the Clocks are delighted. When you're suffering a "Big Mac Attack," those 17 miles to Petoskey can take an eternity.

Plans for an 82-unit luxury motel and conference center at the site of the Archway Motel also are exciting.

For years we all have known that Charlevoix needs some kind of convention facilities, particularly to help us through the "off" seasons every spring and fall. I always envisioned meeting rooms and a small auditorium incorporated into a civic center which would offer swimming, tennis, racquetball and other diversions to the community at large.

I could see all of our motel and restaurant owners, the Chamber of Commerce and the city council working together on the project.

But now Archway Motel owner Craig Wise is developing a convention center on his own and we wish him tons of success. Boyne Country's Everett Kircher has proven that conventioneers like Northern Michigan and it's time Charlevoix shared in some of the action.

THE NEW COMMERCIAL complex at the junction of Ferry Avenue and Stover Road also has a great deal of appeal. In case you haven't been out that way lately, the project is well under way and of the basement walls on the south, west and east already are in place.

The brainchild of Michael Barnard, the building will house a party store on the first level, a restaurant on the second level and a few motel units on the third level.

I suspect the new business will welcomed in particular by boaters who tie up at the Irish Boat Shop as well as patrons of the city boat lauching ramp across the street. I wish I had a dime for every time I have seen boaters trudging down Ferry Avenue toward town in search of a place to pick up a quart of milk or a sandwich.

Barnard's facility will give boaters both shopping and dining in their own backyard. And their overnight guests can stay at the motel when there isn't room for them aboard.

ANOTHER UPCOMING project is the "7-11" store coming to the corner of Belvedere Avenue and Bridge Street, present home of Muma's Sunoco Service. The store not only will serve boaters in the city marina but townspeople as well.

I understand changes also are in the wind for the south end of town — changes which will give more variety to the Captain's Corner shopping complex.

Such investments bode well for the future of Charlevoix as a good place to work, live and play.

Letters: Drug sentences

Appalled at sentencing

To the Editor,

After reading in the Charlevoix Courier on the recent sentencing of 34 people arrested in Charlevoix County this past summer's drug bust, I was appalled to learn that the money received for fines is to go to the library.

I just couldn't understand the judge's reasoning for this action.

This money should have been returned back to the Sheriff's Department for future use in drug investigations.

Some of those sentenced were even laughing at the judge's decision and I couldn't have blamed them.

Knowing that their fines were to be used to support future drug investigations, could have made some impact on those sentenced to think twice next time.

National statistics shows that of persons released from Correctional Institutions 55% of them will return as repeaters in over a 5 year period of time.

I commend and support the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Department and Sheriff George Lasater, for all they have done in combating crime and drugs in our County.

It is totally unfair for these men and women to risk their lifes each day in return for a judge to slap the hands of those convicted of these crimes.

I think the taxpayers of Charlevoix County deserve an explanation for the judge's decision.

Why?

Patty Muma

Adds insult to injury

To the Editor:

A week ago, I had the opportunity to be in the Charlevoix County Court House to witness the sentencing of thirty-four defendants, who were arrested in the big drug bust that took place in August.

To my surprise and chagrin, the sentences were extremely light in view of the accusation. These were some of the people who were responsible for the drug flow in Charlevoix and neighboring counties.

With the exception of two, all other defendants had court appointed lawyers because they were unable to pay lawyer fees. The county will pick up the tab.

All the defendants were given fines of $240 or $300 and one was given a $1,000 fine to be paid to the court for the library fund. Not the Charlevoix County Library but the library in Lansing.

The Sheriff and his deputies did a good (with a great deal of time and effort) job to obtain convictions. After pre-trial, the judge reviews all the reports so be can pronounce sentence. All defendants pled guilty. The Circuit judge in this area deems fit to be quite lenient. A few got 30 days but most were let off with a reprimand and the fine. There are probably some out on the street back in business.

It seems to me that the judge wants to add insult to injury by allowing the fine money to be sent out of the county when it should rightiully stay in the county to pay for espenses incurred.

4-H Notes

Some holiday gift and recipe ideas

by LEAH GREEN

I hope your plans for the coming holidays are going well and that everyone is getting into that holiday festive mood as you make and bake and shop with others in mind.

Along that line I'd like to share with you as a sort of holiday gift from 4-H some ideas and recipes from a 4-H monthly publication for those interested in foods. It's called Eat's & Treats. Eat's & Treats can be used for on-going food clubs to enrich their material from one or more of the many 4-H foods manuals or it could be used alone as the material it contains is usually in a them for the month.

The current issue, of course, is concerned with the upcoming holidays. I'll give you some of what is contained and if you are interested in any of the safety tips, recipes, or good gift ideas just give us a call at the Extension Service, 582-6232 or drop by the office at 319 B. North Lake Street in the City Hall Building, Boyne City for a copy of what you would like.

Food is an important part of most holiday celebrations. Large gatherings, family reunions or parties centering on potlucks call for more refrigeration space than many homes can provide. Therefore careful planning is really necessary as well as advance preparation in many cases. You know that holiday meals frequently take an extended amount of time as we relax and enjoy each others company. Good fellowship and good food go together and the last thing any of us would want would be accidental poisoning by salmonella through improper storage or cooking or standing out too long. Eat's & Treats covers preparation, thawing, the rules for handling stuffing, roasting and aerving poultry and handling leftovers safely. Give yourself a holiday gift and relax knowing that your meal is safe in every respect. The Extension Service Office will reprint this needed information for you. Serveral available pamphlets on food safety are also listed for you to order.

For many people the words diet and calorie are very unpleasant to hear during the holiday season. After all so much of our holiday tradition involves food. However with some careful preparation these foods do not have to be high in calories. Sensible eating can keep you from being unhappy with yourself in January. Likewise, your guests may appreciate some foods that are a little less rich as part of a Big Meal...allowing them to enjoy it more. This sensible planning can keep the stress level down for overweight persons. It will keep their guilt from building if not faced with calorie laden snacks and enlarge the choices available. This Eat's & Treats issue has some tips along this line as well as local recipes for dip for vegetables, a red boliday punch, onion dressing and pineapple yogurt pie.

All can enjoy learning about foreign Christmas customs. Swedish customs are covered in the Eat's & Treats as well as a recipe for Lucia Bread, a saffron flavored dish specialty served on December 13 in that country.

Some good useful food gifts are also given in Eat's & Treats this time. One really good one is for small gift jars of bomemade seasoned salt for use in egg, fish, cheese and meat dishes. Many people also find use for seasoned salt in various dips. This is simple to do, fairly expenalve to buy readymade, and would be appreciated by many folks, especially those whose incomes don't allow for even this kind of extra, and for the person who has everything. For children's gifts there is a recipe for pliable play dough that can be colored and presented in small bags. This is a real fine inexpensive remembrance for the youngsters on your list.

Another practical food gift is a mix that can make up to three loaves of yummy, yeasty whole wheat bread. The mix recipe and the recipe for making it up into bread are both given. You could make the mix and include the directions for making it up in your gift to some busy friend or relative. Or if you like, make the bread up in quantity using the prepared ahead mix as you need it, making your baking a little more efficient as you find the time.

Last but not least Eat's & Treats includes quick recipes for gifts of fine rice and flavor packets that will cook up to beef or chicken flavored rice. Just like the fancy store boughten ones - in either saucepan or in microwave. These are thoughtful, consume little time and money, and may be just the thing for those on your gift list who are hard to please or just not all that handy in the kitchen themselves. Directions are given here too for different sizes of cloth bags which can be made up quickly to hold rice and flavor packets, bread mix, play dough or a jar of seasoned salt! A nice personal touch.

All of these food ideas are good ones too if your budget squeaks at Christmas time when you want to remember all those who mean so much to you throughout the year. Call or stop in at the Cooperative Extension Office if you would like reprints of any of the information from this release.

Bliss School provides 'homey' alternative

by SARA GAY DAMMANN

Off a dirt road, three miles north of Bliss, 20 miles north of Petoskey, in a quickly constructed one-room building, an experiment in alternative education is being conducted.

The Bliss School, properly called the Bliss home-study project, began this fall with six students ranging from kindergarten to 4th grade, in the building Ray and Leslie Weglarz and other parents helped contruct on property the Weglarz own in an old logging camp.

With no indoor plumbing or other standard facilities of state approved schools, the Bliss school cannot be approved as a "school". But as Charlevoix-Emmet Intermediate School District Superintendent James Shepherd commented recently, "We are aware of the project and hope we can learn something from its teacher Nancy Decker."

Shepherd said he was impressed with the plans Miss Decker explained to him and he intends to have the teacher speak to others in the district about her philosophy.

Basically, the idea of the Bliss school is deep parental involvement in the education of their children. The children meet with the teacher three days a week and take contracted work home the rest of the week, to be accomplished under parental supervision.

"Involving the parents in the education makes for more consistance in children's education," Miss Decker, a 1979 Michigan State University graduate in elementary education explained recently.

The other key ingredient in the teacher's approach is involving the students themselves in the creation of their own teaching aides. Rather than a room full of ready made teaching materials, each student helps construct his or her own, using natural materials.

High school counselors: student advocates

Three years ago, Gayle initiated two successful programs for the counseling department of which she is particularly proud. One is "Peer Group Counseling". This program involves junior and senior high school students who assume an active big brother or big sister role for an elementary child who may be a potential problem later on. The older students are trained in listening techniques and other skills of communication. They make a point to "be there" for the younger child, to see them at home or at school, to help them with their studies and to remember their birthdays. They provide the stimulus and support of a constructive relationship from which both sides benefit.

The second program is "Divorce Conseling", in which high school students who are the product of broken homes may find a place to vent their feelings and frustrations about their situation.

A graduate of Eastern Michigan University, Mrs. Gennett earned a B.A. in art education. After teaching art of the K-7 level and finding that her interest lay in helping kids on a one-to-one as opposed to classroom level, she returned to Eastern where she received her M.A. in Guidance and Counseling. While working on her degree, Gayle engaged in volunteer work at a crisis center in Ypsilanti where she learned to put theory in practice in preparation for her present position at the high school. She has participated in the high school counseling team with Charles Bentley since 1974.

Charles Bentley is the perfect compliment to the team. Large in stature, gregarious by nature, I felt immediately at ease in his presence. Beyond the counseling duties, which constitute the major part of his day, Mr. Bentley (Chuck or Charlie to his friends and colleagues) also teaches two hours a day, a senior course in behavioral science, one semester each of sociology and psychology. An "extra-circular", stemming from an interest in sports, is a 30 hour course in sports medicine. Mr. Bentley has organized a comprehensive student-trainer program which prepares his students to deal with athletic injuries. He works as a laison between the coaches and the team physician to train students to do everything from taping ankles to performing CPR.

But Bentley's main concern is his counseling profession. Receiving his degree from Eastern Michigan University in counseling and student personnel services, Charles came to Charlevoix with eight years of counseling experience. His career began on the under graduate level as he worked as a graduate assistant while earning his Masters degree. Subsequently, he served one year at St. Thomas where he served as the assistant Dean of Students. Next, he spent a challenging year as an intern of student affairs at the University of Connecticut at the time of the Dow Chemical riots. From this hot bed of experience, Charles spent 5 years involved in high school counseling in Connecticut before joining the staff at Charlevoix High School in 1974. In Charlevoix, both Charles and wife Chris, also a teacher in the Charlevoix schools, have found a life which seems to satisfy their personal and professional aspirations.

As regards his segment of the counseling program, Mr. Bentley is a man who lives by the words "Know thyself". He strongly believes that a person must feel comfortable with oneself before he can relate successfully with others. A firm believer in the "30-second" counselling approach, he makes it a point to establish personal contact with students throughout the day on a casual and consistent basis. This technique is one which facilitates communication and lays the necessary groundwork should a future counseling encounter be desired.

"High school students don't need to be told what to do," Bentley feels. "They need to have someone help them direct the traffic in their lives...to sort things out...to find out what in fact they themselves want to or have the capability to do."

He likes to tell his student confidants that what they have is not a "problem" but rather a "situation that needs to be resolved". For many high school students, especially those approacbng graduation, the reality of "now what", looms heavily upon their shoulders. Coupled with academic, social and familial pressures, the uncertainty about their niche in society is an overwhelming prospect. The role of the counselor, then, is to alleviate this burden. The student's dilemma is the "stuff" out of which the counselor's role is fashioned. It is an incredibly significant role. Even the professionally trained counselor has moments of being unable to cope with certain problems. The teamwork of a counselor team and the availability of community support groups make the job more effective in the long run.

Both Bentley and Gennett appear to enjoy their work and feel a great deal of satisfaction from their dealings with high school students. Their role is an on-going process which does not necessarily stop at the school door nor at graduation from high school. Many students and parents continue to keep in touch with the relationship established over the years in the high school counseling office. The nature of the job is one of trail and error, failure and success.

"I thing that a counselor needs two things", Gayle notes. "Patience and a sense of humor."

Both counselors appear dedicated to the kids whom they serve in the course of a busy and often hectic day. In the spirit of helping the students to resolve their difficulties, to find the best which is in themselves and go with it, they are encouraging an essential skill in the area of human relations.

There is a small placard thumbtacked on the bulletin board in Charles Bentley's office behind his desk. It seems to put the goals and limitations of counselors, as well as human beings in general, in an nutshell:

"There ain't no man can avoid being born average, but there ain't no man got to be common." – Satchel Paige

New boat registration rules proposed

The U.S. Coast Guard is proposing new rules to simplify the administrative and paperwork procedures involved in documenting a vessel.

Documenting is the term used for federal procedures in registering a vessel by the owner.

The proposed regulations will eliminate or streamline a number of the forms used in the registration procedure. Requirements for marking the vessel's name, number and "hailing" port will be made more flexible. A "hailing" port is either where the vessel's documentation papers are kept or where the owner resides.

Other changes in the proposal include eliminating requirements to: report changes of vessel master to the Coast Guard; to require the vessel owner to show proof of citizenship if a non-native born citizen of the U.S.; advertise changes in a vessel's name; physically surrender and replace a vessel's document papers whenever the contents change and present the registration papers for annual renewal.

Some of the fees charged by the Coast Guard will change as a result of the proposed changes in regulations. For example, the fee for initial documentation of a vessel used only for pleasure by the owner will go from $75 to $100. The $15 annual renewal fee of a vessel's papers will be eliminated.

The comment period on the new proposals will close January 15, 1982.

After start on West Coast, BMX has spead across nation

Dan Miller, publicity chairman for the Charlevoix Township BMX Association, recently compiled the following history of BMX bicycle racing to help promote the new sport in the Charlevoix Area.

The history of BMX racing is a story of demand creating the supply. That is, there were BMX riders before there were BMX bicycles.

The name BMX, or, bicycle moto-cross, comes from its predecessor, motorcycle moto-cross racing which is often seen on Saturday afternoon television. Motocross involves dirt-type motorcycles racing over rugged terrain.

Motocross racing started in Europe, not the U.S.A. as many people believe. One of the most popular tracks is, however, located in California at Carlsbad between Los Angeles and San Diego.

The birth of BMX occurred not far from this location when some youngsters watching a motocross race at the Indian Dunes track persuaded promoter Ernie Alexander to hold a race for them with bicycles instead of motorcycles.

In the early days of the sport, about 13 years ago, BMX was not very sophisticated. The bikes used were mostly old Schwinn Sting Rays and girls' 20-inch bikes. Until Marvin Churcb's dad welded a frame together, there hadn't really been such a thing as a BMX bike.

BMX started like many other California fads such as skateboards, roller skating and hula hoops. But BMX did not quite fit the same mold. From the beginning its growth was controlled and as the sport grew, so did the need for sanctioning organizations.

The first of these were the American Bicycle Association, (ABA), the National Bicycle Association, (NBA), and the National Bicycle League, (NBL). These groups were designed to be the governing bodies for local tracks. Point tabulation, race regulations and insurance coverage are some of their responsibilities.

At about the same time the sanctioning organizations were started came the manufacture of specialty equipment. The first small BMX manufacturers were successful because of the growing demand and because the major bicycle manufacturers were not interested in taking a risk in the young sport. Pioneering companies such as BMX Products, Redline and Torker took the early lead in the field behind youog, aggressive management.

Schwinn was the first major bicycle company to jump on the bandwagon. The decision of the Chicago-based firm to get into BMX may have been one of its the more profitable moves. It also helped promote the western-rooted BMX in the Midwest and East. Other major manufacturers such as Huffy and Murray based in Ohio soon followed Schwinn's lead.

As much technology goes into the manufacture of BMX bikes as in the aerospace industry. Several different metal alloys are used as well as a variety of plastics and rubber compounds.

Today, after 50 years, BMX is going strong in all 50 states and many foreign countries. It is a multi-million dollar industry just like baseball, football and other sports requiring special equipment.

Such places as the Pontiac Silverdome, Knott's Berry Farm and the Texas and Oklahoma State Fairs have successfully hosted BMX races attracting hundreds of equipment companies and tens of thousands of BMX riders.

In the Michigan District No. 4, which includes the northern half of the Lower Peninsula and all of the Upper Peninsula, there are now well over 300 riders with ten sanctioned tracks in the district.

And this is only the beginning.

County Board hears funding request from Half Way Home in Petoskey

The Half Way Home in Petoskey, a facility for care and treatment of persons addicted to alcohol and-or drugs, treated 10 residents of Charlevoix County during the past year, a recent report shows.

Speaking before the Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners last week, John Vick, administrator of The Half Way Home, presented figures showing that one Charlevoix County resident spent six months in the Home, while others spent times varying from five months to one month or less. Three Charlevoix residents are still there.

Most Half Way Home occupants are referred to the facility by the courts and by social service agencies. It is supported by the Office of Substance Abuse Services, Department of Social Services, food stamps, on the job training, and local donations. Presently, it costs $31.39 a day to care for occupants and the afore-mentioned support sources have been contributing $24.52 a day. This leaves a shortage of $6.87 to cover each day's care of each patient.

Vick's appearance before the Board of Commissioners was for the purpose of requesting that the County assume this $6.87 shortage for County residents sent to The Half Way Home. The County's 1982 budget allocates $3,500 for The Half Way Home. Vick was promised a review of County participation later in the year if the need arises.

Boyne City, Petoskey fall to Rayder cagers

Charlevoix solidly established itself as a team to be reckoned with in this season's Michigan-Huron Shores basketball race with a pair of big wins over confrence rivals Boyne City and Petoskey.

Last week Tuesday, the Rayders opened their conference season against the Ramblers of Boyne City with a strong second half performance that resulted in a 58-45 victory.

Charlevoix's attack was lackluster in the first two quarters as they trailed 10-7 at the end of the first and 24-23 at halftime.

The momentum changed in the third period, however, with the Rayders outscoring Boyne 20-9 in that quarter and 15-12 in the fourth to pull out the 58-45 final tally.

Mike Loper led the Charlevoix scoring with 15 points while Jim Buchanan contributed 12 and Craig Klooster 11. Boyne City's Brian Vroman led all scorers with 17 and Brad Musser tallied 12 for the Ramblers.

Charlevoix's junior varsity squad topped the Boyne City JVs in the preliminary game by a 60-46 margin. Bill Tillen and Tim LaBlance led the way for the Rayders with 23 and 21 points respectively.

At Petoskey on Friday night, Charlevoix found itself in an almost identical slow-start situation as the Boyne game. The Rayders were outgunned 14-11 in the first quarter and just managed to pull ahead by a point, 27-26 at the half.

It was not until the second half that the Rayders took clear command behind Ross Carey who scored all of his 14 points in the half for a 41-36 lead at the end of the third and a going away 60-48 final score.

Buchanan matched Carey for high individual scoring honors with 14; in a balanced attack, Klooster and Gary Drury each had nine points and Mike Loper eight. Jim Alton and Troy Goodrich each had 14 for the Northmen while Bryan Stump added 12.

In the JV game, Charlevoix was tripped by the young Northmen 57-40. LaBlance accounted for 17 points in the loss while Tillen and Dane Tollas each had nine. Tony Spagnola was top scorer overall with 19 points for Petoskey; Jeff Pulaski added 15.

The Rayders will put their 3-0 (2-0 in conference) record on the line this week against Gaylord at home on Tuesday and Cheboygan on their home court Friday. Tipoff for JV action is at 6:30 p.m. both nights with varsity tipoff at 8 p.m.

Wrestling team places second...

The Charlevoix Rayder matmen placed second in the six-team Manistee Catholic Invitational tournament Saturday.

The Rayders had a total of 168 points, three points behind the tournament winner, Pine River, with 171. They were followed by Glen Lake with 122 points, the host team with 120, Elk Rapids with 55½ and Roscommon with 55.

Charlevoix captured four firsts, three seconds and two thirds to roll up their impressive total. Coach Greg Bryan said his team looked good and did well for being a young team. Alan Bergmann, said Bryan, was probably the best wrestler in the tournament at 167 pounds, a weight class where the competition was the toughest.

Jim Herriman came in first at 98 after winning his final 21-2; Mike Steele at 119 won by a 6-5 decision in the finals; Gregg Whitley (155) and Bergmann both won by pins in their final matches.

Placing second in their respective weight classes were Rick Gallant (132), Darrin Podskalny (198) and heavyweight Shannon Reynolds. Taking third place were Tim Young (112) and Jim Kenney (126).

After traveling to Onaway to compete with the Cardinals and Oscoda Monday night, Charlevoix will host Rogers City Dec. 22 in the final regular season match of 1981.

...But loses to Gaylord

The Charlevoix Rayder matmen dropped their match with Geylord Thursday night by a score of 43-21 with three first Greg Bryan's lads winning by pins-decisions and the fourth by forfeit.

Jim Herriman in the 98 pound class won by a 3-0 decision over D. Embree. Pat Curtis (105) lost to Jason Davis in a pin in 1:44. Tim Young (112) to Kip Stewart in 1:13. Mike Steele (119) lost by a 4-3 decision to Dave Weber. Greg Janz (126) lost to Harvey Johnecheck in a pin in :41. Rick Gallant (132) lost to Mark Kieczynski by a pin in 2:27. Joe Murphy (138) was pinned by Bill Kerr in 5:44. Gregg Whitley (145) won by forfeit. Scott Kelly (155) lost by a 12-1 decision to Ryan Charboneau. Alan Bergmann (167) won by a pin in 2:52 over Ross Kershner. Scott Mervyn (185) was pinned in 1:20 by Rick Rettinger. Darrin Podskalny (198) lost by a pin in 3:21 to Al Grenke. Shannon Reynolds (Hvy. Wt.) won by a pin in :33 over Doug Miller.

The Rayders will travel to the St. Ignace meet Saturday after going to Onaway Monday and will host Rogers City Dec. 22 in their last meet before the holidays.

TIE BREAKER GAME
GWEN'S HARBOR VIEW

Pick the number of points you believe will be scored in the tie-breoker game, and write it in the box.

RULES

1. Anyone can enter, except the employees of the paper and their families. Use the entry blank from the paper or make your own, following the same plan. A copy of the Charlevoix Courier will be available at the Courier office to anyone wishing to copy the list of names.

2. Weekly gift certificates will be awarded to the persons naming the most winners. All the games are considered incorrect unless picked as lies on your entry blank. In case of a tie, persons guessing nearest correct score in the tiebreaker box will win. Insert what you think total score will be of the game in the tie breaker box.

3. Gift certificates are redeemable at any of the participating sponsors on this page only. Entries should be addressed to: Contest Editor, Charlevoix Courier and postmarked by not later then 5 p.m. Thursday night. Winners will be announced the following weeks.

4. On the entry form simply draw a circle around the number of the team you predict will win each of the games listed in each of the ads. Then, predict the total on the points "tie breaker" at the bottom of the entry form.

The City Manager asked Council to table any action regarding renewal of the Airport Use Agreement with Walka Aviation until the next regular council meeting as requested by Mr. Walka's attorney. Council generally agreed to table the matter until December 21, 1981, and to accept Mayor Supernaw's recommendation to ask Mr. Walka to be present at the Committee of the Whole meeting on December 14, 1981, to discuss the terms of the agreement.

Mayor Supernaw offered the names of John Friedly and Joseph Etienne, Jr. for appointment to the City Housing Commission. Discussion of the matter revealed that Mr. Friedly had advised one of the Councilmembers that he had decided not to accept an appointment at this time. Councilman Block asked the Mayor why a name that he had submitted for consideration had not been recommandad for appointment. Mayor Supernaw stated that he had considered four individuals for the two positions available and was only prepared to consider the appointment of Mr. Friedly and/or Mr. Etienne at this time.

Moved by Councilman Porter and supported by Councilman Wood to accept Mayor Supernaw's appointment of Joseph Etienne, Jr. to the Charlevoix Housing Commission to fill the vacancy created by the resignation of Ralph Shapton; said term to expire on April 18, 1982.

RESOLUTION 81-12-1
RESOLUTION REQUESTING MPPA PROJECT STUDY OF DETROIT EDISON BELLE RIVER NO. 1

Whereas, the City of Charlevoix (the "Participant") is a member of the Michigan Public Power Agency (the "Agency"), an agency formed to meet the future electric needs of its member municipalities; and

Whereas, it is anticipated that the expenses of the Agency will be met in the following manner:

1. General administrative expenses will be paid from dues to be received by the Agency from all members of the Agency.

2. Project costs will be paid by members of the Project Committee; and

Whereas, Project Study Costs, such as engineering fees, legal fees, financial consulting fees, travel costs and others must be incurred by the Agency to investigate the desirability of a suggested project; and

Whereas, Project Study Costs must be paid by the Agency whether or not a project is finally acquired;

Whereas, certain Agency members have expressed an interest in having the Agency investigate the possibility of participating in some manner in:

The Belle River Unit No. 1 of the Detroit Edison Company, a coal fired plant, and associated transmission facilities. Now Therefore Be It Resolved by the Common Council of the City of Charlevoix as follows:

1. The Agency is hereby requested to continue its investigation of the proposed project.

3. In the event the Agency acquires the Project, the Project Study Costs shall be included in the cost of the Project and appropriate adjustments shall be made between the Agency and the Participant.

4. At this time its estimate of capacity required from this project is 2 to 4 MW.

It was generally agreed to table the matter until the December 21, 1981, regular Council meeting and to discuss the matter at the Committee of the Whole meeting on December 14, 1981, if it can be worked into the agenda.

Council discussed a proposed Resolution to amend the Annual Contributions Contract of the Charlevoix Housing Commission with the Federal Government. Ed Gregory, Director of the Housing Commission, stated that approval of the Resolution would prohibit the City from selling the senior citizen's housing project (Pine River Place) for a period of 10 years if operating subsidies are accepted from the Government.

The following Resolution was offered and moved for its adoption by Councilman Timms and supported by Councilman Porter.

RESOLUTION 81-12-2

The City Manager advised Council that the recently erected Century 21 sign by the bridge conforms to the Sign Ordinance in effect at the time the permit was issued for it and that it was installed in advance of the 60 day permit expiration period.

The City manager briefly discussed the outside appraisal of Captains' Corner with Council and stated that the cost of the appraisal would depend on whether the property owner accepts the fee appraiser's findings prior to preparation of the appraisal report and whether requests for cost sharing from the other area taxing units are paid.

The City Manager reported that three bids were received for improvements to the City building on Clinton St. (former Erber Bldg.) for the Police Department and that the low bid of $2,800 submitted by Steve LaBlanca of Petoskey had been accepted.

The City manager reported that Sita Planning Development, Inc. had been contracted to remove stumps and grade the sledding hill at Mt. McSaube at a cost of $450. Councilwoman Roloff questioned the City awarding a work contract to a company such as Sita Planning Development who is involved in litigation with the City, it was generally agreed to leave the matter to the discretion of the City Manager.

THE BOARD OF APPEALS

The Board of Appeals convened with Councilmembers Wood, Muma, Block, Porter, Timms, and Roloff present. Absent: None.

Moved by Councilman Porter and supported by Councilman Timms to approve a sign variance as requested by the Charlevoix Housing Commission for Pine River Place to allow a 24 sq. ft. sign, 8 sq. ft. larger than allowed under the present City Sign Ordinance, as recommended by the City Planning Commission, said variance being granted due to the fact that the sign is set back a considerable distance from the street and the narrow entryway to Pine River Place off Garfield at requires a sign large enough for easy location of the project.

Motion was adopted by the following yea and nay vote.

Yeas: Councilmembers Wood, Muma, Block, Porter, Timms, and Roloff.
Nays: None.
Absent: None.

The Board of Appeals adjourned.

But two major ingredients, students and funds are running low. Two of the original students recently moved to Texas leaving only four students, three kindergartners and one fourth grader. Since tuition is on a sliding scale, now ranging from $40 a month to $125 a month, Miss Decker has not seen a full pay check (which was supposed to be $400 a month) for quite a while.

Optimistically, the young teacher says, "You don't go into alternative education for the money. You have to live it.

"The benefits are humanistic - working toward a common goal with children and parents, seeing progress," she said.

Because she believes, she has rented the Virginia McCune Art Center Auditorium for December 19, so her friend Josh White Jr., can give a benefit performance to raise money and stir interest in the school.

Josh White Jr. is the son of the famed folk singer and blues composer Josh White. The younger man, Miss Decker reports, is less focussed on blues. "His music is more upbeat."

Tickets, available at the door or the Grain Train in Petoskey, are $5.

Bliss School...

With the dwindling school population, Miss Decker feels the school may have to consider relocating closer to Harbor Springs or Petoskey to attract students. She's quite willing to go out of her way to make the experiment work.

She believes the progress of the few students is testimony of the school's worth.

"I know these kindergarten students are advanced, because of the individual attention they have received from me and their parents.

"They are excited about coming to school every day. They are curious and show initiative to find things out on their own.

"John, our fourth grader, had some problems with small motor skills and math in public school. We've been working on those and he's made great progress. His reading is very good."

Reaching for a packet of materials, she explained how individual contracts are made with each student for their home-study work. John has been working on meteorology. The younger students have had individualized projects involving reading and crafts to do with their parents.

She conceded that the future of the Bliss school is unclear, but she added, "The successful alternative schools all began small, too, with four to six students."

JEWELRY FASHIONS FACTS FICTION

EVERYTHING YOU ALWAYS WANTED TO KNOW ABOUT JEWELRY

Colleen Titsworth
Manager

I've been asked many questions about gem stones and jewelry over the years, questions that you may have thought about at some time or another. Here are a few you might find interesting.

Why are most emeralds flawed?

There is some connection between the inclusions in emerald and the chromium in the chemical structure which causes the desirable green color. Emerald and aquamarine are different color varieties of the same mineral, beryl. The greenish blue aquamarine, though, is often clear and free of inclusions. Unless there are so many inclusions in the emerald that it appears cloudy, their presence can make the stone very attractive. We call the network of inclusions in emerald the "jardin" (French for "garden") because it looks like foliage is growing within it.

What is the difference between topaz and topaz quartz?

Topaz quartz is not topaz at all. This is a misnomer for citrine (yellowish quartz) that developed long ago because of the similar appearance of the two gems. As an American Gem Society jeweler, I'm forbidden to use such misleading terms. A citrine is worth much less than a topaz of similar size and quality.

How can I keep my diamonds sparkling clean?

Use a commercial jewelry cleaner which only costs a few dollars, a bottle or mix a solution of one part mild dishwashing liquid, one part ammonia and three parts water. Scrub once a week with a soft toothbrush. Once a year, take your jewelry to a professional jeweler for a thorough cleaning and a check of your mountings and clasps.

EARN 15% INTEREST IN ADVANCE*

By pre-signing now for a 1982 Family Federal IRA or Keogh account.

Earn interest now, when you need it most.
With Christmas just around the corner, everyone could use a little extra spending money. Now Family Federal Savings can help you get that extra spending money by paying you interest in advance when you pre-sign for a 1982 IRA or Keogh account. When you pre-sign, Family Federal Savings will put your deposit into a high-interest account earning 15% interest. You'll receive the interest in advance—when you open the account. Then, on January 1, Family Federal will automatically transfer the funds into a 1982 IRA or Keogh account.

Every wage earner can participate.
Thanks to new laws, starting January 1, 1982, every wage earner receiving compensation can participate in an IRA account even if they already now participate in another pension or profit sharing plan where they work. And self-employed people may qualify for a SEP or Keogh account.
Come in to any Family Federal Savings office for all the details. Our counselors will explain everything you need to know about IRA and Keogh accounts. And they'll show you how you can earn interest—in advance—by pre-signing now for your 1982 retirement plan.

Good reasons to open an IRA or Keogh account:
- The money in your IRA or Keogh account is sheltered from current income taxes. The money is taxed as it's withdrawn after retirement—when you'll probably be in a lower tax bracket.
- IRA and Keogh accounts are a safe way to save for your retirement. Each account is insured to $100,000 by the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation.

*Interest in Advance paid from date of deposit through December 31, 1981. You may withdraw all or part of your pre-sign-up deposit any time through December 31, 1981 with no penalty. However, unearned interest must be repaid to Family Federal. The IRA and Keogh interest rates will be based on money market certificate rates and will change periodically. The pre-sign-up program is not a savings account and is backed by U.S. Government Securities but is not insured. Substantial early withdrawal penalties apply to IRA and Keogh accounts. Federal regulations allow a maximum of $2,000 IRA deposit and $15,000 Keogh deposit. Your pre-sign-up deposits may not exceed these maximums.

LAST BOAT OF THE SEASON was hauled out of the water last week at the Irish Boat Shop on Lake Charlevoix. As a fitting end to the boating season, snow swirled and icicles formed on the hull during the process. Anyone still wishing to sail between Round Lake and Lake Charlevoix has until January 1; from that day until March 15, the C&O railroad bridge will be closed except for emergency openings.

Boundary Commission okays consolidation progress

By a 3-0 vote, with two members abaent, the State Boundary Commission agreed Thursday to allow the study of a possible consolidation of the City of Charlevoix and Charlevoix Township to continue.

The decision by the commission, emphasized commission administrator James Hyde, only opens the door to continued study of a merger. It does not mean that such a merger will or should actually take place.

Present at the Thursday meeting in Lansing were City Manager Robert Hunt, mayor-elect Kenneth Staley and City Council members Ray Wood and James Block. It was a petition filed in early 1980 by Mayor Sam Supernaw and local attorney Donald Berlage that brought the matter before the commission. A public hearing before commission members was held in the summer of 1980.

There will now be a 45-day period, commencing on either January 28 or February 11 when the official order is dated, during which citizens of either the township or the city can petition for a vote on the matter. A "no" vote by either unit will end the process.

If there is no petition for a vote or if such a vote is positive toward studying a merger, a charter commission will be formed. That commission, comprised of members from both the city and the township, will then have two years or two chances to win voter approval of a charter.

Hunt urged residents of both units to approach the question of merger with "an open mind" saying that the feasibility of consolidation should be decided by a charter commission. Any vote taken before a charter commission can study the facts, he said, would be unfortunate.

Hunt also said that the City Council and Township Board will probably initiate some form of joint meeting soon to discuss ways to proceed.

City may find itself in different state legislative district

The City of Charlevoix has been part of the 103rd State Legislative District for the past several years, but if redistricting plans now under consideration are adopted, the City will become part of the 106th District.

The Legislative Apportionment Commission, made up of four Democrats and four Republicans, is now meeting to redraw Legislative Districts so they will be of comparable size and thus assure equal representation in Lansing.

The Democrats on the Commission have devised one set of apportionment plans, and the Republicans, another. However, both sets of plans call for the entire County of Charlevoix being included in the 106th District rather than split between the 103rd and 106th as is now the case. Presently, the cities of Charlevoix and East Jordan and the western townships are in the 103rd District and the city of Boyne City and the eastern townships are in the 106th District.

Ralph Ostling of Roscommon has represented the 103rd District in Lansing for nine years, while Steve Andrews of the Gaylord area has represented the 106th District for three years.

Boundary lines for the State Senatorial Districts are also being redrawn by the Legislative Apportionment Commission, but it appears that Charlevoix County will remain in the 37th District. Mitch Irwin of Sault Ste. Marie represents the 37th in Lansing.

There has been a sizeable shift in the State's population from the metropolitan downstate areas to the more rural areas of northern Michigan, with the result that two house seats and one senate seat have been created in northern Michigan. Where these will ultimately be located is also the job of the Legislative Apportionment Commission. The Democrats have one another idea. If they the decision will be idea and the cannot come to a made by the State Republicans have meeting of the minds, Supreme Court.

Reibel suspension appeal denied

Arthur Reibel, former district judge, local attorney and owner of Castle Farms Music Theatre, will apparently continue to fight all the way to the U.S. Supreme Court, a 90-day suspension of his license to practice law.

Last week his appeal to overturn the suspension by the Attorney Discipline Board was denied by the Michigan Supreme Court. Reibel has indicated, however, that an appeal will be filed in federal court.

The suspension is the result of a 1979 incident in which Reibel is alleged to have mishandled $1,200 given to him by Denis Arvilla to post bail for her brother Joel Arvilla who was jailed in Leelanau County at the time for passing bad checks. Ms. Arvilla testified before the 46th Circuit hearing panel of the Attorney Discipline Board that she gave Reibel the $1,200 with the understanding that it was to be returned when her brother was freed from jail.

The panel's original recommendation was for a one-year suspension of Reibel's license and a requirement that he take the Bar exam before having it reinstated. The Discipline Board opted, however, for a three-month suspension and no requirement for retaking the Bar exam.

John F. X. Dwaihy, executive director of the Attorney Discipline Board, said last week that Reibel's chances of further recourse are slim since the U.S. Supreme Court rarely agrees to hear such cases.

Hinged, inflatable sled is local inventor's idea

by ANNE KELLY

Petoskey may have its "bump jumper" but Charlevoix, thanks to local inventor Garrett Miller, may go on the records as being the home of the "U-turn inflatable sled."

It all started about five years ago at a youth group sliding party, Garry and his wife Barb recalled. Garry kept watching the kids as they flew helter-skelter down the hill, almost always out of control. He observed that they really had very little operational effect on their course down the incline.

"There were flexible flyers, molded plastic sleds, sheets of plastic and toboggans, Garry noticed, "but nothing truly steerable."

Garry, putting his ingenuity to work that winter, began to visualize an alternative to the haphazard approach to sledding. He visualized a two-piece flexible flyer at first, which would operate on the principle of a tractor trailer. It would be a sled which could be maneuvered by moving the front part with the arms. The back part would follow in the tracks of the front.

The actual prototype was finally developed with the help of Max Hosmer and Harbor Light Industries, formerly Freedman Art Craft. It resembled the molded plastic variety of sled with a couple of significant exceptions. Garry's sled had two parts, a front and back connected with a hinge. The underside had slightly raised, molded runners which proved to be essential in the proper operation of both parts.

Eureka! The sled worked. Garry, his family and friends, couldn't help but be excited about a sled that could actually slalom down a hill, wind its way around trees and tackle the most precarious inclines because of its ability to make a "u-turn".

It can do anything you can do on skis," reports Garry enthusiastically. "I'd like to take it to one of the ski hills and show what it can do."

Now that his idea was out of his mind and off the drawing board, Garry envisioned capitalizing on his invention. He engaged the services of a local patent attorney who advised against the manufacturing and distribution himself locally. He recommended selling his idea to a large manufacturing company that would take on an "outside" inventor, one not employed by their own firm.

After several unsuccessful attempts at making connections with such a company, Garry finally secured an interview with K-Tel of Minneapolis, Minn. During phone conversations and correspondence with possible manufacturers Garry had to be careful about giving out any specifics about his invention. Now he had the opportunity to present his idea in full, to someone who was willing to listen.

Garry recalled his interview.

"I wasn't going to wait for another week to show them how it worked. I didn't want to take a chance of losing this opportunity, so I demonstrated the sled myself."

The office in which the interview was held was close to a park. There, down a steep hill in a three piece suit, with much enthusiasm if not much dignity, Garry personally convinced K-Tel that his idea could not only work, but has a heck of a lot of fun as well.

That was two years ago. During the interim, K-Tel sold their snow toy division to Spearhead Industries of Minneapolis. Operating under a joint patent with Garry, Spearhead developed an inflatable version of his idea. The sleds are manufactured in Taiwan for Spearhead and are sold as "U-turn inflatable sleds". Consumers have the choice of three designs: the "Screamin' Owl", the "Sno-Falcon", and the "Huntin' Hawk."

The U-turn sled in action.

All sleds are made of heavy duty inflatable plastic and run between $16.00 and $19.00 They are featured as a snow toy selection in the Montgomery Ward 1981 catalogue and are locally distributed at Holiday of Charlevoix, K-Mart in Petoskey, and Meijer Thrifty Acres in Traverse City.

Miller, an investment manager for Thomson-McKinnon Securities in Charlevoix, is awaiting dividends from the first quarterly payment contracturally promised by Spearhead, with a mixture of curiosity and enthusiasm. He and his wife are hopeful that the sleds, after a year on the market will catch on in popularity and will continue to increase in sales. Spearhead projects nationwide sales of between 100,000 and 200,000 sleds the first year.

"It isn't like Thomas Edison," Garry pointed out, "who spent hundreds of hours in his laboratory developing the incandescent light. I just had the idea and eventually followed through with it."

It took a while from conception to production, but the Miller's two boys Garry and Matt, are glad that their dad invented such a nifty sled. "Sometimes we wish we didn't have to come home from the hill at 5:00 for dinner," the boys agreed. Garry reports that the boys have seen a television commercial for his sled, but that his timing has been poor and he has missed it every time.

But the fact remains that the sleds are out and on the market and are hopefully winning over kids of all ages to a new concept in sledding. Being inflatable, the sleds can be used in the water as well. Garry foresees the possibility of a more sophisticated version being made available in ski shops. Perhaps the "U-turn inflatable sled," originating in Charlevoix, will one day become nationally contagious. It wouldn't be surprising. Garry's sled, with its smooth and controllable ride, is truly a unique product in its field.

Davis warns of harm to tourism by spending cuts

by PEG OHLE

The State of Michigan, in its proposed "Say 'Yes' to Michigan" advertising program to attract tourists and industry to the State will be advertising tourist attractions it does not have.

That is the opinion of the Recreation Advisory Committee, of which Michael B. Davis of Boyne City is a member. The Advisory Committee is charges with the responsibility of advising the Governor and the Legislature on the need of recreation facilities to attract tourism.

"Funds for recreation facilities are being slashed," Davis says, "and there are threats of losing funds for field inspection. Also, regions are being enlarged and the workload enlarged."

Davis adds, "The Governor proposes to spend 10 million dollars to promote Michigan nationwide, which would probably increase tourism 20 percent. Publicly owned recreation programs will be overtaxed."

Citing further the problems facing recreation facilities, Davis pointed out the Advisory Commettee's position paper:

"The Federal government has stopped land acquisition; substantially reduced technical assistance; virtually eliminated recreation grants to state and local government; has eliminated support for state-local comprehensive recreation planning.

"Michigan's only state recreation grant program is repeatedly raided and diverted from recreation: Michigan Land Trust Fund may be totally gutted soon.

"Repeated general fund reductions for the Department of Natural Resources (the primary state agency responsible for recreation) have resulted in employee layoffs, reduction in services, deferred maintenance, deferred equipment purchases, recreation facility closing in state parks and forest recreation (i.e. already closed outdoor centers, nature centers and small forestry campgrounds), capital improvement and renovation programs largely eliminated – leaving many parks partly developed and deteriorating, recreation services to local goverament and recreation planning drastically reduced and technical assistance to local government eliminated.

"Almost every municipal and county recreation department has incurred budget reductions resulting in recreation programs being eliminated, facilities closed, and recreation departments being eliminated or merged with other departments."

What recreation facility funding has meant to Charlevoix County in recent years can be demonstrated by these grants of federal and state monies:

Young State Park, $100,902; Charlevoix Depot Beach Park Area, $4,500; Tennis Court Construction (Charlevoix), $15,000; Fisherman's Island State Park acquisition, $837,975; Third Ward Park (East Jordan), $7,607; Lake Michigan Park (Charlevoix), $11,442; Dam Pond Park (Boyne Falls), $9,118; Rotary Park Development (Boyne City),$25,328; Charlevoix Township Tennis Courts,$30,723. Total, $1,042,595.

Funds for facilities such as these projects must be available, Davis believes, so the State of Michigan can meet the demands put upon it by tourists both from within and outside the State.

Hospital receives $10,000 portfolio from Julius Gilbert

A donation of over $10,000 in stocks to Charlevoix Area Hospital, was given by Julius Gilbert, of Charlevoix, this week.

Gilbert, a supporter and long time volunteer fund raiser for Charlevoix Area Hospital said he hoped his gift would inspire others to give to the hospital.

"A good hospital cannot exist on its patient intake alone. It must have help to keep up with equipment needs," Gilbert observed.

"This donation will help purchase the sophisticated equipment required to keep up with modern technology and help the hospital continue to offer its excellent medical care," Gilbert continued.

He explained that in conversations with the medical staff at Charlevoix Area Hospital, for whom he has high praise, he learned of the equipment needs and the problems of financing such acquisitions of capital funds.

He added that he has always had a special feeling for Charlevoix Area Hospital, particularly since both his granddaughter and great granddaughter were both born there.

Gilbert's donation of the stocks, which the hospital will sell and reinvest, provides a major boost to the new Development and Equipment Funds, which the hospital recently established.

Three funds, Development, Equipment and Scholarship were initiated to help the hospital in its long range planning.

Speaking for the hospital Board of Directors, E.D. "Pat" Hawley agreed with Gilbert's assessment of hospital needs and spoke of the hospital's deep appreciation for Gilbert's support.

National Christmas tree has special meaning for Northern Michigan residents

Northern Michigan residents can be proud that the country's official 1981 Christmas tree comes from the area -- from the Chippewa County Village of Strongs, west of Sault Ste. Marie.

The 52-foot white spruce selected for the honor is 65 years old and grew up in the Hiawatha National Forest. The tree has a 26.7 foot spread at the widest point and a trunk with a 22-inch diameter.

The official Christmas tree was selected by a Washington landscaping official on a visit to Michigan this fall and was cut and delivered to Washington early in December to grace the front lawn of the Capitol Building.

According to the Michigan Department of Natural Resources, Michigan is number one in the nation in the wholesale production of Christmas trees with some 3.7 million trees produced in 1980. At an average sale price of $8.25 per tree, nearly $30 million is generated for Michigan's economy through the annual production and sale of these trees.

However, very few Christmas trees are grown in the immediate Charlevoix area. The Snow-Kist Company, with headquarters in Cheboygan is one of the larger growers. It leases about 200 acres in Charlevoix County near Boyne Falls.

It is estimated that altogether, there are probably not more than 800 acres devoted to growing Christmas trees commercially in Charlevoix County. Most of the trees shipped out-of-state are grown in the northeastern part of the lower peninsula, from Cadillac to the Thumb area.

Knight on the Town

I'll be home...

by Dave Knight

Merciless winds whipped curtains of snow against the young college student's raw face as he stood forlornly, knee deep in a drift along the deserted highway.

Batavia, New York. Two o'clock in the morning. Christmas Eve.

All over the western world people were in some state of content with sugar plums dancing in their dreaming heads and fires crackling in their Franklin stoves. "What in the name of creation," he thought, "am I doing here?"

Trouble was, he knew what he was doing there. Hitchhiking. It was part of a master plan to get from Syracuse, New York to Madison, Wisconsin as quickly and cheaply as possible for the Christmas holiday. In the planning stage, it had looked flawless. Since the Syracuse airport had so few flights to the Midwest making it next to impossible to fly stand-by, he would simply hitchhike to Buffalo where there was an international airport and many more empty seats heading west.

The first ride came easily but left him thirty miles short...in Batavia, New York...where, as darkness fell and the snowstorm raged, he stood, too frozen to kick himself as he would have liked to.

Just about the time it looked as though he had become Batavia's newest monument, distant headlights peaked through the blizzard and a black Mustang soon pulled up. Salvation had arrived in the person of an early morning shift worker at a Buffalo factory. As the stiffened traveler bent awkwardly into the right front bucket seat, the driver just shook his head and chuckled. He'd seen deer, opposum, and many other creatures of the night on that lonely drive to work each day. But a hitchiker? That was a first.

Fortunately, the driver's route took him right past the Buffalo airport and the grateful student thanked him profusely as they pulled up to the terminal. His timeline was shot but the plan was still workable. There were three flights that day to O'Hare, from which connections to Madison could be made.

The first flight was booked. There were some no-shows when the second was called but some others had been in the stand-by line even earlier and the student started to feel moisture across his brow as his second chance took off with a roar. On the third and final chance to make it home for Christmas, he made it.

As he strapped himself for takeoff, he could smell the leg o'lamb simmering in his mother's kitchen.

As Lake Erie disappeared beneath the enveloping cloud cover, he settled back to enjoy a well deserved sleep. Cue the dancing sugar plums, he thought, whatever they are.

He was rudely awakened seemingly moments later by the deep voice of the pilot.

"Ladies and gentlemen, I am afraid to say we've run into a little problem with the weather. It seems Chicago is having quite a snow storm so it doesn't look like we'll be landing there today. Sorry for the inconvenience."

"He calls this an inconvenience?", thought the frazzled student hours later as he slumped in the Davenport, Iowa airport lobby, "It's a kidnapping!"

And the smell of lamb wafted off into the Iowa breeze as the student trudged to the nearby roadside and pointed his frostbitten thumb north.

Note: He did make it home for Christmas. Not long after, he bought a car.

Clockwise

Hail to the solstice

by Bob Clock

BEFORE WE settle into the Christmas holidays, I think we should all give a hoot and a holler for the Winter Solstice which occurred without a great deal of fanfare on Monday.

The solstice simply means that from here on in, the days will be getting longer and the nights shorter and that spring, for all practical purposes, is just a crocus away.

Of course, the change in the length of daylight hours will be miniscule at first. You won't even notice the difference unless you sit at the window with a stop-watch.

But by mid-January you should be driving home from work in semi-daylight and the sky should be fairly well streaked with dawn's early light when you drive to work in the morning.

The days will lengthen at both ends right thorugh the Vernal Equinox on March 21 and continue lengthening until the Summer Solstice June 21. Then we'll start slipping back into winter again.

In the old pagan days when man and nature were closer in tune, the solstices and equinoxes were occasions for celebration. Now they pass virtually unheralded — except by astronomers — in a welter of man-made holidays.

So all hail the Winter Solstice, the only bright sign in the sky this grey December.

IT'S A PITY the Polish government didn't wait until after the Christmas holidays before turning nasty. As things now stand, the Christmas of 1981 promises to be one of the bleakest on record for the beleagured Poles, with thousands in jail and millions of others suffering angry reprisals for daring to hope for something better than communist oppression.

The crackdown on Solidarity trade union president Lech Walesa and his supporters will give military and political theoreticians a good deal to ponder for generations to come.

Walesa, to be sure, had made giant strides as a champion of the human spirit, but it now appears that he may have been moving too fast, trying to accomplish too many radical changes in too short a time.

Observers close to the scene maintain that Solidarity was on the verge of toppling the communist regime and that party leaders had to move wiftly and decisively in order to prevent total chaos.

Now the Poles are back to square one. The government is in full control and the principal voice of Solidarity is in detention — if not dead. Rumors abound.

Things might have worked out differently had Solidarity been willing to take few strokes forward and then rest on its oars. Or if Walesa and Co. had been able to oust the rascals in Warsaw with one swift maneuver.

Richard Friske, a native of Poland who formerly represented Northern Michigan in the State Legislature, believes Poland's communist government led Walesa along, hoping to draw out and identify persons unfriendly to the regime.

But I think Friske relies too heavily on conspiracy as an underlying factor in global politics. Politicians generally are too busy stamping out brush fires to notice that the whole forest is ablaze.

Solidarity, of course, is not dead. But its progress will never again be as swift as it has been for the past year.

EDITORIAL

Give it a chance

Last week the State Boundary Commission gave its blessing to the concept of consolidation of the City of Charlevoix and Charlevoix Township. All this means, however, is that the ball has been returned to the local court. The commission wisely ruled that the decision should be made by the people affected.

And that decision should not be made in haste, without full knowledge of what consolidation might offer to both the city and the township.

Traditionally, township residents have opposed any thought of a merger thinking they have nothing to gain and much to lose. There is the possibility, though, that the township may have much to gain. Why not at least find out?

The logical next step is to permit the formation of a charter commission to study the idea. It would be foolish to reject any form of merger without even knowing what it might offer.

County needs large board

To The Editor:

Recently the Courier ran an editorial and a letter by Don Smith commending the Reapportionment Committee for cutting the County Board of Commissioners to six members. This sounds to me like Dictatorship in Action with our Prosecuting Attorney indicating this was the only possible way it could be done. I don't believe it! Who drew up the plan?

Charlevoix County, run by fifteen Commissioners levied the 3rd lowest millage to run the County of all 83 Counties in the State. I wonder how many people in the County are aware of this; futhermore, six people would have an awful lot of power. Of the $11,000,000 plus taxes paid in the County, the County gets $1,391,615, the townships receive 1 mill and the Schools get the rest. I have beard those in favor of cutting the board size say it will save money, "bunk". They propose hiring a comptroller. The Petoskey News-Review listed their (Emmet County's) Comptrollers budget for his office as $112,000, plus and they still have a board of commissioners to run. What does Emmet County give its tax payers that Charlevoix doesn't?

The same people that want the County Board cut say we should have more State Legislators. It seems to me we already have too many law makers, judging by the mess the State is in. One Legislator costs the tax payer more than the entire Board of Commissioners!

Don Smith stated 15 commissioners waste too much time. I wonder if he has ever given any gratis time to the County tax payers. No one seems to mention the time spent by the commissioners doing their home work which takes hours but is never compensated for. Besides this (too Big of a Board) has had four building projects. The County Building and Grandvue, financed by a sinking fund. The Jail was built by forming a Building Authority and bonds were sold so a $540,000 Jail is going to cost the tax payer $1,120,000. Since it was eight members that chose to use this method of financing, does it sound like a smaller commission is the answer? For the Grandvue addition the commissioners asked and received a 1 mill levy for three years. The levy was reduced to .75 for the third year.

Come on neighbors. If you want representation we had better do something to retain a larger than six man board.

Kubicek remembers well the old Bohemian Settlement

by PEG OHLE

Frank Kubicek is one of Charlevoix' better known senior citizens. This week the Courier talks with him about his roots and about his present-day activities.

COURIER: We understand you have written a book about your mother's life in Czechslovakia and about the early days of the Bohemian Settlement south of East Jordan.

KUBICEK: That's right. I finished the book back in the 1960's and parts of it ran in the East Jordan newspaper during 1967, but I've never been able to interest anybody in publishing it. I want it done in hard cover.

COURIER: How did the Bohemian Settlement get started?

KUBICEK: It was started by some people from Czechland who first settled in Antrim City south of Charlevoix in 1861. After working in the lumber mills there, they looked around for some property to buy and found it in 1869 in what is now Jordan Township in Antrim County. They were Peseks and Svagers and Kubiceks (no relation to me).

COURIER: When did your family come to the Bohemian Settlement?

KUBICEK: In 1908. They came from Czechland. I was 14 months old.

COURIER: And you grew up there?

KUBICEK: Yes, I went to school in the Bohemian Settlement through the fifth grade, then to another country school for sixth, seventh, and eighth grades. I would have liked to go to high school but I had to take care of my parents. They were elderly — they were 45 when I was born.

COURIER: How did you earn a living?

KUBICEK: I worked the farm, growing a patch of potatoes, a patch of corn. After my parents died, I went to work for the East Jordan Canning Company for two years and then took a job sailing as a cook for the Pittsburgh Steamship Company.

But I came back to the Settlement and started working a little 20 acre plot. I didn't do it the way my parents did. I raised raspberries and strawberries and poppyseed (for bread), cut wood, and made maple syrup. I peddled it all, and do you know, I always collected every cent due me. There was no 'pay you next week' in my business.

COURIER: When did you work on your book?

KUBICEK: All the time. I spent ten years interviewing people, examining legal papers and documents, and checking old grave stones. It took me two years to write it.

COURIER: What does the Bohemian Settlement part of your book cover?

KUBICEK: See that old stone axe on the wall? That was found on the Pesek farm by some road builders. They just tossed it on top of a stone pile. It's a stone axe that was used by the primitive people of the area thousands of years ago. My first chapter tells about that stone. Then I go on to the Antrim City people and their descendants. I call them the '69'ers because that's when they went to Jordan Township. There's even a chapter about their first Christmas there. I tell about providing land for the cemetery, starting the church, and founding Jordan Township in 1875. Do you know the total value of the township in 1878 was $5,500? Then there's information about lumbering, the coming of the railroad, taxes for schools, lots of things.

COURIER: It's not all history, is it?

KUBICEK: No, I call it "History, Legend, and Facts about the Bohemian Settlement".

COURIER: Do you do any writing these days?

KUBICEK: Just poetry, mostly for my own amusement. I've written about 300 poems about Miew Mama and Miew Papa.

COURIER: Cats?

KUBICEK: Yes. They provide a fine way for me to express myself. Some of the poems are laid in past centuries. Here's a Miew poem:

Miew Mama drove to Charlevoix
the Beautiful
Someone had told her, mice there were plentiful.
Her family, too, went for the ride,
To stay home without them,
Neighbor Rower couldn't abide.

Sure and some mice they did find,
None of those they left behind.
They met the Mayor on the street,
To them, that was a considerable treat!

Miew Papa chased, from a pier a mouse, into a slip,
And almost got run over by a ship.
Rower chased a cottontail up
Bridge Street,
And around to a vacant lot on Grant, to his retreat!

Soon the four kittens cried, they hungry were,
So they all called on a
restauranteur.
They bought themselves all kinds of food,
Then all rode home in a happy mood.

COURIER: Do you have any cats?

KUBICEK: No, but I used to have them on the farm.

COURIER: How long have you lived in Charlevoix?

KUBICEK: Since 1967. I came here to work at Freedman's so I could get some Social Security credits. That's when I started writing the Miew poems — during the lunch hour at Freedman's.

COURIER: You have three bookcases full of books in your living room. You not only write, but you read, too, don't you?

KUBICEK: There are more books in the other room, too. I like to read all kinds of books except dirty ones. I read them to be entertained, not necessarily to learn. You can learn a lot from a novel, you know. Most of the books I have I've bought at yard sales, but when they get up to 50 cents, that's too much for me. When I die, the East Jordan Library is going to get the books.

COURIER: Your walls are full of pictures, too.

KUBICEK: Yes, I like pictures and carvings. There's Gainesborough's Blue Boy, some outdoor pictures, Abraham Lincoln with an American flag over him, and Mayor Cermak of Chicago. He was shot and killed in Florida when he was down there with President Roosevelt. Mayor Cermak came over here from Czechland and probably got farther in politics than any other of our countrymen.

COURIER: Have you ever been interested in politics?

KUBICEK: Not really. I served on the Township Board when I lived on the farm. Most politics are dirty.

COURIER: How do you feel about our schools?

KUBICEK: They try to teach too many things. They should concentrate on reading and writing and aritmetic and history, things like that. Bands are good but they belong outside of school.

COURIER: You don't have a TV set, do you?

KUBICEK: No, I had one once when I lived on the farm. I never looked at it. But I do have four or five radios in the house. You know, you can do other things when you're listening to the radio, but with TV you have to sit down and look at it.

COURIER: We know you live here alone and that you never married. Do you do anything else besides write poems and keep your house neat as a pin?

KUBICEK: I still do some knife and saw sharpening and have a garden every summer.

Infant care program held for area youth

Eight young people attended a recent class session in infant care sponsored by Charlevoix County 4-H Youth Programs. Leah Green, 4-H Program Assistant originated the program and it was taught by Linda Yaroch, public health nurse, who serves Charlevoix from the District Health Department. The lesson was taught Wednesday, December 9, 1981, from 3-4:30 p.m. in the Youth Activities Room of the Charlevoix Public Library.

Ms. Yaroch first covered the kinds of bottles currently used for infant feeding, how they are assembled and how to handle them. How to handle the infant doring feeding and amounts to feed various ages of infants as well as kinds of formula were also covered in this part of the class. The nurse also discussed baby skin relative to bathing, diapering and exposure to sun. Those attending saw detailed filmstrips about bathing and baby skin to which useful explanations were added.

The last portion of the class session was concerned with accidental poisoning and how to deal with it. Students received a wallet sized sticker with the closest poison control number as well as several booklets on infant care and a reference wheel for determining infant development. The proper way to implement the Heimlich maneuver on infants in case of choking was also taught. Ms. Yarocb also added a number of hints concerning each of the areas as they were covered.

Charlevoix county young people are asked to contact Leah Green at the Cooperative Extension Service if they are interested in having the 4-H sponsored baby sitting clinic for certification repeated next summer. In 1981 thirty-five young people attended and twenty-six of them were certified. Such a program is one way babysitters can make themselves more attractive to employers. The infant care class was an addition to that series. The Extension office is also interested in setting up CPR training for youths in the county in the early spring. Persons desiring information may contact the Extension Service at 319B N. Lake St., Boyne City, or call 582-6232.

Brother of local teacher killed

Stephen J. Miller, 32, of Jackson, one of three men killed in the crash of a single engine plane near Jackson Thrusday, was the brother of Ted L. Miller, Spanish teacher at the Charlevoix High School.

The crash, according to news sources, occurred shortly after takeoff from the Jackson airport. The plane apparently ran into mechanical difficulties at approximately 500 feet and was attempting to return to the airport when it plunged into a house and exploded on impact.

A check for $3,000 was presented to Charlevoix Area Hospital Administrator Richard Krueger (R) by First State Bank of Charlevoix President Louis Hollow, last week. The check is the bank's third annual such donation to the hospital in fulfillment of the bank's pledge, made in 1968, to donate $15,000 over five years. The pledges made by area businesses enabled Charlevoix Area Hospital to embark on its recently completed new wing and interior renovations.

GEM POWER
Colleen Titsworth
Manager

The Hindus seemed to value ruby above all other gems. The glowing red color led them to believe that an eternal flame burned within the stone. It was believed that the wearer of a ruby would enjoy good physical and mental health because the stone could remove evil thoughts, control amorous desires, drive away "pestilential vapors" and resolve disputes. In a 14th century treatise it was claimed that if a person wore a ruby on the left side of his body, he would live in peace and harmony with all men and all his belongings would be protected.

The diamond has intrigued people for centuries. Most of the beliefs that were built around it stem from its superior hardness or its brilliant transparency. It was thought to bring the wearer great strength, fortitude and courage, so he would be victorious in battle. St. Hildegard believed it drove the devil away. In further support of the tradition of using diamonds in engagement and wedding rings, the gem was believed to increase the love between the married couple.

If people were awed by the beauty of gemstones in times past, they should be even more so now with the developments that have since taken place in the science of gemology. Modern day gem cutters and jewelry artisans know how to cut gems to display their maximum beauty and to set them in artistically-molded precious metals.

At Reusch Jewelry we take pride in our jewelry and our knowledge of gemstones.

90 attend workshop

The seventh annual Financial Aid Workshop sponsored by the Charlevoix High School Counseling Staff recently attracted approximately 90 people despite the inclement weather, Charles Bentley who heads the department, said.

Those attending the workshop learned that college can cost from $1200 to $8000 per year depending on the institution. They also learned that aid is available for those who can demonstrate need.

It was also revealed that nearly all financial aid is based upon a need analysis determined from information produced by completing one of two financial aid forms available.

Early application for financial aid is essential it was emphasized. Financial aid applications completed between Jan. 1 and Jan. 31, 1982, will be assured complete consideration. (This aid for the 1982-83 school year will be determined from 1981 financial facts.)

Cliff Denay, director of Financial Aid at North Central Michigan College, joined Mr. Bentley and Mrs. Gayle Gennett, counselors at the high school, in helping parents and students understand the complex and often frustrating financial aid program.

Parents with questions relating to financial aid for college are encouraged to call Mr. Denay at 347-3973 or Mrs. Gennett or Mr. Bentley at 547-2811.

First Congregational Church plans services for Christmas Eve

The First Congregational Church of Charlevoix has scheduled the following events for Christmas Eve.

There will be an informal worship at 7 o'clock in the sanctuary with carols, the reading of the Christmas story from the Bible, a modern Christmas story, and the lighting of candles. This service is especially for families with small children and older people who may not want to venture out for the later service.

At 11 o'clock, there will be the traditional Christmas Eve worship with carols, anthems by the senior choir, scripture, a meditation by the pastor, and candle-lighting.

The public is invited to all of these events to celebrate the birth of the Christ-child.

Gebot wants students to be ready

by ANNE KELLY

Many Charlevoix residents know Jack Gebot as the fellow who has run Camp McSauba day camp for the past six years. Smaller segments will recognize Jack as a volleyball referee during the season or as the "Grand Knight" of the Catholic men's organization known as the Knights of Columbus. But 3rd and 4th grade students at St. Mary School know him as their teacher.

Just how Jack feels about kids is evident in the way he talks about his role as an educator.

"The children I teach today," Jack philosophized, "will spend the majority of their lives in the next century." He wants them to be equipped to carry on in a world that is becoming proportionately smaller as our knowledge increases. "Our world doesn't have technical problems; it has problems of people-to-people communication," he observed. That's why Jack chooses to spend about 80 percent of his teaching time on the language arts and stresses listening skills.

He is a proponent of "hands on experience" for children and prides himself in being the kind of teacher who deals with interest areas as they occur in the classroom. Perhaps the most exciting area to him is reading. "With a basic knowledge of reading, a student can accomplish just about anything he sets out to accomplish."

Jack's background is in history, which may explain his overview of the educational picture. He believes that education as an institution has prospered and contributed greatly to the advancement of our society. "It is said that knowledge 'more than doubles every five years,' he pointed out. Education, as a public institution is responsible for that kind of growth.

A graduate of Western Michigan University, Jack received his B.S. in secondary education while majoring in history and minoring in language arts. While still an undergraduate, he gained Y.M.C.A. experience in the area of day camps. He taught for 2½ years in Kalamazoo while earning his M.A. in history from Western. In 1969, Jack and his family moved to the area where he taught and substituted, but never on the elementary level. Asked to join the staff at St. Mary School two years ago, Jack has taught 5th and 6th and this year, a 3rd and 4th grade combination.

"Elementary kids keep me hopping," he admits. "But here is where the action is in education."

Rayders rule conference with 4-0 mark

The Rayder basketball express continued to gain steam last week with two big wins that left undefeated Charlevoix alone atop the Michigan-Huron Shores heap.

Tuesday's game on Charlevoix's home court saw the Rayders edge Gaylord 39-36 while on Friday the local team traveled to Cheboygan and beat the Chiefs by four, 51-47.

It was a low-scoring affair against Gaylord as not a single Rayder player made it into double figures. Charlevoix led at the end of the first quarter 13-8 but managed only six points in the entire second period to fall behind 22-19 at the half.

Luckily the Blue Devils' offense was equally anemic in the third quarter scoring only four points while the Rayders again were held to six. It was 26-25 going into the last quarter with Gaylord holding the slim edge. True to their form this season, however, the Rayders came on strong toward the end to outscore Gaylord 14-10 in the fourth quarter and salvage the 39-36 victory.

Jim Buchanan and Craig Klooster led Charlevoix with nine points apiece while Gary Drury and Ross Carey each had six and Mike Loper five.

In JV action, Charlevoix was in the game all the way until the last quarter when Gaylord pulled ahead for a 49-39 victory.

Bill Tillen had 12 points for the Rayder understudies and Tim LaBlance 11.

In their biggest challenge yet in the young season, the Rayders invaded powerful Cheboygan's home court Friday in a match-up of the two unbeaten teams in the conference at that point.

The seesaw battle had the Chiefs on top 10-8 at the end of the first period during which the Rayders missed on all six of their free throw attempts. In the second quarter, however, Charlevoix connected on eight of ten free throws to keep the pace; It was Cheboygan up by a 28-24 margin at the half.

By the end of the third quarter, Charlevoix had pulled within one, 40-39, and with 2:36 left in the game, finally took the lead, withstood a frantic last minute charge by the Chiefs and came away with the 51-47 win.

Drury paced Charlevoix with 17 points while Klooster added 14. Strong rebounding by Carey and Loper were also important factors in the game, according to Coach Dave Smith.

The win is Charlevoix's fifth straight without a loss, the fourth in conference play.

The junior varsity had a little tougher going against Cheboygan as they dropped a 67-60 decision. Again it was Tillen and LaBlance carrying the scoring load with 17 and 16 points respectively.

This week the Rayders wrap up their pre-holiday schedule with a Tuesday game at Grayling. Following the Christmas break, the team will next be in action Tuesday, January 5 at Harbor Springs in a non-conference game.

Place 5th in tourney

The Charlevoix Rayder wrestling team with only six members due to illness placed fifth among the six teams participating in the St. Ignace Invitational Tournament held Saturday according to Coach Greg Bryan.

The Rayders captured two first places, three seconds and one fourth place.

Jim Herriman, in the 98 pound class, wrestled well and looked good as he captured a first place. Veteran Gregg Whitley (145) also did well in taking a first in his class to put his record to date at 14-0 for the season.

Placing second were Pat Curtis (105), Tim Young (112) and Alan Bergmann (167). Shannon Reynolds (198) placed fourth.

Coach Bryan said there were many fine wrestlers in the tournament including as many as five from Grayling who are capable of taking state honors in their respective classes.

Grayling won the tournament with 151 points. The Vikings were followed by Gladstone with 139; St. Ignace, 129; Manistique, 116.5; Charlevoix, 101 and Gaylord, 93.

Charlevoix will host Rogers City here at 6:30 p.m. Tuesday in the final meet prior to the holidays.

Frosh come back to edge Cheboygan

The Charlevoix Freshmen found themselves trailing Cheboygan, at one time as much as 19 points in the first half, before outscoring the young Chiefs 16-11 to win by a slim 51-50 score.

A couple key buckets by Brent Cole and some good play by Doug Sloan combined with a press in the second half gave the freshmen the late victory according to Coach Chuck Wright.

Cheboygan had jumped to a 14-4 first period lead and stretched it to 24-5 before the locals trimmed the margin to 29-20 at halftime. The Rayders still trailed 39-25 going into the final period and continued to trail until the final minutes of play.

Sloan had 18 points for the game with Thad Morgan contributing 10 points. T. Johnson had 10 points for Cheboygan.

Charlevoix was to play at Kalkaska Monday to close out the 1981 section of their schedule.

Beat Blue Devils 41-25

The Charlevoix High School freshman team upped their season record to 2-0 last week with a 41-25 victory over the freshmen from Gaylord.

In a balanced scoring attack, three Rayder players, Thad Morgan, Doug Sloan and Russ Stevens each tallied 10 points for Charlevoix.

After trailing 10-11 at the end of the first quarter and 15-16 at the half, the Rayder frosh domainated the rest of the game building a 31-22 lead by the end of the third quarter enroute to the final 41-25 margin.

CHARLEVOIX GIRL SCOUTS had a special visitor at their Christmas party held Thursday night in the community room of the Pine River Place senior housing complex. Besides welcoming Santa, the girls sang Christmas carols for Pine River Place residents and shared some refreshments for the occasion. Lloyd Cummings made the special arrangements to have Santa on hand.

Womens Club hears about 'Christmas on the Moon'

"Christmas on the Moon", was the holiday story told by Mrs. E.H. Leedy to members of the Charlevoix Women's Club when they met recently at the home of Mrs. Julius Gilbert. The interesting and unusual story fascinated the group.

In addition to the story, members heard several selections on the guitar by Bob Best, home from a tour with a Campus Life instrumental group. He then played as members sang Christmas carols.

Members were also reminded by Mrs. Bruce Bartlett that the annual Mitten Tree is at the First State Bank to receive contributions of mittens, caps, hats, and scarves which will be given to needy children in the community through the annual Community Christmas project.

The membership was also advised that the January 19 meeting will be held at Big Rock Nuclear Power plant on US 31 North. Phil Loomis, public relations director at the plant, will provide the program at 1:30 p.m. Guests are invited to attend.

Mrs. Ray Wood presided at the brief business meeting.

Co-hostesses were Mrs. Ethel Weisinger and Mrs. Robert Martin.

Sheriff warns about plowing onto road

Plowing snow from driveways onto the traveled portion of a street or highway creates a traffic hazard, Sheriff George T. Lasater has warned. It also violates a state statute be added.

Persons cleaning driveways and sidewalks are asked not to leave the snow in the roadway where it can become a serious traffic hazard.

High Priestess meeting

Mrs. Harold Hamlin hostsd the recent meeting of the Past High Priestess Club at Walloon Lake.

Following the luncheon meeting at March's Restaurant and Lodge, a brief business meeting, presided over by Mrs. Ray Wood, was held. Cards were signed by members present for shut-ins among the membership. Mrs. John Borton of Indian River presented the secretary and treasurer's reports.

Plans were also made for the Jan. 20 meeting to be held at the Menue Restaurant at Indian River. Husbands of members are invited to attend. Mrs. Edward Nyman was named to give the devotions at the January meeting.

An exchange of Christmas gifts followed the luncheon and business meeting. Mrs. Borton won the gypsy.

The members of Kappa Sigma sorority in Charlevoix will make a donation of canned foods and toys to the Halfway Home in Petoskey.

Donations for the Halfway Home are being made by individual members of the sorority which will make the presentation as a holiday project.

Check headlights

Motorists are being asked by the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Department to check the headlights on their vehicles to see if they are in proper working order.

"This seems to be the time of year, when there are more hours of darkness, that motorists with only one headlight, are on the highway. Driving with only one headlight at any time is dangerous but in a snowstorm it becomes a real safety hazard" Sheriff George Lasater said in asking motorists to check their lights.

Sheriff's deputies will be warning motorists and issuing citations if the practice continues Sheriff Lasater said.

Reviving the Crismon tree

by ANNE KELLY

Christmas time is the eason of tradition and t. Mary School tudents are learning bout a new one this year. The tradition of the Crismon tree isn't iew. It dates back to the 1960's when Frances Cipps Spencer of the utheran Church of the scension in Danville, irginia decided to use ncient Christian symbols in decorating a tree for her church.

"When searching for a way to honor the Christ, I came across some drawings of designs called 'crisma', Spencer explains in the instructional guide for making the basic series of chrismons. "Chrismon is a combination of parts of two words: Christ and mon-ogram. A Chrismon is just that, a monogram of Christ."

Sr. Agnes Mary, principal at St. Mary, learned about the tree from a member of her teaching staff whose Baptist Church uses the Chrismon tradition. "The Methodist Church also has a Chrismon tree," Sister noted. "I thought it would be nice to have one here in our school." A similar tradition known as "the Jesse tree" has been enjoyed during Advent for may years in the Catholic Church, but the symbols of the Jesse Tree are of key Old Testament figures and prototypes of Christ in His "family tree." The Chrismon tree, on the other hand, includes the rich biblical symbols from both the Old and New Testaments. These symbols are meaningful to Christians of all denominations.

Chrismons are made of a white styrofoam or other material and are decorated with gold. Some symbols included on a Chrismon tree are those that depict the Christian year and its feasts, various symbols of the cross, monograms or letters and words and symbols for Christ, God and Mary.

The children used precut white styrofoam and decorated the crismons with gold beads, sequins and other trim. It was an enjoyable project which will help them remember the true meaning of Christmas as the birth of Christ, steeped as it is in the simplicity and beauty of Christian tradition.

Grooters' thoughts on Christmas seem up to. The light hearted frivolous spirit when tinsel and bells and ribbons seems impossible - when you are weighted with many problems - when it's nighttime in your life.

Our understanding of Christmas however, is pretty shallow if we are unable to praise the birth of Christ unless all is going well. In fact one could argue that it's when things are darkest that Christmas could mean the most. Think how hopeless it would be if we weren't sure that God cares and forgives and leads us into life eternal. Think how empty and futile the death of a loved one would seem, or the problems in our own lives if there were no hope in our hearts and no future to look forward to.

When things are darkest, Christmas can be especially meaningful. Not in a lighthearted, party time way, but in a deeply spiritual way. In a way that causes you to kneef before the Christ child with a renewed sense of wonder.

Were it not for Him, we would very likely be convinced that our problems were of no consequence to anyone, except ourselves. That at best we were insignificant little specks in a large universe with a God who doesn't care and a life that's going nowhere.

But Christmas tells us quite another story. We are important, life is heading someplace, and God does care. And no matter how black the clouds, above them, or beyond them the sun is shining. And in your heart you can live through storms in that confidence and so - know the peace of God.

No matter what our situation might be - the Christmas season calls for us to look not at ourselves, or at the wrongs around us. But we are to look at Him. His name, writes Isaiah, shall be called Wonderful, Counselor, the Everlasting Father - the Prince of Peace.

In flim we will find the spirit and strength to go on with optimism, and confidence. Let His spirit fill you and lift you, and inspire you to be your best self.

SEARS CATALOG MERCHANTS

The first thoughts which enter my mind when I hear the word Christmas are the joyous moments I spend celebrating the season with my family and friends while opening gifts and feasting on good food. Taking a deeper look into the Christmas season I find it to be a time of world peace and togetherness.

With these ideals of peace and unity, I find it ironic that the rest of the year is filled with hate and violence. The world should look on this season as an example, something we can grow and learn from.

So by not letting the spirit of Christmas die as soon as the tinsel is stripped from the tree, everyone would be able to live a merry life day after day and year after year.

DAVID BUDAY
Charlevoix High School Senior
President, Student Council

It was nighttime when Jesus was born. Not only because the sun had gone down - but because the world itself was in a state of spiritual and moral gloom. Men were driven by greed, and intolerance, not unlike our own day. People were driven by a lust for power and money. Words like compassion and integrity were virtually unknown. Human beings were bought and sold like animals and even the best of men could be bribed. Women were classified along with the animals and were treated as pawns for the gratification of men's lusts. Religion itself had become a device of the rich - for the exploitation of the poor. Men robbed and swindled and profiteered under the disguise of religion. In every area of life, it was night when Jesus came.

But it's often when things are darkest, that God reveals himself.

Surely it was night in Egypt when the Israelite people were released from their bondage to Pharoah. It was night when Samuel heard the voice of the Lord calling him to be a prophet to his people. It was at night that God gave David some of his most beautiful songs. It was at night when Paul and Silas prayed and sang their way out of the Phillipian jail. It was night when Christ was born at Bethlehem.

For many of you, it is nighttime as well. It is night perhaps because you mourn the loss of loved ones this Christmas season. It is night for others because of physical illness, or illness of friends or family.

It is night for others because of family problems or financial problems. And often when things seem dark and bleak Christmas seems almost disgusting. To enter into the joy of this season is just more than you

Christmas thoughts

This year the Courier asked a number of area residents of various ages and occupations to share with our readers their own special Christmas messages. Here, in the personal style of each one, are their thoughts about the holiday season.

Christmas to me is a happy time of the year. There is the memorial of the great gift of Jesus our Saviour who loved us and teaches us to love. We do not know the exact date of his birth but December 25th has been set aside to celebrate it. And that is good. Many people would not know of the great love of God if we didn't hold Christmas.

Christmas to me is a glorious time. First there was the star of Bethlehem to shine. Now there are shining lights, lilting music, tinkling bells. But the shine on the face of a child, the sparkle in the eye of the aged and the bright smile smile of others when you say "Merry Christmas" is the most heartwarming shine of this day and age.

Christmas is lovely and should be shared by all. So again I say, "Merry Christmas".

LOUISE POP GIBBARD
Staff member
Charlevoix County Commission on Aging

(Sung to the tune of "I'll Be Seeing You".)

I'll be seeing you
In all the old familiar places
That I first saw
In nineteen sixty-one.

In that town so fair
So far from city strife
The harbor scenes of life
The Christmas trees
The seagull cries.

I'll be seeing you
In every lovely summer's day
While I my music play
I'll always think of you that way
I'll see you in the noonday sun
And when the night is new
I'll be looking across my piano
And I'll be seeing you.

Merry Christmas and Happy New Year!

AL BREEZE
Grey Gables Inn entertainer

SAM SUPERNAW
Mayor of Charlevoix

With the downtown so attractively decorated this Christmas season, we are reminded once again how lucky we all are to be living in Charlevoix. It is during this time of year that the warmth and peacefulness of our community becomes especially evident. For many local people, of course, times have been better. But I am confident that prosperity and a better quality of life is within our grasp if we all work together.

To all the citizens of Charlevoix and to their families wherever they may be, I extend wishes from City Hall for a very merry Christmas and a happy New Year.

Christmas is real special because we celebrate Jesus's birthday. On Christmas Day at our house, first we look in our stockings and then open presents. One year I tricked my Mom and Dad; I told them I left my lunchbox at school and then wrapped it up and gave it to them as a present.

Another reason Christmas is so fun is that I don't have to go to school for two weeks.

I want to say Merry Christmas to everyone all over the world but especially to my Mom and Dad and little brother Gabe, to all my friends and relatives...and to Jesus!

It is the day of our Lord's birth. You receive gifts, but I also enjoy giving. I am happy that our country is not at war. I have nice people to live with but I hope that my sister will come and get me for the holidays so that I can spend Christmas with my nice family.

I enjoy working with my friends at the Bergmann Center and I really enjoy life. I especially liked helping make the pine cone wreaths, sorting the pine cones and putting the wreaths together.

Christmas is a pretty time of year.

LexaLite fire and recovery heads list

by DAVE KNIGHT

Not that the first half of 1981 was uneventful, but in terms of big headlines, things didn't really start to perk in Charlevoix until August 2.

It was on that Sunday morning at about 10:30 a.m. that a passing motorist noticed smoke coming out of the LexaLite International plant on Highway 31 north of Charlevoix. Responding to the call shortly after were both the City of Charlevoix and Charlevoix Township fire departments; the city trucks experiencing a brief delay as they waited for the bridge in downtown Charlevoix to close.

Three hours later, the manufacturing wing of LexaLite lay in total ruins and the future for 130 employees cast into uncertainty.

But the story did not end when the fire went out. Even as firemen battled to control the blaze, LexaLite president Josh Barnes gathered newsmen at the scene and pledged to rebuild, hopefully by Christmas.

With the help of the Charlevoix County Economic Development Corporation and a large dose of determination, that pledge became reality as LexaLite dedicated its new, enlarged facilities Saturday, December 19. The EDC provided a total of $3 million in low interest bonds to LexaLite which manufactures lighting refractors, reflectors lenses and globes. The plant has added 13,440 square feet and is in full production thus providing a happy finish to the year's biggest and most remarkable story.

On August 20, several Charlevoix

1981 in a nutshell.

This week, the Courier looks back at 1981 with a collection of stories that summarize, by category, the major events and trends of the year.

Pine River Place, a low income housing facility for senior citizens and the handicapped, was completed this year.

New development

Growth continued despite recession

by DAVE KNIGHT

Looking at all the major physical additions to the Charlevoix scene in 1981, it is hard to keep in mind that the area was supposedly suffering from one of the worst recessions ever. Improvement and expansion in both the public and private sectors were marked by the completion of several major projects and the announcement of plans for several more.

The Bay Queen dinner boat, a 114-foot launch with facilities for dining and dancing on two decks, arrived the first week of May and by mid-summer was a resounding success. Many claim its popularity singlehandedly carried the tourist industry for the area. The Beaver Island Boat Company, controlling interest of which was obtained last winter by publisher John McGoff, also brought the passenger launch Happy Dolphin up from South Haven to make quick trips to the Island from both Charlevoix and Petoskey. The Happy Dolphin, plagued by mechanical problems and sparse loads, was not nearly as successful as its dinner boat sister vessel.

Downtown Charlevoix got a new look in the spring when 41 Morraine Locust trees were planted on the sidewalks along Bridge St. The tree project was proposed and financially supported by the Charlevoix Merchants Association which gained approval from City Council only after several impassioned pleas before the council at their March 16 meeting.

For Charlevoix's business community, 1981 may be

Civic projects

Three big projects come to fruition

by DAVE KNIGHT

Community pride welled in 1981 as two major public building projects involving many years of planning and work were dedicated and another crucial public works project completed.

"This hospital is so nice now that the tourists will be wanting rooms in it," quipped comedian Pat Paulsen at the August 23 dedication ceremonies for Charlevoix Area Hospital's expanded facilities.

Included in the project were a new two-story wing and complete remodeling of out-patient service. The dedication brought to fruition a three-year community fund raising drive that generated $750,000 in pledges and donations.

Senior citizens and handicapped members of the community are just now getting settled at Pine River Place on W. Garfield which was dedicated on October 11.

The 62-unit low income housing complex offers several modern amenities for its residents including a spacious community room, barrier-free rooms and sophisticated fire prevention and emergency care measures. Under the guidance of the Charlevoix Housing Commission led by Chairman Ralph MacRae, ground was broken for the $3 million elderly housing project in August, 1980.

Funding for Pine River Place came from HUD after almost five years of bureaucratic red tape.

Charlevoix's municipal water reservoir was tripled in 1981 with the construction of a new water tower on the city golf course grounds. Bonds of up to $550,000 were approved by city voters in November 1980 but the project bids eventually came in for over $100,000 less than that figure.

The 148-foot tower, signed with Charlevoix's distinctive script logo, has a capacity of 300,000 gallons compared to the 100,000 gallon capacity of its 80-year old predecessor on the banks of the Pine River Channel.

Though the new tower is currently on line, at year's end it awaits a few finishing touches such as metering equipment and a aircraft warning light on top.

Thousands of visitors flocked to Charlevoix last summer to ride on the Bay Queen, the area's newest and most successful attraction.

Condominiums

Condo developers hear citizen voices

by DAVE KNIGHT

Organized community opposition to the concept of multiple family housing in residential neighborhoods made 1981 certainly not a year to remember for condominium developers in both the City and Township of Charlevoix.

Two major condominium-type projects were stymied in 1981 by vocal citizen groups opposed to problems they warned multiple family housing would create in their respective areas.

Plans were announced in January by Birmingham developer and part-time Charlevoix resident Jerome Bookstein for a 33-unit condominium

New mayor, new manager

Both City Hall and the County Building saw new faces replacing old ones in some major transitions over the year.

Marshaling strong support in the southside Second and Third Wards, grocer KENNETH A. STALEY overwhelmed four-term incumbent Mayor SAM SUPERNAW in the November 3 city election. Staley also topped both Supernaw and City Council member F. EARL MUMA in the August primary.

In two razor-close council races, JOSEPH MORRIS beat DAVID STRAWBRIDGE 238-210 in the Second Ward and incumbent ROBERT TIMMS beat F. IVAN WHITLEY 237-217 in the Third Ward.

The position of City Manager in Charlevoix, which has seen more than its share of transition in the few years of its existence, changed hands again this year. JAMES BRINKER, ended a two year tenure when he resigned from the position in August to join a local real estate firm.

The council's choice to replace Brinker was Steamboat Springs assistant city manager and Mayville, Mich. native ROBERT HUNT, 28, who was selected from over 60 applicants for the job and took over in October. City treasurer ROBERT MUMA filled in as acting

Economic trends

Both city and county take offensive in battle against unemployment

by DAVE KNIGHT

Despite economic woes wrought upon the Charlevoix area generally by outside factors - such as the ailing automobile and building industries - some major economic recovery efforts were initiated locally in 1981.

Charlevoix County had the dubious distinction of boasting the highest unemployment rate of any Michigan county at year's end; 17.3 percent. To blame were numerous shutdowns in the county of automotive-related industries as well as periodic layoffs in just about every other industrial sector.

One of the largest employers in Charlevoix-proper, Medusa Cement, layed off 79 of their 128 workers at the end of September and planned to shut down operations until March or

Historical Society plans meeting

The Charlevoix Historical Society will hold its regular monthly meeting at 8:00 p.m. on Tuesday, January 5 in the Harsha House headquarters at 103 State Street.

Mrs. Lillian Swinton will review Minute Book No. 2 of the Historical Society covering the period 1885-1893. This is one of three secretary's books which were found in the archives of the Charlevoix Public Library. They provide interesting insight into the intellectual as well as social activities of the Society from the time of its founding in 1879 until 1911.

All who are interested in the history of the Charlevoix area are invited to attend Society meetings and share in development of museum exhibits which portray the Charlevoix story.

New development

remembered as the year of the franchise. Two major nationwide franchise operations, McDonald's and 7-11, secured Bridge Street locations and plan to be open by next spring. Both faced strong community pressure to forego their standard interior-lit signs in deference to the aesthetic uniqueness of Charlevoix. Both have indicated that their new stores will be marked by wooden signs.

McDonald's, which is already enclosed, is located on the corner of Hwy. 31 South and Carpenter while 7-11 will be at the location of the former Muma Service Station at Bridge and Belvedere.

The city's southeast corner was the focal point of some major commercial development in 1981. Work on a 214-slip marina complex began last summer at the site of the former Foster Boat Company. Northwest Marine, Inc. plans to convert the rundown, but sturdy, three-story Foster building into a multi-use facility offering dining, shopping, marine services and possibly even a raquet club.

Anticipating the boating traffic to be attracted by the new marina, $350,000 in EDC development bonds and a tax abatement package from the city were successfully sought by developer Michael Barnard who started work just weeks ago on a party store-lounge-motel facility on the corner of Ferry Ave. and Stover Rd.

A new winter storage building, which will also house Gary Gleason's sailmaking business, was erected on Ferry Ave. just across from the Northwest project by Gleason and Craig Tallberg.

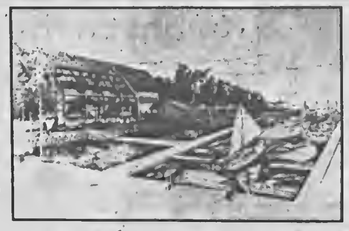
A squeeze on local motel units last summer, created principally by the Bay Queen, spurred another large-scale project on the south side.

Though still in the approval stage, indications are that a luxury motel-conference center will be constructed on the site of the Archway Motel.

Archway owner Craig Wise describes the proposed Atrium Motel and Conference Center as featuring 82 motel units, meeting rooms and a three-story, sunlit atrium with pool, tropical, landscaping and health club facilities.

If approval from City Council is gained at their January 4 meeting, Wise hopes to get going on the construction and have the doors open for the upcoming tourist season.

Despite the economic hardships suffered by many in the community, commercial development showed no signs of slowing in 1981. The year was, in fact, a boom year in that respect and provided at least one bright note of optimism amid the gloom.



An artist's sketch of the Northwest Marine project shows the boat slips and a remodeled Foster Boat Company building.

Accident claims life

Mary T. Richardson, 43, of 536 Mercer Blvd. in Charlevoix was killed Monday evening in a two-car collision just south of Charlevoix.

Mrs. Richardson was northbound on Highway 31 at about Bells Bay Rd. when her car went out of control and slid sideways into a southbound car driven by Mrs. Edward (Thelma) Ditlow, 47, also of Charlevoix.

The accident occurred at 5:18 p.m. Monday.

Members of the Charlevoix Ambulance Service used a "Jaws of Life" hydraulic extractor to remove Mrs. Richardson from her vehicle. She was pronounced dead at the scene by medical examiner Dr. Robert G. Martin. She was alone in the car.

Mrs. Ditlow, who was also alone, was transported to Charlevoix Area Hospital with unspecified injuries.

Funeral arrangements for Mrs. Richardson are being made by the Winchester Funeral Home. A detailed obituary will appear in next week's Courier.

The accident, which remains under investigation by the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Department, marks the seventh traffic fatality in the county for 1981.

city manager during the interim.

Tragedy struck on April 13 with the sudden death of City Attorney FRANK HOFFMAN, 31, in an accident at his home. Named by the City Council to replace Hoffman on May 4 was MICHAEL GIBBONS, a local Charlevoix attorney who had held the post of City Attorney two years previous before leaving it for health reasons.

90th District Court Judge DAVID FERSHEE unexpectedly stepped down from the post on May 31 after six years on the bench. He went into private law practice joining a Charlevoix firm.

Governor William Milliken later appointed Boyne City attorney HARVEY VARNUM as the new District judge on July 17.

Former District Judge ARTHUR REIBEL ran afoul of both Marion Township and the state Attorney Discipline Board this past year. Castle Farms Music Theatre, owned by Reibel, was the object of legal action taken by the Marion Township board which sought to halt summer rock concerts at the facility on grounds that it posed a threat to public safety. As the legal wrangling continued, all concerts came off as planned with considerably smaller crowds and less problems than in previous years.

On February 6, the 46th Circuit Hearing Panel of the Attorney Discipline Board recommended a one-year suspension of Reibel's license to practice law based on a 1979 incident involving handling of a client's bail money. After an appeal, the suspension was reduced to three months. Reibel still plans to pursue further appeals.

County Planner JOHN HESS resigned in February and was replaced on June 1 by LARRY SULLIVAN.

Beaver Island residents were saddened by the death on May 15 of JOSEPH L. "BUD" MCDONOUGH. McDonough was a lifelong Island resident and well known civic leader.

Eighteen year-old TAMI NOIROT was crowned the 1981 Venetian Queen on July 23 to kick off the 51st annual Venetian Festival in Charlevoix.

Tami Noirot, who reigned over the Venetian Festival as 1981 Venetian Queen, receives her crown from her predecessor, Tammy Helms.

Knight on the Town

Let's not look back

by Dave Knight

One of these days we are all going to wake up and it is not going to be 1981 anymore.

That realization alone may even override the headache traditionally associated with New Year's morning.

How many times over the past two weeks have we heard the remark, "Gee, it seems like it was just Halloween!" Or Labor Day. Or the Fourth.

If it's true that time flies when you're having fun, then everyone I've talked to lately must have had one heck of a lot of fun this past year.

In compiling the review of 1981 featured in the paper this week, I found it difficult to draw a common thread through the past twelve months. It was not a thoroughly good year; but it certainly was not all bad. It was a trying year for many but a productive year for many others.

For a community is located in statistically the most depressed county in the state, there was an amazingly strong atmosphere of resilience. While many other communities in similar straits are crying about federal budget cuts and people who don't buy American cars, Charlevoix has taken the positive attitude that crying won't help anything.

Wise planning will, though. Aggressive promotion will, too.

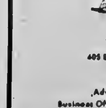
These are the foundations of an economic strategy developed on both the city and county levels this year. One drawback of sorts is that such a strategy offers no quick fixes. Nothing is going to be turned around in a year or even two; a lot of people are going to be out of work for a while so we'd better accept that reality for now.

But the strong will survive and is that not the American way? Incidentally, "strong" as used here does not mean rich. One need only talk with someone who remembers the Great Depression to know that it was time when families and friends stuck together like never before...and rarely since. The key to survival then, as now, is hard work and determination.

It is easy to complain about hard times and heaven knows we've all heard plenty of that over the past months. But the bottom line is that we here in Charlevoix are lucky folks.

If over 17 percent of the able workers in the county can't find a job, why are they sticking around? Because they want to live here and who can blame them.

While the sacrifices and hardships will pay off sooner or later, let's hope, as we peer toward a new year, that the payoff is sooner, not later.



Clockwise

Dogged by dilemma

by Bob Clock

WHAT DO YOU do with an old dog?

For many years I've known that the days of our rat terrier, Ginny, were numbered. In fact, more than a decade ago I was so sure she wouldn't last very long that I agreed to bring a second dog into the house, a Keeshond named Holly. I thought the kids wouldn't be so upset by Ginny's demise if we had another dog to take her place.

Nine years later, Holly was stricken with parvovirus and died with a week. The disease, unfortunately, missed Ginny and she is still with us, although the years — almost 18 of them — are beginning to take their toll.

Two years ago she lost her hearing, rendering her highly ineffective as a watchdog. Our first clue to her deafness was the fact that she started barking louder — just as an old person will talk louder when his hearing starts to go.

Almost a year ago, her pupils took on a smoky haze. Now cataracts are evident on both eyes, although she can still see objects as small as a cat or a squirrel when one is unfortunate enough to cross her path.

GINNY'S REAL problems began about two months ago when she apparently suffered a slight stroke. She was tottering from the living room to the kitchen through the downstairs hall when she suddenly tipped over on her side like a Model-T. She appeared very bewildered when I picked her up and put her back on her feet, but she was able to continue into the kitchen where she fell down a second time.

The stroke must have affected the right side of her brain, because her left legs seem to be partially paralyzed. She manages to drag herself around the house and still goes outside several times a day. But she uses her left legs more as props than as working members of her anatomy.

Oddly enough, the stroke didn't affect her appetite or her general health. She enjoys her daily ration of Cycle 4 dog food (the cycle for older dogs) and she doesn't appear to be in any pain. However, she spends at least 22 hours a day in the rocking chair next to the wood stove soaking up heat.

OF COURSE, you know and I know what should be done. Any veterinarian could take care of the problem with a nice lethal dose of whatever they use nowadays to put animals to sleep.

Even the kids know it's not fair to keep Ginny around, particularly when she slips and falls when she tries to jump into her chair.

Three weeks ago we voted on whether to put her to sleep. She was spared by a three-to-two vote with one abstention. (Judy refused to vote and the cats weren't allowed to.)

Last week we voted again and Ginny lost, five to one. Needless to say, Clockwise was the only holdout. Even nine-year-old Danny shows better sense than his father.

BUT DANNY doesn't remember how my cousin Jack foisted Ginny upon us — a scant handful of milk-warm puppy fur — on the day of my mother's funeral in 1964. Or how she used to sit in Katie's bouncer when Katie wasn't in it, pretending to be a real baby. Or how she wandered away when she was a puppy and we had to run an ad in the Holly Herald to get her back. The people who found her said she had been hit by a car. Or how she had her only litter of puppies in our barn in Holly. Or how Judy and I moved to Charlevoix in 1965 with a baby, a mama dog and a basket of puppies in a VW bug.

By everything that's holy, Ginny should have gone to her reward a dozen years ago when she already had lived a long and fruitful life.

Today she is an anachronism, a living antique, a superannuated heirloom that refuses to break down completely or wear out entirely.

What do you do with an old dog?

Dear Editor:

This is the time of year I would like to personally thank all people from whom I have received help this year - the helping hands that are needed when called upon or those who just volunteer their pocketbooks and efforts when the occasion arises.

There have been so many special needs this year with the economy as it is and many times no one to turn to. So many of these special needs are from people too proud to ask yet direly in need.

Without donations from - let me call them the Ron family and George family - Christmas and Thanksgiving would have been really scant. So many generous people opened up their hearts and pocketbooks to help little children and many people in Charlevoix never know of their generosity. They wish to remain unknown. So this is my way of saying thanks to those and others like them. May you all have a Merry Christmas and happy holiday season.

Opening an IRA at Family Federal Savings is like having

YOUR OWN PERSONAL TAX SHELTER.

Every wage earner can participate.
Thanks to new laws, starting January 1, 1982, every wage earner receiving compensation can participate in an IRA plan even if they currently participate in another pension or profit sharing plan where they work. And self-employed people may qualify for a Simplified Employee Pension (IRA) plan.

Good reasons to open an IRA.
- The money in your IRA plan is sheltered from current income taxes. The money is taxed as it is withdrawn after retirement — when you'll probably be in a lower tax bracket.
- IRA plans are a safe way to save for your retirement. Each account is insured to $100,000 by the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation.

WRC to offer free vocational courses

The Women's Resource Center, headquarted in Petoskey, has again received eligibility through the Education Amendments of 1976, Public Law 94-482, for a grant to provide tuition-free vocational courses to "special populations".

"Special populations" is a term used to denote persons who ordinarily might not be eligible for tuition assistance.

Displaced homemakers are the largest group within the special populations category. A "displaced homaker" is defined as a person who has solely been a homemaker, but who now, because of dissolution of marriage or loss of necessary income from family member or the government, must seek employment.

A second qualifying group for tuition assistance is a person who has been a homemaker, is currently working part-time, but wishes to train for full-time employment.

A third category is a single head of household not currently dependent on government assistance as the parent of a dependent child.

A fourth eligibility group is those persons who wish to go into a vocational field which is considered non-traditional for their particular sex. For the purpose of this program, a "non-traditional" job area is defined as one for which the institution has had less than 30 percent enrollment by persons of that sex in the previous academic year. Examples of this for North Central Michigan College could be a male wishing to go into the nursing program, or a female wishing to go into the small engines program.

It must be stressed that this tuition assistance program can be used to cover tuition costs only for up to 30 credit hours total. Liberal arts courses are not covered, nor are the costs for books and supplies.

The Women's Resource Center encourages individuals who think they fit any of the eligibility requirements to call the office at 347-0067, also to look into other forms of tuition assistance available at NCMC through the Office of Financial Aid. Those who may not fulfill the requirements mentioned for this particular program may be eligible for BEOG-PELL assistance.

Application deadline for the tuition assistance program for Special Populations is January 13, 1982. Grants will be given for the Winter Semester '82. Applications are available at the Women's Resource Center Office room 52, North Central Michigan College.

Avalanche Ski Classic in Boyne City set for Winter Festival weekend

The fifth annual Avalanche Ski Classic has been scheduled for 12 noon on Saturday, Jan. 30, 1982.

For the second year in a row, the cross-country ski race will be part of a community-wide Winter Festival. Other festival events include a Smeltania ice fishing contest, snowmobile events, sleigh rides, rocket and model airplane exhibitions and a "slide-glide-five" relay.

As in past years, the ski race is designed to appeal to both serious racers and recreational skiers. There are two separate races, a 10-kilometer (6.2 miles) event for racers and a five-kilometer (3.1 miles) race for recreational skiers.

Many people enter the race just for the fun of it, race officials point out. Every participant gets a souvenir race T-shirt and bib, and everyone is invited to join in a post race party. Last year, 162 people entered the race.

Olympic-style medals, 72 in all, will be awarded to the top three finishers in each of 24 racing divisions. Participants will be divided according to age, sex and length of race.

A grand prize for the fastest finisher in the 10-kilometer race is a vacation weekend for two in Boyne City, including lodging, food and entertainment.

Entry fee for the race remains the same for the fourth straight year. The fee is $6 from now through Jan. 22. From Jan. 23 through race day, Jan. 30, the fee will be $10.

Check-in on race day is from 8 to 10 a.m. at the Granary restaurant, 6 West Main St., Boyne City. The race is held at Avalanche Mountain Preserve, a 300-acre city park.

The race is sponsored by Natural Light Beer, the City of Boyne City, The Charlevoix County Press, Schafer's, First National Bank and the Granary.

For entry forms, write the Avalanche Ski Classic, Boyne City Hall, 319 N. Lake St., Boyne City, Michigan 49712.

JEWELRY FASHIONS FACTS FICTION
Fascinating Facts About Gold
By Colleen Titsworth
Colleen Titsworth Manager
We all know that gold has made men risk much and travel far and wide throughout the ages. Perhaps you knew that there were gold mines as far back as the ancient Egyptians. Perhaps you even knew that gold is mined today from above the arctic circle to the southern tip of Africa and in more than 56 countries around the world. But did you know that there are three different types of gold mines?
First, there is the placer mine. This is the easiest type of mine to extract gold from. Placer mines are alluvial deposits of sand and gravel with tiny little flakes of gold on up to large nuggets that can weigh many ounces or even pounds! Basically the mining procedure is to sift and separate the gold from the gravel. That's it. It is the same thing as panning for gold that the old prospectors did but on a bigger scale. A pan, a little water and, of course, some luck and pressure you're rich!
The second kind of mine is from lode deposits. This is gold that is embedded in hard rock sometimes deep in the ground. In fact gold mines of this type are among the deepest mines in the world, some stretching down about a mile or more. The processing of this gold is much more expensive and involved. First, of course, you have to find the gold and dig down to get it, then the ore is blasted out and carried to a mill where it is crushed and then treated through various complex chemical processes to extract the gold. Some mines have to process a ton of ore to get a single ounce or less of gold!
Finally, there is by product gold. This gold results from the mining of other metals such as copper, zinc or lead. These mines are basically copper or zinc or lead mines but when they process these major constituents, they also get small amounts of gold. The extraction of such gold, of course, is again a complicated physical and chemical process.
Through these three processes 42,363,000 troy ounces of gold were produced in 1980. This amounts of about 1,318 tons of gold! Despite this enormous production, the price shot up to a record $850 per ounce; so just imagine what will happen in the future as world reserves and production shrink and eventually disappear!

Economic trends

April. Though Medusa plans on a seasonal shutdown every year, this year's came months earlier and will be longer than any in recent years. A slumping construction industry was tabbed as the reason.

Matters were not helped by the August 2 Lexa-Lite fire which temporarily idled 128 employees. A whirlwind rebuilding program, however, now has the plant operating at full strength again.

In the face of these developments, governmental bodies on both the city and county levels went on the offensive this year to bolster the local economy.

In March, the county Board of Commissioners approved the formation of an Economic Development Corporation (EDC). The nine-member EDC board was assigned the task of identifying potential sites for industrial development and providing incentive through industrial bonds for industries considering relocation in the county.

After a false start in which an EDC bid to help Freedman Artcraft was canceled when the firm was bought by Harbor Light Industries, the EDC has been actively trying to locate industrial sites - without much success - and was instrumental in the LexaLite recovery this fall. Over $3.5 million in industrial bonds were issued by the EDC to LexaLite to rebuild and enlarge their plant.

The City of Charlevoix mounted its own recovery strategy in the form of a proposed new Master Plan this year. At the February 16 City Council meeting, Mayor Sam Superna broke a 3-3 tie to authorize the spending of $16,000 on a comprehensive master plan recommended strongly by the Planning Commission.

The Grand Blanc firm of Ronald Nino & Associates was contracted to do the plan which would include analysis of development sites, land use, topography, housing and other factors. The major objective of the plan, emphasized Planning Commission Chairman David Strawbridge, is to improve the employment situation without endangering tourism by seeking "light but labor intensive industry" for the city.

At year's end, the master plan is in a holding pattern following the awarding by the council to Nino of a federally funded Coastal Zone Management grant. It is hoped the two plans can be integrated thus reducing significantly the expense to the city.

For downtown retailers and the local tourism and hospitality industry, a successful summer was made possible by the introduction in May of dinner cruises on the Bay Queen. It has been estimated that over 30,000 meals were served over the summer and fall on the surprisingly popular attraction.

Its success, along with the positive, aggressive approaches employment, provide at least a bleak light at the end of what has been in 1981, a dark economic tunnel.

Rayders down Grayling

Charlevoix carried a big lead into halftime of the Michigan-Huron Shores conference schedule following a 74-54 shellacking of Grayling last Tuesday that gave the Rayders an unmatched 5-0 conference record, 6-0 overall.

In their last appearance of 1981, all twelve Charlevoix players on the varsity squad saw action and eleven of them scored.

Though Grayling stemmed the Rayder tide somewhat in the first quarter of Tuesday's game trailing only 22-16 at that point, Charlevoix broke away in the second building a 38-26 lead by halftime.

True to their season form so far, the best was yet to come in the second half and while the margin was about the same at 55-44 at the end of the third quarter, the Rayders came on strong on the final quarter outscoring Grayling 19-10 to finish with a 74-54 victory.

Ross Carey led the individual scoring for Charlevoix with 14 points while Jim Buchanan added 11, Gary Drury 10 and Mike Loper and Jeff Greene nine apiece.

Greene camped on the free throw line during the fourth quarter sinking nine of thirteen attempts in just that period to account for his total point output.

Grayling fouled 27 times in the game while Charlevoix committed only 17 personals.

In the junior varsity matchup, Charlevoix squeaked by Grayling 51-49 on the strength of Bill Tillen's 18 points and Tim LaBlance's 13.

The Rayders will next see action on Tuesday, January 5 when they travel around the bay to Harbor Springs for a non-conference game. They return to their conference schedule on Friday, January 8 when Rogers City visits.

Matmen can't match R.C.

The Charlevoix Rayder grapplers closed out their 1981 section of their schedule Tuesday night when they hosted a strong Rogers City team.

The Hurons won the meet by a score of 45-21.

Highlight of the meet was 167 pound Alan Bergmann's 3-2 decision over John Przybyla who received a tale recognition last season.

Other Rayder wins were by Tim Young (112) who won by a pin in :49 and Gregg Whitley who won by a pin in 1:21 in the 155 pound class. Jim Herriman (98) won by forfeit.

In the other classes, Pat Curtis lost by an 11-7 decision; Jim Kenney (119) lost by a pin in 1:37; Mike Steele (126) by a 5-4 decision; Chuck Klooster (132) by a pin in 1:31; Rick Gallant (138) by a 9-2 decision; Scott Mervyn by a pin in 3:37 and Shannon Reynolds (194) by a pin in :30.

There were no matches in the 145 and heavyweight divisions.

The Rayders will return to the mats Jan. 7 when the team travels to Grayling which has the strongest team in the Michigan-Huron Shores Conference.

Middle School teams lose

The Charlevoix Middle School boys basketball teams opened their season Monday night with both the Seventh and eight grade squads falling victim to strong Cheboygan teams.

The seventh grade team, coached by Hank Wagner, dropped its game by a 32-26 score while the eighth grade, coached by Barry Pierce, lost by a score of 37-31.

The Cheboygan seventh grader's jumped to a 16-4 first period lead and were ahead 24-11 at halftime and 24-20 going into the final period before taking the game by a 32-26 margin.

Ty Wagner had 10 points for Charlevoix. Bob Chasse had eight for Cheboygan.

Stu Hancock poured in 24 of Cheboygan's 37 points as the Cheboygan eighth graders headed the young Rayders 8-4 at the quarter and 18-14 at halftime before Charlevoix went ahead by a slim 26-25 margin. At the three-quarter mark the visitors, however, outscored Charlevoix 12-3 in the final eight minutes for the win.

Jodi Putman had 10 points for Charlevoix.

Charlevoix will travel to Harbor Springs Jan. 8 to continue their schedule.

Frosh come back to beat Kalkaska

After trailing th Kalkaska freshmen for three periods Monday night, the Charlevoix freshmen, coached by Chuck Wright, outscored their opponents 20-11 to pull the win out despite a game marked by 39 turnovers.

Charlevoix, playing at Kalkaska, trailed 8-4 and 22-18 at the quarters before knotting the score 31-all at the three-quarter mark. In the final period the young Rayders took over and managed to keep their record at 4-0.

Thad Morgan and Jim Martin with 13 points each led the scoring with Brent Cole and Doug Sloan adding 10 points each.

For Kalkaska Dan Andrews had 15; Scott Lucca, 12 and Steve Wilson 11 each.

The team will return to the courts Jan. 8 when they host Sault Ste. Marie.

COUNCIL MINUTES
December 21, 1981
8:00 P.M.

The Common Council of the City of Charlevoix met on the above date and time with Mayor Supernaw presiding.
Present: Councilmembers Block, Porter, Timms, Roloff and Wood.
Absent: Councilman Muma.
The Minutes of the December 14, 1981 special Council meeting and the December 7, 1981 regular Council meeting were approved as presented in writing and as recorded in the Council Minutes Book.
Council discussed renewal of the City's Airport Use Agreement with Welka Aviation. The City Manager recommended that the Agreement be renewed for one year without any amendments per se but with certain conditions set down as a stipulation of renewal. Mr. Welka discussed the proposed conditions of renewal with the Council and asked to go on record as being opposed to Joe McPhillips being allowed to assign his Airport Manager's salary to McPhillips' Flying Service as Mr. Welka feels the City, by allowing the assignment, is subsidizing his competitor. The City Manager pointed out that the Airport Manager's contract gives Mr. McPhillips the right to assign his salary if he so desires.
Moved by Councilman Timms and supported by Councilman Block that the City's Airport Use Agreement with Welka Aviation be renewed for a period of one year ending December 15, 1982, with the following conditions:
1. Fees shall remain the same.
2. Welka shall immediately provide proof of liability insurance for the dispensing of gas by Welka Aviation, for their own use. No proof of product liability (gas dispensing) insurance covering the General Public shall be required until such time as Welka commences with the retail sale of gasoline.
3. Welka be instructed to inform all customers of their obligation to purchase a parking permit for all overnight parking.
4. Welka be instructed to provide a monthly log of all non-commercial flight operations to the Airport Manager. Such log shall include date, time, aircraft number, number of occupants, and trip destination.
5. Section 19 of the Agreement shall be interpreted to mean that all future maintenance of, modifications to, installation of, and/or replacement of, signs shall conform to Chapter 98 of the City Code.
Motion was adopted by the following yea and nay vote.
Yeas: Councilmembers Block, Porter, Timms, Roloff, and Wood.
Nays: None.
Absent: Councilman Muma.
Moved by Councilman Porter and supported by Councilman Timms to accept the proposal submitted by the firm of Ron Nino Associates for consulting services in conjunction with the waterfront areas (Coastal Zone) management and design project.
Motion was adopted by the following yea and nay vote.
Yeas: Councilmembers Block, Porter, Timms and Wood.
Nays: Councilwoman Roloff.
Absent: Councilman Muma.
Moved by Councilman Wood and supported by Councilman Block to renew the taxi cab license for Oscar W. Ward of the Arcade Cab Service for 1982.
Motion was adopted by the following yea and nay vote.
Yeas: Councilmembers Block, Porter, Timms, Roloff, and Wood.
Nays: None.
Absent: Councilman Muma.
Council authorized the City to contract Granger Engineering to provide a sewage flow analysis at a cost of approximately $200.00 to determine if City sewer capacity in the area of the proposed Atrium Motel and Conference Center and the proposed Charlevoix Township sewer project has sufficient capacity to serve these additions to the system.

Condominiums

Citizen groups make wishes heard complex at 711 Park Ave.

Bookstein proposed to incorporate the distinctive Earl Young-designed home now on the property, and owned by Olive Moyer, into a plan featuring 33 units originally and 15 units in an alternative arrangement.
Saying the condominiums were "the only feasible use" of the rolling, lakefront property across the street from Charlevoix Area Hospital, Bookstein sought to rezone the lot from R-1, single family residential, to R-4, multiple family residential.
After having been unsuccessful at getting a recommendation to rezone at a January 6 Charlevoix Township zoning board meeting and a January 8 County Planning Commission meeting, Bookstein's attorney Thomas Pointner withdrew the request at a January 12 township board meeting at which several township residents voiced opposition. Increased traffic congestion near the hospital and questionable economic benefits the project would bring to the area were among citizen concerns.
The project surfaced again in March with the developers seeking to rezone to Planned Unit Development (PUD) instead of R-4. They were again rebuffed by a 5-0 vote of the township. Bookstein indicated at the time that he would pursue an alternative plan to build up to nine or ten single family homes on the property but no construction has taken place to date and a "for sale" sign still stands in front of the Moyer home.
On the north side, Lodge owner Jack Uhrick sought in July to rezone the vacant property on Dixon Ave. just to the east of the Lodge from R-1 to R-4 to accomodate six townhouse units.
As a result, a group of about 45 residents of the neighborhood organized the Dixon Avenue Property Owners Association and circulated petitions opposing the proposal.
At the heart of the protest was opposition by neighbors to the idea of multiple family dwelling in what they maintained was a single family residential area.
After failing to get a favorable recommendation from the City Planning Commission, Uhrick's request for a rezoning was turned down by the City Council at their August 17 meeting which was held before a sizeable crowd of concerned citizens.
The property remains vacant and also still has a "for sale" sign.
With high interest rates and a generally depressed housing industry already plaguing multiple family housing developers in Charlevoix this year, the obstacle of citizen opposition made 1981 the year of the non-condo.

County residents received a rude awakening of sorts from the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Department. At 5 a.m. on that morning, a task force comprised of forty deputies and local police, using a school bus in some areas, began the task of rounding up 59 people suspected of selling either marijuana, LSD or cocaine to an undercover officer during a seven-month investigation.

When it was over, 86 warrants had been issued in what was by far the county's largest drug bust ever.

By late November, at least 34 of the defendants in the bust had been sentenced with most receiving fines of $200 to $250 and many required to provide a set number of hours of community service. Circuit Court Judge Martin Breighner, who handed down the sentences, raised the ire of several county residents by earmarking the fine money for the state legal library. To date, Charlevoix County has not recouped any of the over $7,000 spent to buy the drugs during the investigation.

Following the discovery earlier this year of the chemical triehloroethylene (TCE) in the Petoskey water supply, Health Department officials conducted similar tests in Charlevoix. On October 21, the announcement was made that 14-31 parts per billion of the suspected carginogen were indeed found in tests of the Charlevoix municipal water.

An industrial degreasing agent, TCE has been identified in the water supplies of several Michigan communities. The levels found so far in Charlevoix, aceording to authoritative sources, are not harmful though further testing indicated that the levels may vary aecording to the percent of groundwater comprising the city water supply. City Manager Robert Hunt has advised the City Council to begin a search for a new water supply.

The mundane but important topics of signs and parking dominated council meetings much of 1981. By year's end, the council had enacted a new comprehensive sign ordinance featuring stricter controls on size and nature of signs and banning all together the interior-lit neon sign.

They also went along with a controversial Planning Commission proposal to do away with parking requirement exemptions for the central business district and create a $2,000 per space fee-in-lieu-of-parking for any expanded use of a downtown business not able to provide the requlred spaces.

County commissioners received a jolt in late November when the five-member Apportionment Commission made their recommendation, based on the 1980 census figures, to reduce the board of commissioners from 15 to six. Despite strong criticism by the commissioners, the Apportionment Commission maintained that a six-member board would be the only way to satisfy the state's requirements for equal representation of county residents.

Jackie Meier promotes success

by ANNE KELLY

Jackie Meier, 4th grade teacher at Charlevoix Elementary, believes that the relaxed, yet structured program at her school is one of the reasons students do so well.

"The kids work at their own level and feel successful," she evaluated the homogeneous grouping system. "I think this is the reason that we have so few discipline problems."

Homogeneous grouping is grouping according to the children's ability. Its purpose is to relieve frustration and to challange students to the fullest of their capabilities.

Jackie's own particular method of grading classroom work accounts for another boost for the children's self-esteem. It's a positive approach to grading and self-correction. Her students are always able to receive an "A" on their papers. If the paper has no mistakes, the student receives an "A+" on their papers. According to the number of errors he may have made he receives an "A-?". He need only correct his mistakes to receive the "A". Of course, if he fails to make the corrections, or does not complete the assignment in a reasonable length of time, his "grade" may be adjusted accordingly.

The elementary school does not utilize a letter grade system, but rather awards students evaluations on a scale of "S" to "U" with "N" (needs improvement) in between. The children progress along a consistent skill development series which is built upon year after year.

Jackie enjoys the comraderie of her fellow teachers as they talk over ideas and share teaching techniques. "We all get along so well," she remarked. "Either the kids are getting better and better or I'm enjoying teaching more and more each year.

Jackie has been with the Elementary school for 18 years. She has remained on the 4th and 5th grade level for nearly all that time.

"When I first started teaching," Jackie recalls, "it was at the elementary school in the building which is now the middle school. I was a teacher's helper in Kindergarten and sometimes in the 2nd grade. I was not yet a certified teacher." She had graduated from Ursuline College in Cleveland, Ohio, with a B.A. in Liberal Arts with a major in English.

Next, she retired from teaching to raise her family. Later, she received her teaching certificate from M.S.U., taking most education courses in Petoskey and student teaching in Traverse City. In 1964, Jackie resumed her teaching career.

"The kids are happy at our school, and so am I," Jackie concluded. Perhaps that's the best tribute a teacher could give her profession.
